During debate over the matter of making public briefs filed by manufacturers with the finance sub-committees, Senator Townsend of Michigan engaged in a colloquy with Senator Simmons relative to the alleged threats of manufacturers to reduce wages and the counter intention of the administration through the bureau of corporations to investigate concerns which might reduce wages following tariff reductions.

Exercise Is "Scarcely Believed."

"Is the senator aware," asked Senator Townsend, "of any conditions existing which will make possible this proposed coercion on the part of the government as indicated by the secretary of commerce?"

"Remarks of the secretary relating to investigations of manufacturers," replied Senator Simmons, "have grown out of threats constantly made by the protected interests that they would reduce wages unless they are permitted to retain the excessive tariff rates."

"Can the senator give any specific cases where threats have been made?" Senator Townsend continued.

"I can refer the senator to the hearings before the ways and means committee, where statements were repeatedly made by representatives that if duties were reduced they would be forced to, and would, cut wages. I should also refer him to the briefs filed with the finance committee, which are full of such statements."

"Does the senator construe as a threat the statement of a manufacturer that certain changes would force him to cut expenses?" asked the Michigan senator.

"The senator may construe it as he sees fit," Senator Simmons continued.

"Call it a threat or a statement, but the secretary of commerce had evidence to these constant warnings by representatives of the protected industries that they would not suffer in their own pockets from tariff reductions, but would shoulder the loss upon their employes."

Baggage Agents in Session.

Colorado Springs, Colo., May 21.—The thirty-second annual convention of the American Association of General Baggage Agents opened here today with representatives present from all parts of the United States and Canada. Many important subjects are on the program for discussion. The most important business will probably be revision of the uniform fundamental contract now in use between the railroads of the interstate commerce commission.

Abdication of King Daniel.

Geneva, Switzerland, May 23.—The Servian government has sent a telegraphic message to the Servian consul at Petrovitch, stating that the reports of the impending abdication of King Peter are without foundation.

Egg Price to Be Free.

Chicago, May 21.—The "egg committee" has been permanently abolished as a feature of the party's organization, and that grave danger of another assembly opened the day in a turmoil resulting from the reproduction of the Lorimer-Roger Sullivan factory charging that Dr. J. T. Stone's election as moderator of that body was brought about through "a deep laid political scheme." No less excitement prevailed during the afternoon session.

Twenty-five Speeders Caught.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 21.—Twenty-five speeders were arrested and locked up in motorcyclists—caught by Chief of Police John T. Janssen's new motorcycle patrolman squad, appeared in district courts and paid fines averaging $400. Georgs Gintz, who made the speed record of 75 miles an hour on the West Side, told Judge Page that the wind was so strong that he could not stop. Herbert Bisbiesz, who with a girl companion made 30 miles an hour in the downtown section, was ordered to sell his motorcycle.

CEMETERY OF SACRED IBISES

Birds Embalmed in Jars Found in Ancient Egyptian Ruins by Explorers.

Cairo.—During the season's work of the Egypt exploration fund at Abydos, the explorers discovered a cemetery of sacred ibises a quarter of a mile from the edge of cultivation and including a human cemetery, both dating from the Roman occupation of Egypt, about 200 A. D.

The cemetery contained about a hundred large earthenware jars, made in most cases of unbaked mud, the mouths of which were closed with large bricks of the same material. The jars themselves were either cylindrical or barrel shaped, the larger once being built in two or three sections. Each jar contained on an average twenty-five birds. Most of them had been preserved with some bituminous material and then wrapped in several layers of linen bandages, the outer covering being in many cases quite a work of art, accomplished by the skilful use of narrow strips of black and brown lines arranged in a most elaborate and varying series of patterns, chiefly geometrical in design.

Many of the most carefully bound examples were found to contain but a completed bird, but only a bunch of feathers; others again consisted of a few bones and feathers mixed, and in one case a single egg. The careful preservation of not only complete birds, but of eggs, bones, and even odd feathers is a striking proof for supposing that the worship of Thoth and the veneration for the bird, which was sacred to him, still had a strong hold upon the minds and imagination of the people of Egypt, even as late as the Roman period.

POLICEMAN DRESSED AS GIRL

Has Trouble in Adjusting Finery, but Disguises Desired Flirting Adorer.

London.—Dressed as a women, a policeman successfully decoyed John Butler, a local painter, that he did not know until after his arrest that he had been talking with an officer. At Workingham police court recently Butler was sentenced to a month's hard labor for sending objectionable letters to Miss Bertholomew of Workingham.

These letters, it was stated in court, asked Miss Bartholomew to meet him outside her home. She did not read the letters, but showed them to some and her father informing the police. To thwart the writer and arrest him Superintendent Goddard conceived the idea of dressing Sellwood in clothes belonging to Miss Bartholomew. So disguised, Sellers kept the appointment made for Miss Bartholomew.

Sellwood told in an interview how he donned the girl's dressed at Miss Bartholomew's house. It wore a tight-fitting light brown serge skirt, a white blouse, a dark brown fur collar veil, feather boa and a long gray ulster. Dressing was not an easy matter on an easy enough, but I had a little trouble with the blouse.

"Walking down the drive, I found myself tripping through my boa due to the regulation 84inch stride. I soon came down to eighteen inches. When Butler standing near the gate and I walked up to him. Then I thought of my voice. In order to disguise it, I pitched it as near to the falsetto as could and said, 'Good evening.' He was delighted to see me, called me 'dearest' and suggested a walk, which he took. He never dreamed identity until he was arrested later."

SAYS AMERICA IS BARBARIC

Naplerkowska, the Vaudeville Dancer, Peeved Because New York Objected to Her Nudity.

Paris — Naplerkowska, the Paris dancer, who has just returned from America, has made some plain remarks on the subject of nudity.

"Really, I have not brought away a single photograph of myself in the United States," she says. "What a narrow minded people! Why should there be any importance in any beautiful impression? I cannot understand—how any one can possibly admire them or their costumes, or their towns without any monuments to speak of, or museums.

"They are hardly civilised. They locate you in the street with spectating.' Any charming or stylish object is stared at. Nothing escapes them. comes from Europe. They have not the slightest idea of elegance of any sort. In fact, I am completely disillusioned about them."

La Naplerkowska complains bitterly of her prosecution on a charge of indecency, saying that the dances for which she was marched off to the courts like any ordinary criminal in New York had previously been given by her in several other cities without the slightest objection.

The judge who had the intelligence to hear her released, she says, was the only exception which proves the rule of general barbarism in the United States.

PERRY'S FLAGSHIP TO SAIL AGAIN ON LAKE ERIE

THE famous ship Niagara, the vessel which turned defeat into victory for Oliver Hazard Perry in the battle of Lake Erie on September 13, 1813, will sail again this summer in the waters where she conquered a British fleet. The raising of the Niagara is the most striking feature of the impending celebration of Perry's victory which stayed the fortunes of the United States a hundred years ago.

This engineering feat seems to have no secret possibilities, and in sentimental and patriotic interest is the most notable phase of the coming centennial celebration. To attempt to lift the hulk from the mud of Erie harbor was a daring idea from the start. To make the project fact required courage and perseverance of a high order. Many were the scoffers. It was said, to the very last, that the contractor had hold of an old canal boat, and not till the gunports of the Niagara appeared above the surface of the lake did the great crowds ashore concede that Perry's ship was actually being raised.

When the gunports came in sight a throng of half frozen curiosseekers was held back with difficulty. Once it become evident that the battered hulk was actually that of the Niagara the scoffers were eager to rush upon the wreck and tear her to pieces for souvenirs. Blind ing scow and cracking ice seemed no deterrent to their frenzy.

Within a few days the battered craft had been raised higher above the water and propelled to the shore on pontoons. She is soon to be hauled to a shipbuilding yard near by, where she will be partly rebuilt and put into shape for her last splendid cruise on Lake Erie this summer.

On this cruise the Niagara will visit all the principal ports of the great lakes, decked with flags and fore-colored bunting, and wallowing splendidly as befits a ship of her size, contour and noble achievement. She is 110 feet long, has a 30-foot beam and is about 10 feet deep. There is nothing of the clipper ship about her, but there is a stanchness that kept her steady while she emptied broadsides at a whole English fleet. In her prime, at the time of the decisive battle of Lake Erie, she was a brig of the old-fashioned sort, with an enormous spread of sail for those days. She had single topgallantsails, and, what was more characteristic of the time, sleight topsails. Thus the number of her sails was not appreciably great, but her actual spread of canvas was very large for her day. Her rigging was all of the old style sort. Her main, fore and mizzen tops were really fenced in for boarders and she had a spanker to old her in maneuvering more than her natural square rig would.

Capt. W. L. Merrison of the United States training ship Wolverine, who is an official of the Perry centennial administration and authority on historical facts relating to the Niagara, has made the prediction that in the vessel's hold will be discovered many old hatchets and revolvers, and to a short time the world will know if he is right.

Raising the Niagara was the hardest kind of a job. It was a big feather in the cap of the local contractor, who succeeded in lifting the hulk from the mud of the lake bottom, where she had lain for a hundred years. The work had to be done in winter in order to use spring to get the vessel in shape. Winter on the great lakes is such as to make a naturally delicate job of this sort well nigh impossible.

The lackadaisic board of the centennial celebration had official charge of the work. To raise the hulk meant that there months of delay. The original contract called for the task to be done in thirty days, but bad weather knocked this schedule skyhigh.

It was planned at first to sink pontoons alongside the Niagara and pump them out, lifting by the ship to the surface with them. Had the weather permitted this the salvage of the hulk would have been accomplished in contract time. Storms, however, thwarted the undertaking almost every day and the contractor feared the old sink his pontoons lest he lose them. Therefore four pontoons were anchored on either side of where the ship would lie when raised vertically to the lake surface. Other pontoons were anchored over her bow and stern. Chains were made fast to the wreck by divers and she was simply pulled up to the water's edge.

She piled up six feet high about the pontoons, workmen were in constant danger of losing their lives in the black and icy water. Several fell into stricken by the falling ice. They were rescued. The Niagara had to be raised through twenty feet of water.

And now for something about the Niagara's historic day.

The Niagara and Commodore Perry's flagship, the Lawrence, were the only two vessels in the American fleet of six ships that, even in 1813, could have been called men-of-war. They were 500 tons burden each, and each carried twenty guns. It was almost as much of a feat for Oliver Hazard Perry to build the vessels as to win the battle of Lake Erie. The commodore had been in the American navy for some time, and in 1811 as a lieutenant in command of the schooner Revenge he ran the vessel ashore at Watch Hill, R. I., and wrecked it in a storm. He was tried by court martial for this, but acquitted.

He failed to get a command when the War of 1812 started but he applied to Commodore Chauncey and was ordered to report at Lake Erie.

On March 27, 1813, he arrived at Lake Erie and found a force of fifty shipwrights. The squadron had to be built from the forests near by. A fleet of nine vessels was built by him and his men. A regiment of Pennsylvania militia covered the shipbuilders while they were at work.

The battle against a superior British squadron lasted all day, and the Lawrence was dismasted, so that Perry had to row through a hail of shot to the Niagara, where he hoisted the flag again. At 3 o'clock he was able to send his famous dispatch: "We have met the enemy and they are ours."

Commodore Perry was then twenty-seven years old.

Perry was a Rhode Islander by birth. On the of a naval officer and the daughter of an Irishwoman of unusual attainments, he had a very careful early training, so that after Lake Erie came who knew the family spoke of it as "Mrs. Perry's victory." Young Oliver Hazard Perry was fond of Plutarch's Lives, Shakespeare and Addison. He was a pupil of Count Rochambeau. At fourteen he was commissioned a midshipman.

When the war with England began there was probably no better ordenance officer in the American navy, and to the training of his crews he gave unwavering in personal attention to details. By assembling his gunboats occasionally he gained actual knowledge of the evolutions of a fleet. He also practiced sham battles, which taught him much.

Within twenty-four hours after receipt of Commodore Chauncey's order to go to Lake Erie he had sent off a detachment of fifty men, and five days later he set out himself with his younger brother, Alexander. Traveling chiefly in sleighs he reached Erie on March 27. There he found Noah Brown, shipwright, and Sailing Master Dobbins awaiting fifty harpenters from Philadelphia. The carpenters were more than five weeks making the wintry journey.

The keels of the two gun brigs and three smacksnots had already been laid. Incredible toil in the wilderness enabled Perry to collect nine vessels of 54 guns with 54 guns capable of throwing a broadside of 936 pounds of metal, of which 288 pounds could be fired at long range. Puny figures these seem in this day of dreadnaughts, but in 1813 they were respectable if not exactly impressive.

The Lawrence and the Niagara, which were the two twenty gun ships, carried two long twelve pounders and eighteen thirty-two pounder carronades. The long range guns were the chief dependents of the Americans. To make his carronades fire effective Perry rolled on grape and canister shot and favorite American ammunition, langrage, which was made out of scraps of iron and other metal.

Perry's force of men consisted of about 205 landsmen and sailors, many of whom had never seen salt water. On the British side Captain Barclay had a force of 1,460 men, manned by nearly 500 men, but he had sixty-three cannon. Barclay was one of Nelson's veterans.

As the fleets approached each other at about 11 o'clock the bugle sounded from the flagship. The men of the whole British line gave three cheers and the long guns of the Detroit opened on the Lawrence at a distance of a mile and a half. By noon the battle began in earnest in the form of a duel, the heaviest vessel in each fleet confronting the other, Barclay had at first a manifest advantage. The gunners of the Lawrence, depending too much on their carronades, fired too fast, and overshooting their stumpy guns were able only to pit and dent the sides of the Detroit. So the Lawrence was reduced to a hulk by a steady British fire. After two hours only one gun was left mounted, the cockpit was crowded with wounded and only eighteen unharmed men, including commander and surgeon, were left on board.

The Niagara for some reason had remained in the rear. The smaller American vessels seemed unable to do anything to prevent a British victory.

With the audacity of genius Perry called four sailors to man the boats, and with his brother Alexander, the flag and the Lawrence wrapped round his arm, he left the ship. At first he was shielded by the battle smoke. Then he was rowed through the enemy's fire for fifteen minutes, at last reaching the Niagara unharmed. The breeze now freshened, speeding the Niagara and the American schooners into action. The Queen Charlotte of the British fleet was disabled while getting into position for a broadside. She fell foul of the Detroit. The American schooners took raking positions. The full battery of the Niagara, joining in the steady and rapid fire, swept the British decks. Many officers fell in the tops acting as marines picked off every enemy visible. At 3 o'clock the British flag was hauled down. It was the first time in Britain's history that she had lost a whole squadron. Then it was that on the deck of the Niagara Perry dictated to the secretary of the navy the brief account of his victory and shortly afterward sent to Gen. William H. Harrison the line: "We have met the enemy and they are ours."

Congress voted Perry thanks, a medal and the rank of captain. The city of Boston presented him with a set of silver, and other cities voted him thanks. He assisted in the defense of Baltimore, and in the squadron that was sent to the Mediterranean in 1815 he commended the Frigate Java. In June, 1819, while in command of the John Adams and other United States vessels in the West Indies, he contracted yellow fever in Ore Orinoco and died.

The United States has appropriated $250,000 for a Perry memorial to be erected at Put-in-Bay on Bass Island. The great shaft will stand in the midst of a park. Individual states have brought the total up to $700,000. Pennsylvania, $50,000; Ohio, $83,000; Pennsylvania, $75,000; Wisconsin, $20,000. Other states that interested themselves were Michigan, Illinois, Rhode Island, Kentucky and Minnesota.

About a year ago the national commissioners of fine arts accepted a design for the memorial submitted by J. H. Freedlander of N. Y. Seymour, Jr. The design provides for a plaza 1,000 feet long and about 200 feet deep. On the plaza will be a Doric column 320 feet high. The island on which the column will rise is one of a group at the western end of Lake Erie.

The fourteen acres have been acquired to provide a reservation around the memorial. The Doric column will serve as a lighthouse. Other features are a museum, a statue typifying peace flanked by a colonnade. In the museum will be made exchange for sacred paintings descriptive of historical events connected with the battle of Lake Erie.

The plan calls for a crypt under the shaft in which will be placed the bodies of American and British sailors who perished in the battle and who were hurled on the island. The sum of $100,000 has been set aside for harmonizing the landscape with the general scene.

The members of the commission having charge of the Perry centennial celebration will try to secure a brief suspension of that convention between the United States and Canada by which warships may not enter the Great Lakes. The idea is to have British and American battleships at the ceremony of dedicating the column to Perry's victory and possibly a warship or two of Canada's new navy.

The national commission of fine arts which selected the design for the Perry memorial consists of Daniel H. Burnham, chairman; Daniel C. French, Thomas Hastings, Frederick Law Olmsted, Charles Moore, Herbert Adams and Francis D. Millet. They were unanimous in their choice of design. Commissioner Eugene H. Worthington, Gen. Nelson A. Miles and Col. Henry Watterson are on the interstate board in charge of the celebration.

PRINCES TO PAY TAX

Germany Has Overturned Precedents to Maintain Army.

Rulers of the Different States Realists Between Patriotism and Thrift, but Will Have to Make a Show of Generous Giving.

Berlin.—Two and twenty sovereign German princes are hesitating between the rival virtues of patriotism and thrift. They cannot decide whether it is sweeter to pay the new war tax, or to put their savings into some brewery stocks. The trouble is that this is the first time the twenty-two kings, grand dukes, dukes and princes have ever been asked to pay a pretty stiff tax on their accumulations.

Now, in a fit of patriotism begotten of the 1813 centenary, Wilhelm II. has forwarded his ultimatum; he is ready to be taxed and the other one for an education increase, or even for old age pensions.

The sovereigns feel all the more doubtful because each complains of suffering from chronic poverty. Kaiser Wilhelm, it seems, feels this most. He has the biggest income, but he is only the fifth richest person in Prussia. Richer than him are Frau Bertha Krupp, who possesses $71,000,000; Prince Heinrich von Donnersmarck, who has $53,000,000; Baron von Goldschmidt-Rothschild of Frankfurt with $42,000,000, and the Duke of Ujest with $37,000,000. After these comes Kaiser Wilhelm with a miserable $32,000,000. Kaiser Wilhelm's brother, Heinrich von Prussia, country houses, castles and shooting horses at $10,000,000, and his land estate in Berlin at $4,000,000. That accounts for $52,000,000 out of the $75,000,000. Wilhelm II. also has land in Westphalia and the Rhine province of unknown value.

No other sovereign or prince will pay anything like Kaiser Wilhelm. The crown prince is worth $21,000,000. Kaiser Wilhelm's brother, Henry, has estates which are worth $2,000,000. Altogether, the kaiser and his close relatives are worth $51,500,000. The utmost they will pay in tax is $750,000.

"Is it worth while," ask the hard-up sovereigns, "for the sake of these beggarly sums, to rob us of our privileges and treat us as if we were ordinary men?" They act themselves out in decent secrecy.

SHOW LEADS TO REVELATION

Boy Who Had Kept Playmate's Death a Secret Suddenly Makes Declaration Which Clears Mystery.

Harrison, N. J.—A moving picture show indirectly revealed the drowning of Alfred Siegel recently the death by drowning of her 4-year-old son, Harry. The boy had been playing during the afternoon with William Siegel, 6 years old, a yearold schoolmate. William was afraid to say anything about the drowning. While he was with his mother at a moving picture show a film showing boys trying to rescue a drowning mate was thrown on the screen. William suddenly exclaimed:

"That's just the way Harry Siegel died this afternoon."

Mrs. Siegel managed William by the arm, bolted out of the theater and hurried to Mrs. Siegel's home, where William tearfully recited the story of how Harry had fallen into the Passaic river while playing with him on a sand pile, and how he had failed to come up. Mrs. Siegel became hysterical.

Wilmington, Del.—Rodney Warren, a caddie, who heard players at the Wilmington country club discussing "highballs," gained the idea that the drink was concocted in some way with golf balls. RATIONS FOR 7 $1.01 A DAY

Chicago Charities Start a Campaign to Show Wives How to Buy.

Chicago.—Menus have been prepared by the visiting housekeepers of the United Charities showing how families of seven can obtain a day's rations for $1.01.

Commenting on the situation, the finance committee of the organization has issued the following statement:

"Here is a problem of which every man and woman in Chicago should take cognizance. One in every seven of the population has come in some way to the attention of social service agencies in one year. Only one in every 300 give support to the United Charities, yet that organization be friended one in every seven persons in the city in 1912.

"The United Charities can continue work on its present basis only two weeks longer, unless funds are forthcoming immediately. Contributions of any size are welcomed. If one in every seven persons of the entire population is in need, then no organization needs adequate support in order to reach those more than the United Charities. Its facilities in the way are trained visitors to serve the distressed need to be augmented at this acute time, not reduced."

The visiting housekeepers of the society have been initiating housewives in practical circumstances into the science of judicious buying. Accounts kept by tenement housewives—even those with regularity for economy—often show bad buying. Three mistakes common to the injudicious housewife have been found to be: First, the loss through buying in small quantities second, the extravagant price paid for package goods, and third, the loss through getting from custom rather than for food values.

BLIND INDIAN LIVES ALONE

Eschumukln Paul, Aged Brave of Callapel Tribe, Leads Life of Seclusion.

Spokane, Wash.—Totally blind and living entirely alone, two miles from his nearest neighbor, building free and shocking his wants from day to day making bread, is Eschumukln Paul, an aged Indian of the Callapel tribe, according to the statement given out by Father Louis Taelman, president of Gonzaga university.

Father Taelman, who a few years ago was a missionary among the Callapel Indians, still is their spiritual adviser, and makes frequent trips to their tented village on the Pend Oreille river, some 10 miles northeast of Spokane. But the old, blind tribesman lives apart from his people, a life of one almost entirely alone.

"I was amazed at the case of old blind Eschumukln Paul," states Father Taelman, who investigated his condition. He is stone blind and yet he lives entirely alone, two miles from the nearest neighbor. The wonderful part of his story is that he lives at all, always going directly to the native wants he desires to visit. He never gets confused or strays or perhaps his meals. He can cut his meat or bake bread as good as most persons who have the use of their eyes.

"The only way in which I can account for his strange case is that the wonderful instinct, which every Indian has, seems developed to the limit during the 40 years of his blindness that it has taken the place of his eyes.

"Among the Callapels there is a great deal of kindness and peace, due to the smoke from their tepee fires. It has been the custom for years to their more rapid advance in civilization. The old head chief, Masalah, is blind."

PATROLS BEAT BRIDAL NIGHT

To Entertain the Children.

"Coms to our rainbow party," read invitations written upon blue paper in red ink. Upon their arrival the children were delighted with what they saw. The first thing that greeted them was a big rainbow of blue, yellow, red, pink and purple cheesecloth, stretched through two rooms. At one end was the pot of gold. In the pot was the number 7 and a mysterious package. Colored ribbons led through the house, and each chose the ribbon he wished to follow. At the end of each ribbon was a little bag of hobnobs. Attached to one string was the number 7, matching the number on the finder to the contents of the treasure pot. A large cake showed pink, yellow, brown and white layers, with a delicate frosting of purple, making a rainbow effect. The ice cream was pink, the sherbet yellow, and the flowers for decorations were various colored hyacinths.

Several young mothers with small children, who do not keep maids, are following a novel plan of entertainment for the children and relief for themselves. Each Wednesday afternoon one of the mothers takes all of the children to entertain for the afternoon, which leaves the other mothers for that afternoon free for social duties, matinee, shopping or any other pleasure or duty. And as it is only once in four weeks that each mother has all the children, it does not become tiresome. The children call it their party day, and most thoroughly enjoy it. They casually make a kindergarten afternoon of it, though each mother follows her own instructions.

HOPED-FOR IMPROVEMENTS.

The city council has passed a resolution declaring the Great Northern railway track yards maintained in the center of the city to be a public nuisance. There is no doubt that it is in fact what it is designated by the official action of the council and it is hoped that the company will abate the nuisance by establishing the yards at a more suitable location.

Further action was taken the purpose of which is to insure the improvement of the railway crossing and the construction of suitable sidewalks on the company's right of way on Main street. Miles of concrete sidewalks are being constructed in the city and the streets are being improved. By making the improvements on the principal thoroughfare the railway officials will be lending a reasonable co-operation to good public works.

The new plan in England of retaining imprisoned suffragettes to allow them to take on a few spring meals and then locking them up again may work better.

Another evidence of the Roosevelt courage. His African excursion with only one bottle of whiskey and that for medicinal purposes was certainly not well fortified against an attack by venomous reptiles.

It probably was not necessary for Colonel Roosevelt to start a libel suit to establish the fact that he does not indulge excessively in intoxicants. No man could do the fighting that he has done and at the same time fight booze.

Governor Eberhart has issued a proclamation designating June 17 as "Good Roads Day". But this does not mean that any day must be delibingly observed as good roads day and most effective work be done with the split-log drag at the proper time after a rain.

If it were not for the free flour from the Minneapolis Journal could find it in its heart to give a field agitprovial to the Red Lake Falls Gazette this is the way it goes. Louisiana would approve it but for the single schedule, Montana believes it lovely but for free wool; New England accepts the textiles schedule and approves the rest. Every section and every protected market for its products and a free trade market for what it has to buy.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Alderman Hunt offered the following resolution and moved its adoption, seconded by Alderman Polreier:

Upon roll call all members of the council voted in favor of the motion and said resolution was adopted.

The following resolution offered by Alderman Hennings who moved its adoption, duly seconded by Alderman Polreier, was unanimously adopted.—

Be It Resolved, By the City Council of the City of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, that the Great Northern Track Yard, maintained in the center of the city, is in a continual unsightly condition is unsanitary and dangerous to public health, and that the same be and is hereby declared to be a public nuisance, and the Great Northern Railway Company is hereby requested to abate and remove the same forthwith.

Alderman Hunt offered the following resolution and moved its adoption, seconded by Alderman Hennings.

Be It Resolved, That the Great Northern Railway Company, be and it is hereby required to properly plank its railway crossing upon Main street in the City of Red Lake Falls, the full width of said Main street, pursuant to the requirements of law, and it is further required to construct and maintain proper sidewalks over and across the right of way, upon each side of Main street, in said city, where its track and right of way crosses said Main street, to connect with the adjoining concrete walks, and to be of similar material.

Upon roll call five aldermen voted Aye, and no aldermen voted Nay, whereupon the president declared the resolution adopted.

Alderman Polreier offered the following resolution and moved its adoption, seconded by Alderman Hennings.—

Resolved, That the overhead track crossing of the Great Northern Railway between Gentleman Dietzman Avenue in the City of Red Lake Falls, is in a condition dangerous to the use of the street, by the public, and obstructive to both teams and foot passengers, therefore,

Be It Resolved, That the Great Northern Railway Company be and it is hereby required to forthwith widen its trestle work crossing on said Gentleman Avenue, to the full width of the street so as to wholly prevent the said street from being in some encroaching upon the sidewalks under said crossing and to so relax the same as to permit the free passage of loads of hay and straw or other like material under said crossing.

Upoccall of Ayes and Nays, all members voted in the affirmative, whereupon the President declared the resolution duly adopted.

All motions pending disposed.

T. A. CROMPE, President.

Approved this 10th day of May, 1913.

J. LEMIEUX, Mayor.

Attest:—JOSEPH PERRAULT, City Clerk.

A DOUBLE TRAGEDY

Murder and Suicide is the Latest Sensation at East Grand Forks.

East Grand Forks was shocked by a double tragedy last night at 10:05 when Rogers woman is divorcedand ex-policeman, shot and killed Mrs. Geo. Rogers is her own home, and then blew his own brains out, dying ten minutes later.

The Rogers woman is divorced, and has about two months ago secured a decree from her husband. Erickson, who is but 23 years old, had become infatuated with the Rogers woman, and had threatened to shoot her several times, but she paid no attention to him.

Last evening in company with Harry Brupp. he went to the Rogers home, where the woman's sister-in-law, Mrs. Grumbo, was found. Mrs. Rogers was out and when she returned Mrs. Grumbo informed her of whom where she had been. A dispute followed, and Erickson and Mrs. Rogers became involved in violent words.

Brupp attempted to step between to talk matters over. A few minutes later, after high words, two shots were heard, followed later by a third shot. Mrs. Grumbo and Brupp rushed to the doors, screaming for help, and a policeman arrived in a few seconds, finding Erickson dead, with a bullet through her brain, and Erickson dying.

Coroner Nelson and Sheriff Kelly are at the scene of the tragedy where an inquest is being held this afternoon.—Crookston Times, Monday.

Tar Weakens Rope.

Rope is often tarred to protect it from the weather. This is a somewhat doubtful practice as the acid in the tar weakens the rope to such an extent that engineers estimate tarred rope to be only two-thirds as strong as untarred rope.

No kind of oil or other preparation has so far been found that will not injure the rope. Powdered talc, tallow and graphite are used in making transmission rope,and for lubricating it when in use. Mr. Drew, University Farm, St. Paul.

"The wagon that stands up like the reputation of its makers"

When you buy a Studebaker wagon you buy a wagon that will last until you turn the farm over to your son and he turns it over to his son.

One of the first Studebaker wagons ever made saw constant service for thirty years, and we will gladly send you the names of farmers who have in their possession wagons that have been in constant use anywhere from 17 to 48 years—and there are thousands of them. We are building the same kind of wagons today.

A Studebaker wagon is an investment that will give you full return for your outlay. It is built on honest, true, tried, wood, paint and varnish used in its construction are tested and retested to make sure each is the best.

For work, business or pleasure—for town or country use—there is a Studebaker vehicle to fit your requirements.

Farm wagons, dump carts, trucks, buggies, surreys, runabouts, pony carriages, business vehicles of every description—with harness of the same high standard.

A bunch of eight Thief River girls came down on the flyer Wednesday evening, remaining here until the north bound flyer yesterday morning. This respite, however, had not been premeditated on the part of the girls as they had only planned a little charavri on a couple who were married in Thief River that day, and when searching for the newly-w'ds in the trois to whom they intended to administer a liberal dose of rice, etc., they carried too long and were carried beyond their station. They enjoyed the trip, however, but all their good intentions were sadly shattered as the young couple who were to be their prey in the hattic with rice and old shoes, were no where to be found.—Pioneer.

Do You Know

That there are over six million farms in the United States?

That the United States covers only about one-sixteenth of the land area of the globe?

That this one-sixteenth of the land produces three-fourths of all the world's corn, more than half the cotton, one-fourth the oats, and one-fifth the wheat.

These and a lot of other interesting things are made plain in "The Romance of the Reaper", which is to be given at Woodman Hall, Red Lake Falls, June 2.

The Man Behind the Machine.

In presenting "The Romance of the Reaper" William G. Ulirey not only is the man behind the machine, but he is the man behind the votes. That is he operates the moving picture machine, and at the same time describes the scenes. And it is easy to imagine that he is kept pretty busy.

After watching him through an evening's entertainment a former pupil said to Mr. Ulirey: "What did you do when you have nothing to do?"

"Talk to my sleep," replied Mr. Ulirey.

When Mr. Ulirey arrives in a town he has to unpack and set up the machine. Then during the entertainment he talks all the time, changing a slide about every quarter of a minute, and runs off 2,200 feet of motion pictures. And after the entertainment he takes down and packs up the machine. And along about midnight he goes to bed—some nights he does.

TEACHERS' TRAINING SCHOOL WORK

RED LAKE COUNTY SUMMER SCHOOL FOR FOUR WEEKS IN JULY.

Albany DeForge, county superintendent, has made the following statement regarding the work that is to be undertaken by the Red Lake county summer training school for teachers that is to be in session in the city for four weeks, July 2 to 26:

Regular work in the subjects required for second grade certificate will be taught. This list comprises Reading, Composition, U. S. History, Geography, Grammar, Physiology and Civics of Government. There will also be a class in primary methods and school management which all students having had less than two months experience will be required to take. A model class of small children will be organized as a part of the primary work. Languages and composition will be emphasized. An effort will be made to demonstrate how pupils can be taught to express themselves properly and more freely. Drawing, Penmanship, Manual Training and Industrial work will be given such attention as their importance demand. There will be special instructors for some time in each of these and the regular work will be given such attention as their importance demand. There will be special instructors for some time in each of these and the regular work along these lines, it is incumbent upon teachers to teach the children games and drills on the school grounds and during recess periods, so as well as to teach the child through books and so at certain times each week the student teacher will be taught drills, games, and calisthenics. Schooling that lacks recreation favors dullness.

Students attending the spring banks they have for reference.

The school will be located at Red Lake Falls on the North side in the Washington school which is situated at the corner of Broadway and Eighth street, on a beautiful knoll hill overlooking the Clearwater river valley. It is one of the finest business part of the city in the distance. A more inspiring spot for a school could hardly be found.

The school will be organized on Wednesday, July 2nd at 10 A. M. Everyone expecting to attend should enroll the first day if possible. Certificates of attendance will be issued to all whose attendance is perfect. A list of all persons teaching in the county, that is, those intending attending the summer school will be sent to all school boards which fail they will be advised to select their teachers.

One of the rules of the state superintendent relating to Normal Departments of State High Schools reads as follows:

"For the acceptance of credits and the issuance of certificates on a high school normal training course, the recommendation of the principal of the county superintendent will be required."

To receive the county superintendent's endorsement all persons intending to attend summer school should write to the county superintendent at once as long as you can, but plan to come the first week.

The state superintendent has stated that each school district applying for state aid must have employed one of such materials! Surely, it would be of benefit to any teacher to work under the supervision of the specialist who will be in charge of the primary department of our summer school this summer.

Teachers from other counties will be welcome. All have the same privileges and opportunities.

EXAMINATIONS.

The school will be closed July 25th and the examinations will be held on July 31st and August 1st and 2nd. Teachers should bring all their credits at this time.

BREEDERS MUST BE ON GUARD

Several Cases of Infectious Abortion in Swine Reported.

Cases have been reported from two different breeders which suggest the occasional appearance of infectious abortion among swine in the Northwest. Evidently it is quite rare, but may easily spread if it exists, as suggested. One man reports the purchase at a certain fair, from an Iowa breeder, of a fall yearling gilt. The sow was bred, but test her pigs after about six weeks. She was bred again and aborted again in a similar period. About six of this man's older and better brood sows developed the same trouble. He believed that the older sows were infected, from the hour that had previously served the young Iowa sow. The other breeder reported a somewhat similar experience. This item is published with a view to putting breeders on their guard against a possible source of trouble. —M. H. Reynolds, "Veterinarian, University Farm, St. Paul.

One or Two-Litters Per Year?

If food supplies "are abundant and cheap, and if good shelter is plentiful, there is no reason why two litters of pigs should not be produced from the sows during each year of her usefulness. But if there is a scarcity of any essential cheap or otherwise wanted foods, other roots, milk, grain in droppings of cattle, or cheap grain, it is better that the pork producers' efforts should be directed to the perfect growing of a single litter.—D. THAT APRIL FOOL HAT

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.

As a baby Phillip Gordon Masters was dignified. As his days lengthened out he grew more so. At the age of three he had never had a smile on his face. At the age of five he had all the dignity of a man. Mr. Masters had been born rich. If it had been the other way—if he had had to elbow with the world—he might have been a different man.

This dignified man was thirty years old and was growing more dignified every second that passed, when he undertook a short railway journey. He had his own private car and the dears were locked on a siding. Therefore, There came an accident by which the train was obliged to halt at the village of Whitewater for several hours. Mr. Masters got tired of inaction and started for a walk uptown. It was the first day of April, but he had forgotten the fact. In fact, as he was bigger than the almanac there was no reason why he should remember any particular date.

You may have seen an April fool hat pinned to the sidewalk. There is a big stone under it, and it is a trap for the unwary.

Mr. Masters had never run across an April fool hat. He had never kicked a man or a dog or a football. He had always kept his feet under him. Would he have thought of any thing but walking if he would have appealed to him? Would he have looked just after using forty years of dignity he would have even given it a second glance? Human nature is queer. It is always away off and where you least expect. It broke out in Mr. Masters' case when he saw that April fool hat with almost a smile on its face, and when he had unprecedented within a certain distance he drew in his breath, swung his right leg and sent it flying for fear it was the air. Only he didn't. He didn't send it two inches, and if he had have done so his swear words would have been heard a mile away.

The three boys ready to cry he, ha, ha! and there were men ready to laugh ho, ho, ho! and Mr. Masters limped back to his car, bolting for revenge.

Whenever one has been hurting itself town. They had no booms there. Its people were conservative and no one ever invested a dollar in Main street. Of a sudden a stranger appeared and called on a Mr. Brown in a business way. Mr. Brown owned ten acres of land on the western side of the village. Its value was $25 an acre, but no one had offered any price for it. The stranger was interested in it, and therefore he imagined when the stranger asked for an option on the land at $100 per acre, He got it. He entertained Mr. Brown to keep quiet. Then he went to see Mr. Gill and offered him ten acres of land and an abandoned sawmill. The smile was on the face of the stranger got an option at a thousand. Mr. Gill was cautioned to keep quiet.

Then the stranger got an option on the ten acres on the hill and on the stores, the tannery, the small factory and the best or two other pieces. In each instance he offered a price and that price was at least three times what the property was worth.

What did it all mean? What was going to happen? It was no use to talk to the stranger. No information could be got from him except that he wanted more options. Some said it was a corporation and others guessed some iron or copper or lead. It was even suggested and believed that there was a discovery of petroleum under the village.

There followed just what might have been expected. The stranger left and the stranger did expect. By the time he had secured options to the number of twenty Whitewater was seized with a fever. The price of real estate began jumping. A house and lot worth $1,000 one day were held at $2,000 or more the next. There was a gravel ridge running along the main street. The idea was that diamonds were to be found in the gravel. There was a creek just south of the town. It was contended that the hidden petroleum would be found there. Under the load on the hill was supposed to be a great reservoir of natural gas.

For two weeks there was no business but buying and selling. The enthusiasms at the churches of a Sunday being manifested a score. There was hardly a piece of property in and around the town that didn't change hands at least three times. In a quiet way the stranger sold most of his options at double figures. One morning the big water wake up to ask what it was all about. The stranger had disappeared. Of a sudden no one wanted to buy. Before noon there was a rush to sell. Inside of twenty-four hours the $1,000 properties were being offered for $250. It is always so in the reaction. When the town settled down a bit it found that it had been not much twenty years and would have to pare its potatoes every time to keep out of bankruptcy.

And the stranger? Oh, he didn't count. He was simply the agent of the man behind the guns who had tried to get the April fool hat. No one knew him, but all had felt him. He had kicked the town as well as the hat. Mr. Masters was noted for his dignity and not for a spirit of revenge, but when a millionaire has made an ass of himself and driven his toes back to his heels as well he wants other things to happen. Doesn't he? And they have come and gone since that puzzle, but there have been no more odd hats to kick.

A Protection

By SADIE OLCOTT

"Colonel Eldridge."

"Well?"

I think I shall have to leave the fort. There are too many young officers here who have nothing to do but flirt, and they make a girl's life miserable."

"But you don't have to flirt with them if you don't wish to do so."

"They are so persistent. There's Mr. Wheeler, just out of West Point with nothing but his pay an second lieutenant and wasting with which to occupy himself but to cultivate his mustache. He has been bothering me to become engaged to him. I think you, as commandant of the post, should issue an order against flirting."

"And if the penalty of the order is transgressed?"

"Twelve hours in the guardhouse."

"Very well. Consider the order issued. Go to the guardhouse."

"I am not flirting. I assure you I'm in earnest."

She looked at the colonel, a hand some bachelor of forty, with a pair of beautiful eyes in a way that puzzled him.

"I have a mind to order you out of the garrison," he said. "You have bewitched these young officers so as to render them useless as soldiers, and I shall get no service out of them till you are gone."

"Do sit down and let us talk it over. I think I can prove to you that I am not a flirt."

"Well, go on."

"Seriously, Mr. Wheeler must be headed off or"—

"He'll blow out his brains!"

"How could he do that when"—

"He hasn't any?"

"Listen to me. I see a way to settle the matter with him"—

"And He rest of them!"

"Will you please cease to interrupt me?"

"Proceed."

"When a girl is once engaged she is let alone. Now, I wish to be engaged."

"Oh, you do! For how long?"

"That depends. My first object is to get rid of this element. I can't marry all those young men, and if I engage myself to one of them all the rest will quarrel over the matter. Now, if I engage myself to their commanding officer it will be very different. No one of them will have been preferred to the other."

"What a brain you have in that pretty head of yours! Are you sure they'll not all mutiny?"

"How ridiculous!"

"I'm at your service. But I warn you you may find it harder to get rid of me than Wheeler."

"Oh, I'm not afraid of that."

"You mean, I suppose, that being an old fogy I'll do for a buffer and when no longer needed will be discarded."

"You go too fast. It will be time enough to talk about crossing a bridge when we get there."

"Will you announce our engagement"

"There you are again—trying to cross a bridge we haven't reached."

"But if I thought you had yourself to be engaged to me for protection. I bind you to nothing of the sort. Is it we keep the engagement a secret?"

"That does an engagement involve?"

"Closing privileges."

"There is something that comes before that."

"What? Eh, oh, I see—a proposal."

"Certainly."

"Will you do me the honor to be my wife?"

"Not on such a proposal as that."

"What kind of a proposal would you like?"

"One with some feeling in it."

"Having received a great many of them, perhaps you will tell me the most attractive way to proceed."

"The suitor, sitting beside the lady as we are sitting, takes her left hand in his."

The colonel did as instructed, using his right hand.

"But that hand; the other?"

"The right hand must be free."

The colonel used the left hand.

"Then he tells his story in his own way."

"You are the loveliest little human being in the world. I love you desperately and have loved you from seventy ever since you came to the garrison, but I have refrained from declaring myself or an old fellow like one for a moment, considering what"—

"Now you see why you should keep your right hand free," she interrupted as he placed it on her waist.

"All these young chaps are mad about you."

"That's the way I supposed you felt about it. Now the privilege you spoke of comes in."

The colonel took advantage of the privilege and the young lady remarked that that was not accounted to the original plan, whereupon the colonel exclaimed, "Original plan be hanged!"

The colonel was right about the mutiny, save that it was peaceful mutiny only. Half a dozen subalterns ground their teeth and wondered what a girl could see in a man old enough to be her father. However, the lady's engagement to the commandant served as ample protection even from Mr. Wheeler, though he was so boldly hit that he put in an application for transfer.

SYNOPSIS.

Hiit Cannon, the bonanza king, and his daughter, Rose, who had passed up Mrs. Cornelius Ryan's ball at San Francisco to attend the opera in Sacramento with Mrs. Dominick Ryan, calls on his mother to bear a ball invitation for his wife and is refused. The determined old lady refuses to recognize her daughter-in-law. Dominick Ryan, a wealthy bachelor, is smitten with Bernice Iverach, a stenographer several years his senior. She squanders his money, they have frequent quarrels and finally, through Cannon, the daughter-in-law is reconciled to the mother-in-law. Dominick Ryan is rescued from a dangerous and serious condition and brought to Antelope Cannon's mansion. Bernice Iverach and Dominick marry. Dominick's mother dies. Two weeks later Bernice discovers in a paper where husband is and writes letter trying to smooth over difficulties between them. Dominick at last is able to go from widower to prisoners in hotel corridor. Bernice receives letter from Dominick in answer to letter. After weeks, end of imprisonment is seen. Telegrams and mail from Bernice. Dominick gets letter from wife. Rose to depart upon yacht. Cannon to remain in Antelope. Dominick in desert. Rose and Dominick embrace father, forgive them and forwards an explanation. Rose's father dies. Rose is made executrix of her father's estate. Dominick's mother's funeral. Cannon expresses sympathy for Dominick's position in mill with Rose. Dominick returns home. Bernice greets herself in mirror. Bernice and Dominick's first row calls on Miss Ryan. They discuss Dominick's business difficulties, and Cannon suggests buying off Bernice.

There was something strange about Dominick since he had come back, something that intrigued her, that she could not satisfactorily explain. She assured herself that he was still eager, but in the deeper places of her understanding its value that whispers the truth and will not be gainsaid told her it was not that. Neither was it actually antagonism. In a way he had been studiously kind and polite to her, a sort of ceremoniously guarded politeness, such as one might practise in a street with whom one was intimate without being friendly. She tried to explain to herself just what the change was, and what it came to pulling the matter in words she could not find the right ones. It was a coldness, a coldness that was not harsh and did not express itself in actions or phrases. It was deeper; it was excluded from the inner places of his being.

Sometimes as she talked to him she would meet his eyes fixed on her with a deep, vacant silence, which she suddenly realized was unseeing and unheeding. In the evening as he sat reading in the cramped confines of the den she surreptitiously watched him and saw that a moment often came when he dropped his book, and with his long body limp in its armchair, his chin sunk on his breast, would sit with a brooding gaze fixed on nothing. Once, as he was dreaming this way, she said suddenly:

"What are you thinking of, Dominick? Antelope?"

He started and turned upon her a face that had reddened consciously.

"Why should I think of Antelope?" he said, and his tone was intended remark had startled him and made him uncomfortable.

"For no particular reason," she answered flatly; "you just looked as if you were thinking of something a long way off."

She tried to reassure herself that it all rose from the quarrel. To believe that comforted her and gave her confidence, but it was hard to think it, for not only did her own instinct proclaim against it, but Dominick's manner and attitude were in distinct refutation of any such theory. He was not sullen, he was absent; he was not resentful, he was indifferent. And in small matters he tried to please her, which was not after the manner of a sore and angry man. On their very Sunday he had agreed to meet her and her family in the park at the band stand at four. She always dined with her sisters on Sunday and if the weather was fine they went to the park and listened to the music. It was nearly a year now since Dominick had joined these family parties, preferring to walk on the Presidio hills and the Cliff House beach with a friend from the bank. But on the evening before he had promised to meet them; been quite agreeable about it, Bernice had thought, when her plaid legs and impromptus had finally extorted from him a promise to join them there.

She left the dining-room and walked up the hallway to the parlor, her head drooped, anxieties gnawing at her. The little room was flooded with sunshine, and she parted the lace curtains and threw up the window to leaned out. The rich, enveloping warmth surrounded her, cleared the air, seemed to sink deep into her and thaw her apprehensions that were so cold at her heart. She drew in the sweet, still air, that did not stimulate but that held in it something of a crystalline youth and freshness, thin the air of an untainted world, uncorroded with nothing but the joy of living. The scents of flowers were in it; the mellowness of the earth and its fruits. Peace was the message of this tranquil Sunday afternoon, peace was in the sunshine, in the sound of bells with which the air was full, in the fall of feet—light, joyous feet—on the pavement, in the voices of passers-by and the laughter, sweet and broken, floated to the window. It was not right for any one to harbor cankering cares on such a day. The earth was happy, sheltered to its sensitive, irresponsible care free, rejoicing in the perfect moment. The woman felt the restoring processes that Nature, in its tireless generosity, offers to all who will take them. She felt eased of her troubles, anointed and obsessed, as though the enwrapping resilience that bathed her held an opiate for jangled nerves. Blinking in the brightness she leaned on the window sill, immovable, quieted, feeling the warmth soften her and dissipate those alarms that half an hour earlier had been so chill and heavy.

As she dressed, the sense of well-being and confidence increased. She looked very well this morning. Since Dominick's return she had looked haggard and thin. Sometimes she had seemed to see, showing shadowy through her cheeks and eyes, the skull sure, the lines and hollows of that face that in time should have put a stamp on it that neither message nor pigments could efface. A sudden moment of revelation showed her herself as an old woman, her nose pointed, her mouth a thin, tight line, her head bending the glass gave her beck sons of those disconcerting hints. She was at her best, and as she dressed carefully and slowly, she had the satisfaction of seeing that she added article of apparel increased her good looks. When she finally put on her new waist, and of the one she had bought in celebration of Dominick's return—and over it the soft white and black dotted veil, she was so gratified with the picture she presented that she was reluctant to leave it and pirouetted slowly before the glass, surveying her back and side views, and finally lifting her skirt that she might draw the full effect of her lilac petticoat as it burst into stiffness in an ebullition of pleats and frills.

Walking up the avenue she was wrongfully conscious that her brilliant appearance drew the tribute of glances. Many people looked at her, and their admiring admiration was an even more exhilarating tonic than the sunshine. She walked with a light, elastic step, a sort of freedom in the air, for her progress accompanied by a rich seductive rustle. Once or twice she passed members of that exclusive world from which she had exiled herself. She swept by them, languidly indifferent, her eyes looking with glacial austerity over their heads. The sound made by her brushing silk petticoats was great enough expression. She imparted to them a slight disdainful swing, and lifted her dress the full skirt daintily higher, conscious of the implacable effect it gave of her emerging lilac frills.

The habit of dining with her own people on Sunday had been one she had never abandoned, even in the first aspiring days of her marriage. It was a sort of family reunion and at first Dominick had been a not unwilling participant in its domestic festivities. The solid bourgeois respectability of his wife's relations appealed to him. For all his extravagance in many things education he was of the same class himself, and while Bernice was, if not a beloved spouse, a yet endurable, one he had found the Sunday gatherings and subsequent walks on the beach not entirely objectionable. For over a year now he had agreed from it, pleading the need of open air and exercise, and his excuse was accepted at first protested, had grown used to his absence and accepted it as something to bear with resignation.

The day was so fine that they hurried through their dinner, a hearty and lavish meal, the chef d'oeuvre of Hannah's housekeeping, and, lest it lose a moment of the sunshine, determined to walk down to Van Ness avenue and there catch an outgoing car among them. They expressed with an un-American deliberation, tasting the delicate sweetness of the air, rejoicing in the sky and the sun, pausing to look at the dark bushiness of a eucalyptus against a wash of blue, the skeleton blossom of a Century plant, the pool of thick scarlet made by a pasterre of geranium.

The three sisters—Hannah and Pearl leading, Berny and Hazel walking behind with Josh—fared boorishly down the street. As they passed, they commented on the houses and their inmates. They had plenty of stories of the dwellers in those solemn palaces, many of whom were people whose humble beginnings they knew by heart, and whose rapid rise had been watched almost as-stricken by an admiring and envious community.

As the Ryan house loomed into view their chatter ceased and their tone became serious with staring attention, were fixed on the mansion which had so stubbornly closed its doors on one of them. Sensitive of varying degrees of sullenness stirred in each of them, except the child, still too young to be tainted by the corroding sense of worldly injustice. She skipped along otherwise, her warm, soft hand clasped in her Aunt Hannah's decently-gloved palm. Some vers or vibration of the intense feelings of her elders passed to her, and as they drew nearer the house she, too, began to grow grave and her skipping quieted down into a sober walk.

"That's Uncle Dominick's house, isn't it?" she said to Hannah.

Hannah nodded. By far the most sensible and wide-minded of the sisters, she could not rise above the sense of rankling indignation that she felt against the Ryans for their treatment of Berny.

"That's the biggest house in San Francisco," said Pearl over her shoulder to her parents. "Ain't it, Poppery?"

Poppery guess it is," answered Josh, giving his head a confirmatory wag, "and it ain't, it's big enough, the Lord knows!"

"I can't see what a private family wants with all that room," said Hannah with a condemnatory air. "There could not be dozens of rooms on that upper floor that nobody lives in."

"Don't you fret. They're all occupied," said Berny. "Dominick pays for his own private suite. Cornie has three rooms all of her own, and even the housekeeper has a private bath."

"And there's twelve indoor servants," said Hazel. "They want a lot of space for them. Twelve servants. Just think of it!"

"Twelve servants!" ejaculated Hannah aghast with a groan. "Twelve servants! Soon to me right!"

They were close to the house now and silence fell on them, as though the enormousness of its scale and its hushed upon them from the mansion's expressive bulk, like an unspoken curse. They all frowned, and at the same time proud that one of their number should have even the most distant affiliations with a family too wealthy for words. The women with their more responsive and sensitive natures felt it more delicately than Josh, whose primary emotion at the thought of the moment by remarking:

"Some day you'll live in there, Bernsy, and have all the servants you wanta."

"Hats!" said Bernsy, giving her head an angry toss. "I'd rather live in my own little flat."

Josh's whistle of facetious incredulity died away incomplete, for at that moment the hall door opened and a footman in livery and gold lace emerged upon the porch. Bernsy, at the first glance, was not sure of its identity, but her doubts were dispelled by her brother-in-law's quick sentence, delivered on the ear of a surprised truth.

"Bill Cannon, by gum! What's he doing here?"

This same, as powerful to confuse with the city as in the open fields camps, cast its instantaneous spell upon the sisters, who stared wide-eyed upon the great scene. He for his part seemed oblivious to their glances and to their presence. He stood on the top step for a musing moment, looking down with that sort of dizzy fatty of gaze which is noticeable in the glance of the resting eagle. His expression was a last crowning touch to the proud, unapproachable distinction of the Ryans.

"Don't he look as if he was thinking?" said Josh in a hushed tone. "I wonder what's on his mind."

"Probably that Monday's pay-day and he don't know whether he can scratch through," said the jocose Josh.

Bernsy did not say anything. She felt the interest in Cannon that she did in all conquering, successful people, and in her heart it gave her a sense of added importance to think that the family she had married into and who refused to know her was on friendly terms with the millionaire.

A half-hour later they had found seats in front of the band stand in the park, and, settling themselves with a great rustling and many sighs of humbugs, prepared to enjoy the music. Hannah and Pearl were given two chairs at the end of a row, and Hazel and Bernsy, with Josh as escort, secured four on the row immediately behind. Dominick had not yet appeared, so the sisters agreed that their seats were a vacant seat between them, and they fell to the business of inspecting the people around her, each one making comments about for the tall figure of her husband.

She was very fond of the park and found pleasure in these Sunday afternoons. To go there had been one of the great delights of her life, and when she loved to look at this holiday gathering of all types, among which her own dress was largely represented. The outdoor amphitheater of filled benches was to her what the ball-room was to the glittering boresbox at the opera are to the women of society. She saw many old friends among the throng, and had been contemporaries of hers when she had lived in the park. Some of the long since merried in their own world of wealth and fashion, others had sunk. She looked them over with an almost tender curiosity, discomfitted to see the fresh, young faces of some, pleased to note that others looked wrinkled and old. Sometimes she and Bernsy regarded women who had children about the age of the children grouped about these mothers of the past, and for a time sometimes, with the husband carrying the baby or the only annoying, burdensome creatures in the park, the years seem a little ridiculous, and had not half the importance in the scheme of her elegant costume and lilac frills.

The magnificent afternoon had brought out a throng of pleasure-seekers, vast in the line of beauties was full and the music was good. Over and over coming up, standing for a few measures and moving on. They were of all kinds. The band was a fine one, had even tempted the more fashionable people to come and listen. They were always strangely-dressed ladies of the opera, and the band played its best day, and that evoked in Bernsy a deep and tender curiosity. Both women, sitting high in their chairs, showed their necks this way and that, spring through long, fine lace ruffles and following attractive figures with darting movements of their heads. When either one saw anything she liked she touched the other on the knee. The woman she had a band up the other's knee, and the other, flushed and dazzled the object of her attention. Then the first would lean back and disconnected like notes for a decoration.

They were thus engaged when Hazel saw Dominick. He stood rising, hailed him with a beckoning nod, and, making his way toward them, moving deliberately, stopping here and there to speak to acquaintances. He was taller than any one in the group, and Bernsy and Bernsy, watching him, felt a sense of extraordinary pride swelling in her when she noted the appreciative, interested eyes that followed him. It really was the first time in a month's boarding-house, he looked as if his Bernsy might be his own the flower of the nation. He wore a gray felt hat, a gray flannel suit, and a waist a belt of yellow leather. His color turning with the heat, the contrast the brown strength of his throat, and on lifting his hat, the sunshine on his thin, his head with its cropped curly hair, the strong growing close against it, showed golden lights in the sun-

With a phrase of greeting he joined them, and then as they swept their skirts off the seat for him, he sat down, slipped in front of Bernsy and sat down. Hazel began to talk to him. Her conversation was that of a good-looking sort, at which she was quite proficient. Bernsy knew that she accomplished enough in individual gifts than, and, sitting forward on the edge of her chair, contemplated the group of people. A blonde coiffure some rows in front caught her eye and she fell to studying its intricacies through the interstices that came and went between the moving heads, when there was an emergence into view of an unusually striking figure she gave it her undivided attention. The woman had come up from behind a row, accompanied and met by the crowd, had come to a standstill a few rows in front of the section where Bernsy sat. She was accompanied by a young man dressed in the height of dignity of fashion and as he stood he turned to survey the lines of tiled chairs, Bernsy saw that he had a thin face with a black mustache, and dark eyes.

But her interest in him was of the slightest. Her attention was immediately riveted upon the woman who became the object of a glance which inspected her with a slow, staggering look from her hat to the hem of her skirt. Bernsy could see the fine, but bold embitments were of the latest mode and of an unusual and subdued elegance which bespoke an origin in more sophisticated center than San Francisco. Bernsy, with that curiosity, stared at the lady's back, noting the shiny hair clothes but a certain correctness in the way they were put on. Her hair was not quite right. The comb, which crossed the back of the head and kept her hair smooth, was crooked, and little wisps hung from it over her collar. The hand that held up her skirt in a loose perfunctory manner, as though these rich accessories were possessions of no moment, was covered by a not particularly white glove.

Such unconsciousness added the distinction of indifference to the already marked effect. Bernsy wondered more than ever who it was and longed to see its averted face. She was about to lean across Dominick and attract Hazel's attention by a poking finger directed against her knee, when the woman, with a word to her companion, moved her head and let a slow glance sweep over the rows of faces.

"Hazel," Bernsy blissed across Dominick, "look at that girl. Who is she?"

She did not divert her eyes from the woman's face, which she now saw in profile, but was grateful for the slight, more from a rich, unringed purity of coloring than from any particular beauty of feature. The head with its gravely-traveling glance continued to turn till Bernsy had the satisfaction of seeing the face in three-quarters. A moment later the woman's eyes lighted indifferently, then brushed, as though obedient to the inanimate stoppage of regulating machinery.

Only a person watching closely would have noticed it, but Bernsy was watching with the most vigilant closeness. She saw the infusion of a new and keener interest transform the glance, concentrate its bay, diffused attention into something that had the sharpness and suddenness of a leaping flame. Its next moment a flood of color rose clearly pink over the cheek, and the woman's head and all the lady bent her head in a grave, decorous bow.

Bernsy turned, startled—and in a vague, undefined way, disturbed, toward Hazel, but Hazel was in the act of salutation. To her astonishment it was Dominick, as he bowed and lifted his replaced his hat and she saw—to the girl's imagination at that moment—a look of disturbance—that he was as pale as the bowing woman was pink.

"Dominick," she exclaimed, "who's that?"

Miss Cannon," he said in a low tone.

"Rose Cannon?" blessed Hazel on the other side of him, her face turned forward, and tense in the interest of the moment. "Miss Cannon's daughter?"

"Yes, I met her at Antelope."

Bernsy did not speak to Dominick. Hazel hung over her brother-in-law in her excitement. "That's straight from Antelope, isn't it?" she said.

"Yes, I saw it," said Bernsy in a voice that did not sound particularly exhilarated; "maybe it is."

She looked back at Rose Cannon and saw her turned away and was moving off through the crowd with her escort. She looked quickly at Dominick. His voice had not sounded natural, but his face had now regained its color and he was quite himself again. She heard Hazel saying something about Miss Cannon, and she heard Dominick's answers, brief and given with a reticence suggestive. Then Hazel asked him for the time and he drew out his watch with a slow, pleasing satisfaction and a look of pride for his watch. As he drew it out and held it toward the questioner, Bernsy suddenly leaned forward, and, catching his hand with the watch in it, turned its face toward her. The hand beneath hers was cold, and shook. She let it go and again sank back in her chair. The feeling of sickness grew stronger and was augmented by a sense of physical restlessness, of being tremulous and cold deep down in her bones.

Bernsy Turned, Startled.

Hazel rose to her feet, shaking her skirts into place.

"Let's go on," she said, "it's getting chilly. Come along, Josh. I suppose if you were not down, you'd sit here till sundown listening to the music in a trance."

Dominick and Josh rose and there bones as lightness and nettiness of wraps. Bernsy still sat motionless, her hands, still in their tight gloves, lying open on her lap.

"Come along, Bernsy," said Hazel. "It's too cold to sit here any longer. Why, how funny you look, all pale and shrinked up! You're as bad as Josh. You and he ought to have married each other. You'd have been a perfect couple."

Josh laughed loudly at this sally, leaning round the figure of his wife to present his foolish, good-humored face, covered with a grin, to Bernsy.

"Are you willing, Bernsy?" he cried gaily. "I can get a divorce whenever you say. It will be dead easy; brutal and inhuman treatment. Just say the word!"

"Where'll he brutal and inhuman treatment if you don't move on and get the carriage?" said Hazel, as she said Hazel severely. "I want to go out to the beach and see the sun set in the path, trying to be funny."

The cheerful Josh, still laughing, turned and moved onward between the seats, the others following him. The crowd in the park was not yet out of the sounding board. It was a favorite piece, and they left lingeringly, hearing the last bars. "Sarah McCrea," said Hazel severely. "I want to go out to the beach and see the sun set in the path, trying to be funny."

The cheerful Josh, still laughing, turned and moved onward between the seats, the others following him. The crowd in the park was not yet out of the sounding board. It was a favorite piece, and they left lingeringly, hearing the last bars. "Sarah McCrea," said Hazel severely. "I want to go out with heads turned and cars trained on the band. Josh's band, passed through his wife's arm, affectionately pressed the speaker's hand. Bernsy felt deeply the sharpness of their recriminations they were the most loving of couples.

The band was in the line. In the flurry of departure her silence had passed unnoticed, and that she should thus lag at the tail of the procession was not to be expected. Dominick, at the heat of times, she was not much of a walker and the long, hot, crowded Sunday shoes bar progress was always deliberate.

Looking ahead of her, she saw the landscape still as a picture under the slanting, lurid sunlight. It seemed to be painted with unnaturally glaring colors, to be soaked in color. The grass crossed with long shadows, was of the greenness of an aniline dye. The massed foliage of tree groups revealed a melting richness of shades, no one clearly defined, all fused in a thick, opaque lusciousness of greens. The air was colorless and very clear. Where a passing carriage stirred the dust there was a cloud of rose, spreading a tarnishing blur on the crystalline clarity of the scene. The sun injected itself into this picture, and from it distilled slowly, as if it made them slowly, as if it made them slowly, as if it made them

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

PASTOR ON TRIAL; ARSON IS CHARGED

CASE OF REV. M. H. FRYE OF KIESTER CALLED THIS WEEK.

WAS LESSEE OF BUILDING

Defendant Accused of Filing Building, of Which He Was Lessee—Structure Badly Damaged and Stock Destroyed.

Waseca, Minn.—When the adjourned term of the district court convened here Monday, Judge A. H. Childress presiding, the second case for trial on the criminal calendar was that of the state against Rev. M. H. Frye of Kiester, who was indicted by the grand jury of this county in March 16 last, on the charge of setting fire to Gregg's furniture store in this city on October 23, 1912. Frye is charged with arson in the third degree.

Stock Is Traded.

Mr. Gregg, the owner of the building, has conducted a furniture store here for the past 40 years. On July 10, 1912, he traded his entire stock of furniture and undertaking to C. E. Medgorden of Lake Mills, Ia., for 165 acres of land in Freeborn county, and leased his building to Medgorden for a term of three years at $65 per month. In September, Medgorden put on an auction sale and disposed of part of the stock. He also traded away two carloads of the furniture, one to Kiester and one to Bovey, Ia. Jest to arrest. The government attorneys do not take this view of the case, however.

MODEL TOWN IS PLANNED

$1,300,000 Appropriated by the Corporation for Homes for the Men at Duluth.

Duluth.—Duluth's steel plant is not to be surrounded with slums, insanitary tenements, blighted areas or squalor. Adjoining the plant to the north and on the property of the United States Steel corporation will be erected a model town.

Work will be begun to the summer of 350 buildings, enough at once to be apartment houses and some dwellings, and at least that will be erected this year. The total cost will be about $1,300,000 and this sum has already been appropriated by the United States Steel corporation for the purpose.

These flats were announced by Joseph L. Reis, president of the Minnesota Steel company. Mr. Reis has been working for some time to secure this appropriation, realizing the absolute necessity of providing decent homes for employees of the plant, who will be brought to Duluth to operate the plant.

Both Sides Lose Cases.

Stillwater.—Judge Goldberg has written another chapter in the Ihlag litigation over the Chippewamuna dam on Snake river, near Pine City, which dam was used for generators for logging purposes. It was blown up with dynamite. Emil Hunsch and others brought suit for damages and two years ago had to pay $2,495 damages to farmers. Ihlag, the destruction of the dam the property was leased by James E. McGrath of this city, who brought a counterclaim for damages suit against McGrath to recover the damages they had to pay and also for old suits. McGrath made a counter claim for rents, and sums he had paid due to damages. Judge Goldberg held that no one is entitled to recover damages.

ALLEGED SLAYER PUTS UP STRUGGLE

CHRIS VIRGENS OF TRIUMPH MINN., CHARGED WITH KILLING JOHN STEEN.

HARD HAND TO HAND FIGHT.

Entire Efforts of Three Officers Required to Overpower and Handcuff Their Prisoner.

Fairmont.—Chris Virgeos, a former living about one mile from Triumph, was arrested early Saturday by Sheriff Carver of Martin county, and Deputies John C. Lasher of St. Paul assisted by Court Reporter W. L. Nicholds, for the murder of John Steen, after a desperate hand to hand battle with the three officers, whose efforts were required in order to overpower and handcuff their prisoner. He was driven to the county jail at Fairmont and is now lodged in the county jail, charged with murder in the first degree.

Arraigned on Monday.

Virgeos was arraigned at 10 a. m., Monday, before Justice of the Peace Scott Cunningham, Attorney J. C. Dean is prosecuting the case. Sunday a posse of 150 men searched Virgeos' farm for evidence sought by the officers.

The body of Steen, whose farm was but one-half mile distant from Virgeos', home, was found lying in the haghouses Thursday, May 8, with a bullet wound in the head.

Sheriff Carver of Virgeos is said to have run high at Triumph, where it is reported threats of lynching were made. It is generally believed here that if Virgens had not been taken into custody when he was, there would have been a pitched battle between the sheriff and Sheriff Carver and Deputy Sheriff John Elsbee, although during no demonstration against Virgens here are nevertheless taking the necessary precautions to guard their prisoner. No one is permitted to visit him in his cell.

Key Used on Body.

Steen's body was taken to Manistee last Saturday and an xray examination made, the bullet being located near the forehead. It was a 32-caliber, steel-jacketed missile, evidently fired from some high-power weapon. This was the first terrible clue the officers had to work with.

During the last few days the officers learned that Virgens, a few weeks ago, had purchased from a mail order house a 32-caliber automatic pistol, together with a large supply of steel-jacketed bullets of the same caliber. Acting upon this evidence, together with other information they had gleaned, Sheriff Carver, Detective Lasher and Court Reporter Nicholas drove to Triumph early today to arrest Virgeos.

The officers discovered Virgeos in the barn. He was unarmed. As soon as he saw them he leaped at them and a hand-to-hand conflict ensued. The officers drew their revolvers, but they did not care to risk shooting and clubbing handcuffs on their prisoner's wrists.

Convicted Twice Before.

Virgens has been convicted twice of assault in the second degree, and Martin Steen was a witness against him. This is said to have aroused Virgens' hatred of Steen and gives rise to the motive generally credited for the crime. It is understood that Mrs. Virgens gave certain information to the sheriff and detectives which has financed their action in placing him under arrest. The nature of the disclosures, however, was not divulged by the officers.

When Steen was murdered, the theory was first advanced that he had encountered a poultry thief in the yard and had been shot. This theory, however, was exploded. It later developed that a few weeks ago, while Steen was getting his mail from the mail box on the Triumph rural route, he was fired from ambush, passed through the hat he carried covering his head. He said nothing about this to anyone except the members of his family. They, however, reported the occurrence to the officers after his murder.

Virgens was one of the most popular farmers of Martin county and was well known to have an enemy. He was the same town clerk of Triumph and presided in the Masonic order.

Sentenced to 7-Year Term.

Wahasha.—J. S. Gedney pleaded guilty here to an indictment charging arson in the third degree, for employing George Cramer, of Minneapolis, to burn the Gedney planing mill factory at Plainview, in the county, and was sentenced to serve seven years in the penitentiary at Stillwater. Gedney has been in jail here since May 3, when he was arrested by deputies from the state fire marshal's office. Cramer, who confessed, was given an indeterminate term.

GOT LIQUOR WITHOUT PAY

Amundson Accused of Sharp Practices in Getting Free Drinks in "Dry" Territory.

Fergus Falls.—Louis Amundson, who resides near Underwood, was indicted in the United States court here on the charge of using the mails to defraud.

It is asserted that Amundson had solved the problem of securing liquor in "dry" territory without ever paying for it. His plan, it is charged, was to send to different liquor houses, asking for a burry-up order of choice liquor, as he was about to celebrate either his birthday or wedding anniversary. Payment was to be made on receipt of the goods and the bill, but the order was to be filled and hurried along.

Amundson sent orders of this kind. It is said, to liquor houses in Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth and Ironton, as far as known, but the government attorneys suspect he has also patronized dealers in other cities. When the liquor men found that the anniversaries were becoming altogether too numerous, and finally turned the letters over to the government, Fitzsee of these are in the hands of the prosecuting attorney, and it has been learned that Amundson has had no less than three wedding anniversaries in the month of May, 1912, with others scattered along through the year and 1913. All consignments were to be sent prepaid, and when they came C. O. D. he felt himself justified in sent them back. Three consignments were returned because the dealers had forgotten to pay the express charges on them.

It is said on his behalf that if a convict can be found with stamps issued against him, it will virtually make the indicted government a collection agency for mail order houses, as anyone ordering goods by mail and failing to pay for them will be subject to arrest. The government attorneys do not take this view of the case, however.

SUGGESTIONS FOR STARTING THE GARDEN

A Porch Covered With Clematis—One of the Most Beautiful Flowering Vines We Have.

The first warm days lure the enthusiast into gardening, though the usual professed gardener will say there is no use forcing things in the open ground until it is warm and dry enough, so that the seed will germinate when the plow or spade turns it over.

But peas, onions, lettuce, and radishes will stand quite an amount of cold weather, and a few of each should be planted very early, with the assurance that while they may not prove more than a week in advance of the main planting, unless the weather is unusually severe, they will be ready for the table while the main crop is still in the first stage of growth.

Early crops enticed planted early will provide fresh onions even sooner than they can be obtained from sets, though the earlier ones are grown from sets of the Top onion, planted in the autumn.

In planting the garden, it pays to lay off a rectangular plot, planting everything in rows. Then the possibly can be worked during the early stages of growth with the one horse cultivator, if you here not the wheel tools.

The letter, however, will prove a splendid investment, even though the garden is only large enough to fully use. They work up close to the rows, and weeds, as well as much more from the seems amount of ground by having the rows close together than it is possible with horse cultivation. Even the best trained horse is liable to make a mistake in the installation of some tender plant.

The right tools, of varied form and methods of work, reduce the soil much more completely than the cultivator; soil so thoroughly worked is safe to resist drought.

Reserve one of the two rows at the side for parcenales like rhobarb, and for the borrico. And it is covered cet to set aside another for very early planting. Then the main part of the garden need not be plowed until dry, and still neither should it be worked with the other.

The early turnip-rooted radishes are the best for early use, preference being given to the long scarlet variety. Olive-colored ones are usually less crisp and tender, as well as less inviting in appearance.

Among the peas we have found no other early ones so good as the popular ize as the Gradon. So many of the varieties are exceedingly dwarf in size and in habit of the peas.

For starting seed in the kitchen window, very pretty boxes may easily be made from four sacks or any tough paper.

Cut a piece eight inches square and through the middle diagonally (Fig. 1). Fold one corner of the sacking the angle O a right angle (Fig. 2). Fold just a row to the top (Fig. 3), create the points at B, folding the one along the dotted line CA, and over to cot, and the other down on the opposite side in a similar manner.

It now opens at CA in a box. Several of these may be filled with rich soil and placed side by side in a window box, and the different varieties of seed planted then, kept separate.

When the plants need repotting, they may be put into pots each in the same manner. This method not only saves buying pots, but when transplanted again the paper can be torn off and the roots remain undisturbed.

If you are running an incubator at the same time when starting the seedlings, the box may be placed on top and the uniform warmth day and night will indince speedy germination of the seeds. If you have not available a place near the range may be found where the temperature is warm and nearly uniform.

After the plants are up, remove them to a cooler and frost-proof place. Heat causes them to dwindle, grow slimy, or spindling, and keep the soil moist. Allowing it to become dry, give it a shock that retards growth every time, even though we may not be able to realize it. This same treatment is given the kitchen promotes robust growth.

A few hills of very early cucumbers and melons may be started in the house either in inverted sods, or in paper pots. These are usually less prolific than the later ones planted in the ground; but they come on deliciously early.

If desired, a couple of seeds may be planted in each hill when the plants are set in the ground. Then, as the early ones prove that their vitality is questionable, they may be removed with tweezers, and the strongest left to grow.

Plan the garden in advance on paper, separating early and late corn, as well as having cucumbers, melons and watermelons far enough apart that pollen from one will not reach another readily. It is a curious exception to the rule that watermelons and muskmelon can be grown side by side without apparent injury, the two varieties of muskmelon or watermelon in addition, prove result in a worthless mongrel.

In planning for horse-cultivation, three feet apart is as near as the rows can be worked to advantage. If the wheel tools are used, onions, radishes, lettuce, spinach, beets, carrots, parsnips and turnips may be sown in rows only a foot apart.

Bush beans, early cabbage and peas need about two feet; late cabbages need about three feet, and the various vines from four to six feet apart. For convenience in cultivation, it is essential to so plant that the lines may be straight. Although it is not necessary to break in order to separate certain varieties, one or more days on the road—in many places merely a rough, stony track through mountain gorges. A string of six or eight mules is required, and you have to be smart at a harness when you haggle with the owner of the animals though as a matter of fact, the muleteer generally gets his price.

The contract must then be written and the muleteer official has said to it, for few of them can either read or write. But you are not through with the deal until you have paid over half or even three-quarters of the stipulated "ticket journey." The next best thing to the engagement of a smart boy for the road and a cook to look after the meals, and upon their character and the comfort of your caravan journey depends.

Expert Servants.

Persian servants could give points to the most expert swell mobsmen going. They have a genius for the very latest use of opportunities for plunder when the opportunities for the trip are bought. Gradually, however, the bulging of the bags begin to swell out with packets of tea, bags of sugar, tins of provisions rice, meat, bread, candles, cooking and other necessaries. You have also to provide a new samovar, plates, knives, forks, spoons, together with a teapot and teacups. While the samovar is being with the dealer the sellin endeavors to get rid of worthless furniture not forgetting a traveling carpet.

Fortunately, for eight months of the year in Persia the sun shines constantly on the blue blue sky, so the journeys are generally taken under ideal conditions. Rain adds the last item of desolation to the mostly barren land, making the roads impassable, and full of hungry, begging people, and the khans, or caravanseries, always full of hungry, begging people, and the khans, or caravanseries, always full of hungry, begging people, and the khans, or caravanseries, always

An example that can profitably be imitated by others is that set by Jos. Laurent in the improvements made on his property on Sixth and Elm streets. Mr. Laurent has cut down and leveled off his property there and in place of a rolling and hilly lawn he has now a level lawn about which he has planted trees and shrubbery, which in a few years will make the grounds a credit to Crookston. Last fall Mr. Laurent built a modern cottage on one of his lots at that place, and he is now remodeling the erection of more such cottages, which will in themselves be a credit to the city. Improvements made on the property by Mr. Laurent could be profitably copied by others, which would result in a more beautiful and cleanly Crookston.—Crookston Times.

TROUT AND BASS FRY

Twenty Cans "Planted" in the Clearwater River Saturday.

Twenty cans of rainbow trout and black bass fry were unloaded here and "planted" in the Clearwater river Saturday. The fry were very small and there were no doubt several thousand grose of them.

The fishermen are hopeful that the Clearwater river may some time become a good trout stream. They have reason for this fact that occasionally a small trout is taken from the stream. Two years ago, trout fry were "planted" in the stream and it is evident that some of them after reaching years of discretion have decided to stick around for awhile. If the Clearwater river can be made a good trout stream, fishermen will find it a delightful place for angling.

DOCTOR KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

CAR OVERTURNED—DR. ONSTAD OF MCINTOSH DEAD—OTHERS INJURED.

Mantor, Minn., May 28.—As a result of an accident when an automobile driven by Dr. Fisher of Fosston, turned turtle, Dr. J. Onstad of McIntosh, Minn., died yesterday from injuries received.

The other occupants were all more or less injured, Dr. Father seriously so, for a time not being expected to live, but reports tonight say that he will probably recover. Two other men, C. F. Meistad and I. Hillestad, were hurt slightly.

The automobile turned completely over. The car was the last of nine machines owned by Fosston parties who had spent the day in Crookston, and who were returning home.

When the machine jumped from the road and started down the ditch, Dr. Father gave it a sudden turn, almost twisting the front wheels at right angles with the body of the car.

The machine, turning completely over, landing on the wheels, which were crushed.

Dr. Onstad was thrown under the car, as Was Dr. Father. Onstad was taken to McIntosh, dying at his home there. Dr. Father is at his home in Fosston.

Whose Fault?

By DOROTHEA HALE

While walking in the country I came to a farm and, seeing a man at work, asked him for a glass of milk. He invited me into his house and set before me a pitcher full of rich milk.

"Drink form you have been, my friend," I said to him, "and a good house!"

That was as far as I could go in my concomium, for the interior of the house was in a slightly piggish condition.

"Yes," he said; "it's all I want."

"No, not all. You want a woman."

"You bet I don't. I don't want none o' them critters around."

"If you had one everything about you would be neat and tidy instead of out of order."

"That's the worst part of it. A man didn't go good at that sort o' thing."

"What hoe prejudiced you against women?"

"Weal, I had a gal onced, and she went back on me. One day when I went by a farm down the road a bit that had been bought by a new man named Brownell I saw the prettiest girl a-scoalin' over the fence you ever saw in your life. Her cheeks were as red as them roses growin' beside the porch, and her eyes were just sparklin' in her head. And you oughter seen that smile on her face. It seemed to come from heaven-like. There wasn't anything for her to smile at—only me, a plain country person, walkin' along the road. But somehow I couldn't git by. I stopped and asked her what she was smilin' about. She said she was very happy. Her family had both very poor, and somebody had died and left her mother some money, and they'd bought the farm with it and some new furniture and a lot o' good clothes. 'Isn't that somethin' to smile at?' she asked.

"'Oh,' I said, disappointed-like, 'I thort you was smilin' at me!'

"So I was."

"I didn't git by that farm that time or other times without stoppin' whenever Jinnie—that was her name—was outside, and one day her mother come out and asked me if I wouldn't come in and drink some buttermilk. I done it, and the old woman kind o' hinted that her darter, jist comin' into the place, didn't know nobody and found it kind o' lonesome. I told her there was a party to be at Sanders' party at Pioneer Bastrod's across the creek the next Saturday afternoon. I wouldn't mind drivin' Jinnie over there in my buggy. Jinnie's eyes lighted up at hearin' that, and she said she'd like to go mighty well. So I said I'd be on hand.

"I jist had time to paint my buggy and git it dry when Saturday come round, and, gittin' into my Sunday suit, I driv over to git the gal. Wasn't she fixed up fine! You bet! And when she snuggled down beside me in her ruffles and things and the smell o' violets and roses and a half pardon full of flowers I jist thort I'd go wild.

"At Bastrod's farm I wanted to keep it up, but I wasn't so mean as to act hoggish about it, so I introduced a lot of fellers, besides some gals. The fellers took to her like flies to honey, but that made me jealous of her and I fought shy.

"We was all huskin' the corn. Bill Jones was the setter by Jinnie, and all of a sudden I saw him take the husk often a red ear, and he jist throwed his arms around her neck and give her a big kiss.

"Strecker, did you ever have anything happen to you like that—a gal you was fond set on kissed by another feller? Weal the divil jist rix right up in me, and I thort I'd have to kill Bill Jones right there. But what made me noddest was that the gal didn't skin his jaw. She jist took it easy-like and went on huskin'.

"When it come time to go home I jist sat clonside of Jinnie and didn't speak a word to her all the way. She tried to talk, and I wouldn't answer her. When we driv up to the house she climbed down and didn't even thank me for takin' her to the huskin'.

"The next time I went by her mother's farm she was in the field pullin' up some turnips. Seein' me, she eh up and give me one of them smiles of hern, but I jist walked right on and didn't notice her. Somehow I'd got no idee into my head that she was tryin' to charm me like a snake. The next time I went by she left me alone, and she's done it ever since. Sometimes I think she wouldn't has to thet once she might bring me down, and if I'd see a man like her again I'd mighty kill him and her too.

"That's the reason, stranger, I don't want to get mixed up with a woman. The more a man's set on one of 'em the more it rises him if she don't stick to him alone."

"My friend," I said when he had finished his story, "what you have said proves nothing whatever. At a book ing a man is privileged to kiss on finding a red ear, and the girl who would object to being kissed on such an occasion would be a prude. In my opinion you made a hog of yourself after all. You go right down to Jennie, apologize and ask her pardon for your rudeness."

"You don't mean, stranger, that it wasn't all her fault?"

"On the contrary, it was all yours."

Seizing his hat, he left the house without a word, and I saw him making at a quick pace down the road.

I am happy to say that he was forgiven, and the next time I went into his house it looked spick and span.

SEND FOR BLANKS FOR CORN CONTEST

TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS IN SPECIAL CASH PRIZES OFFERED BY FAIR.

As has been stated in previous announcements, the officers of the Red Lake county fair have decided to offer some big cash prizes for corn, potatoes and farmers who will plant at least fifteen acres of corn this season. Two hundred dollars in cash is offered and the farmer who pulls down the first prize and the sweepstakes will get more than seventy-five dollars in cash.

The purpose of the offer of big prizes is to induce the growing of more corn. There is little doubt that farmers will be pleased with the results of their efforts aside from any prize money they may win.

Farmers who contemplate entering the contest for the big prizes are asked to send to A. Robertus, secretary of the fair association, for blanks. They will be asked to keep a simple record of the corn crop about as follows:

....Carrier, Section...., Township ....., Range....., No. of acres planted....., kind planted....., kind of crop grown on land in 1913....., kind of soil....., when plowed.. ....., how deep....., No. of times harrowed before planted....., after planted..... No. of times cultivated....., was corn drilled or checked in the rows....., was corn as best, poorest soil on farm....., was the land fertilized....., when....., what kind of fertilizer....., amount used....., No. of days from planting until corn was fully matured....., was the stand good....., No. of bushels of rain from date of planting to maturity....., amount of rain in inches or centimeters....., was corn affected by frost....., at a conservative estimate (80 lbs. per bu.) what is the yield per acre....., give date you selected and gathered seed corn from this field....., No. of bushels of seed corn (80 lbs. per bu.) gathered....., how many lbs. of seed corn have you for sale...., at what price....., do you intend to plant corn next year....., how many acres....., what kind....., do you believe that with reasonable care and cultivation corn can be grown successfully every year....., would you advise an increased acreage of corn each year.

FUN FOR EVERYBODY

U. C. T. Convention at Crookston Will be One Big Celebration.

C. W. Final, the "main squeeze" for the U. C. T. convention to be held in Crookston Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week, was in town today and while here he made the statement that though Sam S. Hunt is the only member of the order living in Red Lake Falls, he expected several hundred other Red Lake Falls people and Sam to be in Crookston for the fun. He says that the entertainment is just as free for the public as for the U. C. T. people. "There'll be just two places where it will be necessary to give a pass word, and you won't want to go there, for there'll be more fun outside," is the way he describes the situation.

The gathering is to be the convention of the 23 subordinate councils of the states of Minnesota and North Dakota and probably more than a thousand traveling salesmen will attend the convention.

Thursday night will mark the opening of Crookston's new white way and Saturday will probably be the big day. There will be a big parade Saturday followed by a program of sports at the park, including a water base ball game.

Professional performers will give entertainments on the streets each day. There will be seven or more bands and several knee ball games. Everything in the way of entertainment in the town for three days will be free except theatre tickets and hotel accommodations.

Everybody is invited to enjoy the fun.

Bids Wanted.

Notice is hereby given that the contract for cutting 75 cords of pond between sections 20 and 21, Lake Pleasant township, will be let on or June 17, 1913. The contract will be given to the lowest bidder at a public sale of the same on the ground at 2 o'clock p. m. of said day.

By order of the board of supervisors of Lake Pleasant township.

HELP THE CARRIER

Don't Force Him to Plow Through Snow in Winter and Sod in Summer.

There is surely unavoidable delay in the rural mail service in the winter, but when carriers are forced to wade through snow, but the carriers complain that they are having experience that should be avoided. They are compelled to wade through sod plied in the road. Some people in attempting to keep the roads have plowed sod into the middle of the highway that was just getting in fine condition for travel, and have left it without making any effort to drag it or smooth it down.

If people will do discourage the rural delivery of mail they are accomplishing just that purpose when they use the antiquated method of "fixing" the roads.

CROOK LANDS BANKER

Smooth Gentleman Got Away With Fifteen Hundred in Cold Cash.

J. W Wheeler, the former Crookston banker, now president of the Capital Trust Co., St. Paul, had a recent experience with a smooth crook that will be of interest to local people since Mr. Wheeler is well known here.

The St. Paul Daily News tells the story as follows:

Police and private detectives throughout the Northwest are looking for "J. Cox" alleged Minneola merchant, who late Tuesday, by manipulating an old game, in a slightly new way succeeded in getting away with $1,500 in cash and a treasurer's check for $3,500 from the Capital Trust Co., Capital National Bank Building, St. and Robert streets.

The Burns National Detective agency has been given the case.

"The Trust company has stopped payment on the check Cox carried away with him.

"Cox, while tottering with age, was plaged in an unusual manner and with such skill that it completely disarmed the bank officials, according to J. W. Wheeler, president.

"'W. T. Hornsdell, real estate dealer, 210 New York Life building, was trying to swing a deal for the Salvation Army. The Army could not secure the necessary amount of cash for the purchase of certain real estate that Hornsdell had to offer, so the agent party advertised for a third who would advance the money.

"'Cox' answered. He said he had $2,000, that he would buy property outright and then sell it to the Salvation Army on contract.

"He produced a draft for $5,000 on a New York bank. He wished it cashed and the money placed to his credit at the bank. Hornsdell introduced Cox to Mr. Wheeler.

"Hornsdell, being a depositor at the bank,his word was implicitly believed by Mr. Wheeler. The real estate dealer indorsed the draft and left with Cox.

"Next day Cox said something to Hornsdell about buying an automobile, the story goes. Hornsdell identified him at the bank, and he drew $1,500 in cash, and took a treasurer's check for the remaining $3,500.

"On the street Cox left Hornsdell. He has not been seen since.

"Late Monday his draft came back from New York with the information that it was fraudulent.

"We meet with lots of his kind every year," said Mr. Wheeler today. "I have been in the banking business since 1889 and never was caught before.

"The fact that one of our patrons said he knew the man completely disarmed us, and Mr. Cox succeeded in putting him over.

"He is out somewhere now, I suppose,spending $1,500 of good St. Paul money. The check is worthless to him now."

OBSERVANCE OF GOOD ROADS DAY

MANY LOCALITIES ARE PREPARING TO CELEBRATE JUNE 17.

(Special Correspondence.)

St. Paul, June 2.—Minnesota's growing list of holidays, on which the people are asked to lay aside business and affairs of state and celebrate, has an interesting addition this year in the shape of a "Good Roads day." June 17 is the date set aside for its observance and Governor Eberhart, in accordance with a law passed by the last legislature giving the day legal standing throughout the state, has issued a proclamation fixing the date named for its observance and asking that all persons interested in good roads enter into the spirit of the occasion. Already letters telling of preparations for the purpose of making the day a gala one have been received from a number of districts and the new holiday looks as if it would work out into something of more than ordinary profit to the state as a whole. Representative Dunn, the author of the latest thing in good roads legislation, was the one who incorporated in the good roads act passed by the late legislature a provision creating a Good Roads day and his district is preparing to observe it in a manner that will create general interest in road construction and improvement work. On June 17 the village of Princeton will honor the day by the construction and improvement of half a mile of road within its confines and the several cars of crushed stone from St. Cloud for the occasion. Interested residents will furnish teams and labor and with their wives and families will make the day one long to be remembered. The one time hunking hoe or the house raising day of old will not be in it in the way of fun and pleasure which this particular occasion will provide. Other districts throughout the state observing of what Princeton is preparing to do have in mind a similar observance of the day.

There is now on the statute books two road acts of more than ordinary length, the Dunn law, passed by the last legislature, and the Elwell act, a product of the state lawmakers two sessions back, although a meeting of the highway commission the other day I could not but be impressed with the fact that the oldest of these must go soon or else the best of its features be incorporated with the Dunn law. The two laws and the efforts of those interested in good highways to get out of both the best for their particular project only leads to confusion. Another thing that impressed was the need of freedom on the part of the highway commission from the vexatious made by county boards and town councils in the location of proposed roads and the demand by all as a rule for the consideration of their scheme of laterals and trunk lines instead of a comprehensive system of state highways which the commission is directing every effort to obtain. Centralization of effort and authority is now the order of the day. It has been extended to many lines of government and effort and some day Minnesota will have such centralization without local interference in the matter of its highways.

When General James H. Baker died at his home in Mankato last week history recorded the passing of one whose life and political activities, while a resident of the state, were of more than ordinary interest. A veteran of the Indian and Civil wars, General Baker was not content with the honors that came with such a service, but continued his activities in a political way that easily made him the first Republican in Minnesota for a number of years. Twice he served the state as its secretary, for several years he was surveyor general and up to the time of the passing of the state convention he was prominently identified with every state Republican gathering held. At the national gatherings he was always a prominent figure. His last appearance was at the convention which nominated President Taft. When John Lind ran for congress in the second district Senator Baker was his Republican opponent. Besides being identified with the political life of Minnesota General Baker found time to write a number of books, his last being the biographies of the governors of Minnesota. He was the founder of the Mankato Free Press.

GENTILLY WINS AGAIN

Gets the High Score in the State Scoring Contest for Cheese.

Rev. Fr. Thellien of Gentilly has been elected by Joel O. Winkler, dairy and food commissioner, that an honor that has frequently gone to Gentilly has been won again.

In the monthly scoring contest for cheese the cheese made by Buttermaker Barron got the high score, 97 points.

BIG GAME SUNDAY.

Locals Will Take on Grand Forks A. C.

A ball game that will no doubt be an interesting contest is scheduled to be played on the local grounds Sunday afternoon between Red Lake Falls team and the "White Sox" of Grand Forks. The locals have not been defeated and the boys are determined to hand the fellows from the big Dakota town the short end of the score.

VALUE OF WEIGHING AND TESTING

INTERESTING ARTICLE BY PAUL CARPENTER ON THE HIGH SCORE FACTOR.

Dairying can never become an unqualified success until the boarders in the board can be weeded out. Red Lake county has a couple of high development must necessarily be limited until the cows paying little or no profit are detected and removed from the milking herds. In too many instances the cows' culture in the herd are going to the block, because their value, as compared to the others, is not appreciated.

There is but one means of determining with certainty the value and profit of a cow, and that is by the regular use of scales and Babcock test. The milk must be weighed at rather regular intervals and that milk tested for the fat it contains. It is clear to any one that the amount of milk a cow gives varies considerably from day to day and from month to month. The scale must be used frequently to determine the quantity of milk produced. Furthermore, "testing out a cow" means a great deal more than testing merely one sample of her milk. It may not be very evident to the eye, but the test of the milk varies more widely than the weight produced varies from day to day. Milk tests must be made often enough to give an average on what a cow is doing.

By weighing and testing the milk of each cow in the herd for two days in the middle of each month, a very close approximation of what the cow is doing can be secured. Each milking for the two days is weighed and a small sample from each cow placed in a separate bottle. There is a Babcock for each cow and at the end of the weighing period each bottle contains samples from four milkings. The composite samples are then tested and the fat yield of the month is based upon the work of the cow for the two days. To weigh the milk of a cow, take a sample for testing, and record the weight upon a suitable sheet, is the chief half a day's work and can be done by a ten year old child.

In the minds of many people the testing of milk is a mysterious process, something of which nothing at the will of the operator. The fact is the matter is the testing of milk is exceedingly simple and may be done by any one who can operate a baling mill with success. It is work that the owners of two dozen cows years can do with complete satisfaction. All he needs to do is to follow simple directions.

And now for the equipment. A first class circular dial milk scale weighing to thirty pounds by twelfths costs but $3.50. It has two dials, one of which is set back to zero when the empty milk pail is placed on it, the weighing of milk this hand is read directly,necessitating no subtraction on account of the weight of the pail. This scale is a strictly high grade article and is good for many years.

A tester taking four samples at a time costs $6.50 with all glassware for testing milk. It too is well made with carefully fitted and adjusted gears. It may be mounted on a board or clamped to a table.

Both scales and testers are carried in stock by almost all hardware dealers.

THE MEMORIAL DAY EXERCISES

APPROPRIATE OBSERVANCE OF THE NATIONAL HOLIDAY IN RED LAKE FALLS

Memorial day, Friday, May 30, was appropriately observed in Red Lake Falls with exercises commencing at 10 o'clock.

The march participated in by the veterans, the Red Lake Falls Concert Band of thirty-five pieces and school children terminated at the courthouse grounds where the exercises were held.

The program included patriotic selections by the band, the reading of Lincoln's Gettysburg address and short patriotic addresses by Supt. E. I. Cook, Attorney Fred L. Parker and Rev. David V. Richardson.

At the conclusion of the program the band escorted the veterans to the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Buss and the "old boys" were guests of Capt. Ernest Buss for dinner.

Seven veterans participated in the march and the number was increased to eleven before the opening of the program on the court house grounds.

The Gazette is of the opinion that the time has arrived when the veterans should be relieved of much of the work of arranging for Memorial Day observance and suggests that in future years a citizens' committee be appointed, as is done in many other places, to act under the direction of the veterans.

T. A. Crompe will leave Sunday to go to Winona, where he will on Monday attend the state convention of the Catholic Order of Foresters as a delegate from the local C. O. F. lodge. Mr. Crompe before returning will spend a few days in the twin cities.

BAND CONCERT.

Band Boys will Give Program on Monday Evening.

On Monday evening the Red Lake Falls concert band will give an open air concert in front of the city hall. The reorganized band is a big organization, there being more than thirty-five pieces. The boys are making excellent progress and Monday evening's concert will be worth hearing.

The boys have been diligently rehearsing for their appearance at Thief River Falls during the firemen's convention and they will go to Thief River Tuesday morning. Though the band now contains many young members, very satisfactory results have been accomplished with the older members taking the heavier parts and there is no doubt that the band will make a creditable showing at Thief River Falls.

STATE FAIR EXHIBIT

Commissioners Appropriate Funds For the Purpose—E. G. Buss in Charge.

The board of county commissioners, in session Monday, made an appropriation of $200 for the purpose of defraying the expenses of a Red Lake county exhibit at the Minnesota state fair in September. E. G. Buss was appointed to have charge of the exhibit.

In no other way can the resources of Red Lake county be so effectively advertised as by the making of an attractive display of the products of the county at the state fair. Thousands of people from all over the northwest visit the big fair and many of them every day of the fair will make note of the showing that Red Lake County will make.

BOND ELECTION FRIDAY NIGHT

POLLS OPEN ONLY ONE HOUR —ELECTION AT THE CITY HALL.

The special election to vote on the proposition to issue and negotiate bonds in the amount of $18,000 for the construction of a new public school building in Red Lake Falls will be held at the city hall Friday evening, June 6.

Voters should bear in mind that for this election, like other school elections, the polls will be open one hour only, from seven until eight o'clock, and that there is to be just one polling place, the city hall.

ANOTHER FROM BROOKS.

Local Ball Team Took Memorial Day Game.

The second ball game of the season between the Red Lake Falls and Brooks teams, played on the local grounds on the afternoon of Memorial day, resulted in a victory for Red Lake Falls by a score of 6 to 1. It was a rather interesting and well played game.

The Brooks fellows were unable to get to Kestabelan for any very effective practice and the locals gave their pitcher somewhat better support than did the Brooks boys their heaver. Though Conners pitched a steady game, the locals touched him up for several good drives.

It can be said that the locals won the game on merit—by putting up a little better article of ball in all departments. The Brooks fellows played a very good defensive game. Brooks is reported to have a second to an excellent ball team for a small town.

SYNOPSIS.

Old Cannon, the banana king, and his daughter, Rose, who had married Cornelius Ryan's half brother, Jack Ryan, secretary and attorney of Cannon's Dominick Ryan failed to his mother to tell her of his marriage, but she had refused. The determined old lady decided to recognize her daughter-in-law. Dominick had been brought up by Cannon as an heir. After three weeks, and of himself, Dominick, Cannon's secretary, Stella Rose he doesn't love, but never has met. Hollingshead people begin to desert Cannon and Dominick's friends, father and mother, Dominick's mother, and Cannon's brother Gene is made manager of Cannon and is to get it if he stays sober a year. Cannon expresses sympathy for Dominick's marriage to suit with Stella Rose. Dominick's mother, Mrs. Morris Dominick, refuses to receive him, but he is indifferent. Cannon calls on Mrs. Ryan. They discuss Dominick's matrimonial affairs. Cannon suggests buying off Darcy. Dominick finds Stella Rose's mother, Mrs. Darcy, a society lady. After Cannon leaves Mrs. Ryan and starts uneasiness in Darcy.

Yet, in Darcy, this hectic prospect looked great; all color seemed sucked from it, it appeared pale and sleek, its comfortable luxuriousness gone. She was like a stranger walking in a strange place, a forlorn, remote land where she felt miserable and homesick. The sense of being shut out was passing from her. Walking forward with short, careful steps, she was slowly coming to the meaning of her discovery—adjusting herself to it, realizing its significance. She had the uncomfortable sensation of not being able to control the muscles around her mouth, so that if spoken to she would have had difficulty in answering, and would have been quite unable to smile.

An open carriage passed her, and she drew aside, then mechanically looked after it as it rolled forward. There was a single figure in it—a woman. Berny could see her head over the lowered hood, and the little parasol she held, white with a black lace cover and having a polka dot in the handle. Her eyes followed this receding head, coming so evenly against the background of trees. It seemed along with vast sinking or rising, with the even, forward flight of a bird, passed Hannah and Josh and Hazel, turning to drop in their wake, things which seemed, from its elevated position and the abstruseness of the inspection, to have something of disdain in them.

As the carriage drew near Dominick, who walked at the head of the line with Pearl by the hand, Berny saw the head move, lean forward and then, as the vehicle overhauled and passed the young man, turn at right angles and bow to him. The wheel almost brushed his shoulder. He drew back from it with a start and lifted his hat. Hazel, who was walking just in front of Berny, turned and projecting her lips so that they stood out from her face in a red circle, hissed through them:

"Old Lady Ryan!" and then in a slightly louder key:

"You take a hatchet and I'll take a saw,

And we'll cut off the head of my mother-in-law."

CHAPTER XIII.

The Root of All Evil.

The conversation with her aunt had fixed upon Mrs. Ryan. These were grievances she did not talk of to all the world, and the luxury of such plain speaking was paid for by a revivalesced smart. The numb pain and sorrow was always with her, but her consciousness of it was dulled in the diversion of every day occupations. Bringing it to the surface this way gave it a new vitality, and when the conversation was over and the visitor gone it refused to subside into its old place.

She went slowly up stairs, bearing the low murmur of voices from the sitting-room where Cornelia and Jack Duffy were still secluded. Even the thought of that satisfactorily laddish romance did not cheer her as it had done earlier in the day. As she had told Cassidy, she was not the woman she had been. Old age was coming on her and with it a softening of her iron nature. She had loved Jack, her Benjamin, dearly beloved with all the forces of her maturity at his return, had been with all the glow of her youth.

In her own room she threw aside the lace curtains, thinking out on the splendor of the afternoon, determined to seek cheer in the open air. Like all Californians she had a belief in the healing beneficence of air and sunlight. As she sat down on the bed Berny of her sense of care so now it wooed her enemy also to seek peace in its balm. She rang for the servant and ordered the carriage. A few minutes later, clad in rich nondescript black, she slowly made her way down stairs and out to the stable where was the victoria, glittering in the trim perfection of its appointments and drawn by a pair of well-matched chestnuts, stood at the curb.

The man on the box touched his hat with respectful greeting and the chestnuts bowed their head acceptingly. Berny stepped in, and the carriage moved forward.

Where to go? Her mind had not been unkind. She was out of themselves and she knew how to manage them, how to soothe them understand that she was master, and that no drones were permitted in her hive; how to make them feel that she had a heart that sympathized with them, not as creatures of an alien class carefully removed from her own, but as fellow beings, having the same passions, griefs and hopes as herself.

As the carriage rolled forward she settled herself against the cushioned seat and let her eyes roam over the prospect. It was the hour of the afternoon when, still untouched by chill, not a breath stirring. Passing up the long drive which leads to the park, the dust raised by wheels hung ruddy in the air. The long shadows of trees stripped the roadway in an irregular black pat-tern, picked out with quiverings of sunshine, like a spilled, gold liquid. Odds of fragrance, the breathe of flowering shrubs, scented the warm air, coppices, and sometimes the keen, acrid odor of eucalyptus mingled with the air. From this lane of entrance the park spread familiar into a still gracious placence. The rich, golden light slept on level stretches of turf and thick mounded-shaped groups of trees. The throb of music—the thin, ethereal music of a merry-go-round swelled and sank; the voices of children rose clear and fine from occasional distances, and once the raucous cry of a peacock split the quietness, seeming to break through the delicate serenity of the lovely, dreamy scene.

Mrs. Ryan and Dominick stood near the seat in a sphinx-like in profundity of expression. People in passing carriages bowed to her but she did not return the salute, her head and body and thick mounded-shaped groups of trees. SHRINE IS RUINED

Napoleon's Last Dwelling Place Failing to Pieces.

After Visit to St. Helena, Traveler Says Memorial to Emperor Is Being Neglected and Annual Grants Begrudged.

Paris.—A feeling of strong dissatisfaction has been aroused here by the facts that have just been made public as to the deplorable condition into which Napoleon's last place and tomb at St. Helena has fallen.

In a volume entitled "After the Emperor's Death," the well-known historian, Albert Cahuet, prints a vivid description of these memorials of French history, which were acquired by the government from England in 1858, for $36,713, and vigorously combats the movement now on foot to reduce, if not cut off entirely, the annual grants for their support.

To one would imagine he was visiting a shooting shelter for sale," he writes. "All the doors are open. In the first room, where Napoleon died, is a small altar, painted blue, and opposite it is a bust of the emperor. A wooden balustrade marks the exact spot where he drew his last breath.

"All the other rooms are absolutely empty, everything that could be removed having been carried away long ago by foreigners as souvenirs. One sees only a feeling of desolation and poignant sadness. The emperor's house only just remains standing on its old plan. Very soon the violent winds with torrential rains will here their way in.

"The superficial repairs and the cost of paint, and so on, figure in the well papers, put on in 1911, will not compensate for the crumbling foundations of the walls.

"The present caretaker, who is at least a man of good intentions, prote to me recently:

"'Napoleon's tomb, in the Valley of Geranium,' continues M. Cahuet, 'is the shabbiest of the European tombs to be exposed, but the guardian's continual vigilance is necessary to prevent the surrounding farmers from pasturing their cattle in the valley, which is the property of the French government. His efforts to have the tomb protected keep him in constant conflict with other residents of the island.

"As a matter of fact, both the house and the sepulcher are now the subject of a useless burden on the budget of foreign affairs to the extent of $1,200 annually—$1,200 for the caretaker's salary and $600 for the expenses of upkeep and of the watchman. Attempts have been made to reduce this amount, and in a few months, when take old house tumbles down, the French government will withdraw from Longwood. In that way the ruined Laval and the empty tomb will be definitely abandoned."

OLDEST COMMUTER IS DEAD

J. T. Terry Made Almost Daily Trips Between New York and Tarrytown for 60 Years.

New York.—John Taylor Terry, one of the oldest merchants of New York who died recently in his ninety-second year, is spoken of in obituary notices as "probably the oldest commuter in the world." He had a record of almost daily trips by train between his estate and Tarrytown and New York for more than sixty years, and during that time became a leading figure in financial and commercial circles of the city.

He started his career as a clerk in the importing and banking house of E. D. Morgan in 1833, and became a partner of Governor Morgan of Civil war fame.

Refuses to Advise Governor.

Springfield, Ill.—The Supreme court has declared that it is not for the Supreme court to advise the governor as he shall perform his constitutional duties.

"No more business or defenseless person could be put into wards than to say that the power of the governor granted to itself authority to pass upon the constitutionality of the chief executive or legislative acts," the court says.

Raised Dogs on Firenze.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Because of pet dogs, cats of the highest blood and kind cages with their companions, tumbled down on the heads of firemen who endeavored to put out a fire in a big apartment house. When seeking to gain falling rooms, the women threw their most valued possessions to the first. Several valuable dogs and cats were killed by falls.

Yet, in Darcy, this hectic prospect looked great; all color seemed sucked from it, it appeared pale and sleek, its comfortable luxuriousness gone. She was like a stranger walking in a strange place, a forlorn, remote land where she felt miserable and homesick. The sense of being shut out was passing from her. Walking forward with short, careful steps, she was slowly coming to the meaning of her discovery—adjusting herself to it, realizing its significance. She had the uncomfortable sensation of not being able to control the muscles around her mouth, so that if spoken to she would have had difficulty in answering, and would have been quite unable to smile.

An open carriage passed her, and she drew aside, then mechanically looked after it as it rolled forward. There was a single figure in it—a woman. Berny could see her head over the lowered hood, and the little parasol she held, white with a black lace cover and having a polka dot in the handle. Her eyes followed this receding head, coming so evenly against the background of trees. It seemed along with vast sinking or rising, with the even, forward flight of a bird, passed Hannah and Josh and Hazel, turning to drop in their wake, things which seemed, from its elevated position and the abstruseness of the inspection, to have something of disdain in them.

As the carriage drew near Dominick, who walked at the head of the line with Pearl by the hand, Berny saw the head move, lean forward and then, as the vehicle overhauled and passed the young man, turn at right angles and bow to him. The wheel almost brushed his shoulder. He drew back from it with a start and lifted his hat. Hazel, who was walking just in front of Berny, turned and projecting her lips so that they stood out from her face in a red circle, hissed through them:

"Old Lady Ryan!" and then in a slightly louder key:

"You take a hatchet and I'll take a saw,

CHAPTER XIII.

The Root of All Evil.

The conversation with her aunt had fixed upon Mrs. Ryan. These were grievances she did not talk of to all the world, and the luxury of such plain speaking was paid for by a revivalesced smart. The numb pain and sorrow was always with her, but her consciousness of it was dulled in the diversion of every days occupations. Bringing it to the surface this way gave it a new vitality, and when the conversation was over and the visitor gone it refused to subside into its old place.

She went slowly up stairs, bearing the low murmur of voices from the sitting-room where Cornelia and Jack Duffy were still secluded. Even the thought of that satisfactorily laddish romance did not cheer her as it had done earlier in the day. As she had told Cassidy, she was not the woman she had been. Old age was coming on her and with it a softening of her iron nature. She had loved Jack, her Benjamin, dearly beloved with all the forces of her maturity at his return, had been with all the glow of her youth.

In her own room she threw aside the lace curtains, thinking out on the splendor of the afternoon, determined to seek cheer in the open air. Like all Californians she had a belief in the healing beneficence of air and sunlight. As she sat down on the bed Berny of her sense of care so now it wooed her enemy also to seek peace in its balm. She rang for the servant and ordered the carriage. A few minutes later, clad in rich nondescript black, she slowly made her way down stairs and out to the stable where was the victoria, glittering in the trim perfection of its appointments and drawn by a pair of well-matched chestnuts, stood at the curb.

The man on the box touched his hat with respectful greeting and the chestnuts bowed their head acceptingly. Berny stepped in, and the carriage moved forward.

Where to go? Her mind had not been unkind. She was out of themselves and she knew how to manage them, how to soothe them understand that she was master, and that no drones were permitted in her hive; how to make them feel that she had a heart that sympathized with them, not as creatures of an alien class carefully removed from her own, but as fellow beings, having the same passions, griefs and hopes as herself.

As the carriage rolled forward she settled herself against the cushioned seat and let her eyes roam over the prospect. It was the hour of the afternoon when, still untouched by chill, not a breath stirring. Passing up the long drive which leads to the park, the dust raised by wheels hung ruddy in the air. The long shadows of trees stripped the roadway in an irregular black pat-tern, picked out with quiverings of sunshine, like a spilled, gold liquid. Odds of fragrance, the breathe of flowering shrubs, scented the warm air, coppices, and sometimes the keen, acrid odor of eucalyptus mingled with the air. From this lane of entrance the park spread familiar into a still gracious placence. The rich, golden light slept on level stretches of turf and thick mounded-shaped groups of trees. The throb of music—the thin, ethereal music of a merry-go-round swelled and sank; the voices of children rose clear and fine from occasional distances, and once the raucous cry of a peacock split the quietness, seeming to break through the delicate serenity of the lovely, dreamy scene.

Mrs. Ryan and Dominick stood near the seat in a sphinx-like in profundity of expression. People in passing carriages bowed to her but she did not return the salute, her head and body

How to Win Games

Some General Rules that All Players—Both on the Field and in the Grandstand—Should Understand

By Hugh S. Fullerton

(Copyright, 1914, by W. G. Chapman)

Detroit rest is world's championship by doing one little thing wrong. Chicago threw away two by wrong selecting. Pittsburgh, with the highest honor within grasp, chose wrong just once and was beaten. Philadelphia's great Athletics came near defeat at the hands of a much weaker team by two bits of faulty play. Not one of these vital things that affected great series was an error that showed in the scores. They were examples of how the wisest of players and managers will make the wrong choice when one of two things must be done. The plays considered here are those that are played over and over when the "if clash" is in session. For, given a situation and the stage of the game, ninety-nine out of a hundred major league players can tell exactly how that play should be made. It is the purpose of this article not so much to show how plays should be made, as when. A perfectly executed play may be correct at one time, and entirely wrong a moment later. I am going on the assumption that every boy in America knows how to play baseball, and understands the rules, by which one the baseball primer. This tells how the primer is interpreted and applied by major league players.

As regards offensive baseball, the making of runs, there are two great types of teams; the teams that play for one run at a time (a game now mercifully handicapped), and those that play for runs in bunches. Inside the last two years a change in conditions has forced a revolution in play and has brought a period of systematic attack with a view of making a bunch of runs at one time. Roughly speaking it may be said that for five years the American league has been developing this system while most of the National league teams were "one run at a time" clubs. Notable exceptions were the New York Giants in the National, which played the bunched runs game, and the Chicago White Sox, a team that, being strong in pitchers and weak in hitters, played for one run.

The team that plays for one run at a time must here supreme confidence in its pitchers. The entire system is based on the supposition that the pitcher is strong enough to hold the opposing team to a low score.

I have seen Connie Mack's Athletics three runs behind, perhaps in the fourth or fifth inning, supreme in their confidence in their pitcher, make the one run safe, and crawling up run by run, tie and then win out. The Chicago White Sox, under Fielder Jones, and the Chicago Cubs during the time that Chance possessed pitchers upon whom he could rely, played the same style of ball and won. But a study of the clocs of the same change, the style of play to meet them must also change.

There are three ways of reaching first base: A base on balls, by being hit by a pitched ball, by hitting the ball. The first two methods are so closely allied as to be one, and they form by far the most important part of the system of attack of any club. No team ever won a pennant that was not a "waiting team"—that is, one that could compel the opposing pitcher to "put 'em over in the groove." It does not necessarily follow that a team of "good waiting" a team must draw many free passes to first. The object is not so much to force the pitcher to serve four wide pitches as to force him to use his full strength, and to get him "in the hole," which in baseball means to force him into a position where, to avoid serving a pass, he must pitch the ball over the plate. If the count is two and no strikes, the batter is forced certain the next ball will be over the plate, whether it is straight or a curve and he also knows that, in his anxiety to make certain of throwing the ball over the plate, the pitcher will not dare "put as much on" the ball as he would do if there were two strikes and one or two balls called. Therefore he is

ALL LOST BY SELFISHNESS

Though Altogether Too Common an Error, It is the Most of the Worst of the Human Race.

Imagine a rose that would say to itself: "I cannot afford to give away all my beauty and sweetness; I must keep it for myself. I will roll up my petals and withhold my fragrance."

But, behold, the moment the rose tries to store up its colors and treasure of fragrance, to withhold them from others, they vanish. The colors and fragrance do not exist in the unopened bud. It is only when the rose begins to open itself, to give out its sweetness, its life, to others that its beauty and fragrance are developed.

So human selfishness defeats its own ends. He who refuses to give himself for others, who closes the doors of his charity and withholds the fragrance of his sympathy and love, finds that he loses the very thing he tries to keep. The syrians practically certain that the next ball will be a good one to hit, and he will "set himself," "grab a toe hold," and double his chances of a base hit.

Ordinarily both the Detroit team and the Athletics are good waiting teams, teams that have opposing pitchers in distress perhaps as often as any clubs. Yet Detroit threw away a World's championship that looked sure, and the Athletics came near the same fate, by lapses in their generalship in the World's series between Pittsburg and Detroit it looked as if the Pirates did not have curve pitchers enough, or of sufficient quality, to prevent Detroit from slugging its way to victory. Fred Clark was forced to fall back upon Adams, a fairly good but not sensational curve ball pitcher, who was used sparingly during the season.

In the opening game Adams was as nervous and shaken as any pitcher ever was. He was trembling and white from nervousness and the strain. He passed the first batter, forced getting a ball over the plate, and with Bush, one of the best waiters and one of the hardest men in the business to pitch to, he should have used this system with wonderful success, and Crawford set down fells to cover Cobb's movements. The "All Star" team of 1910, which prepared the Athletics for their first championship, was composed of about as quick thinking a crowd of players as could be assembled. There was not a meeting before they went into the first game against the champions and discussed signals. The second baseman, shortstop and catcher agreed on simple signs to notify the pitcher whether the shortstop or second baseman would take the throw at second. Then they decided not to attempt any other signal, but to play run and hit. Not once, during the whole season in which they beet the Champions decisively, did any batter fail to see the runner start, or neglect to protect him.

The run and hit is, of course, extremely difficult for inexperienced players. It requires a quick eye, a quick wit and a quick swing to hit the ball after catching a fleeting glimpse of the runner moving.

The run and hit is the most effective style of attack yet devised, and especially adapted to the new conditions, circumstances as a run game and also in advancing runners being greatly increased after the adoption of the livelier ball, late in 1910.

There is not, nor ever can be, any fixed rule regarding base running. It is all a study of the stages of the game. When one run is needed, any way to get to second base from first is the proper way. Remember that, in base running, the more the situation is studied to call for an effort to steal the less chance to steal is given. The opposing pitcher knows that, with two out and a run dangerously near third, the batter on first will probably attempt to steal on the first pitched ball, therefore he watches the batter more closely, the catcher is expecting the attempt, and is fortified, the second baseman and shortstop exchange signals and decide which will receive the throw. Therefore the runner who tries steals on "the wrong ball," that is, steals when the best conditions for a clare a steal should not be made, is much more likely to accomplish the steal than is the one who runs at the proper instant. In other words, when the batter must run seldom can, and when you don't need to it is easy. During last season in both the major leagues the runners violated every previously accepted rule. They stole with none out, with one or two out, stole on the first, second, third or fourth ball pitched, stole even with the count one strike and three balls. The season were a revelation to baseball of 15 years ago in base running.

After reaching second base the problem of the steal is made more complicated. Most managers oppose stealing third, except in rare cases, on the grounds that the risk does not justify the gain, as a hit or a bad error will score a runner from second as easily as it will from third.

In regard to the stealing of third. With a runner on second and no one out, the sacrifice bunt, even with the new ball, seems the play if the score is close—that is, close enough for one run to tie, or put the attacking team in the lead. With one out the steal is justified, especially when the fielders around second do not hold up runners or when the pitcher notoriously is weak in watching bases. In that situation I would advise attempts to steal at every opportunity provided the team is ahead or only one run behind. If more than one run behind, stay at second and wait for hits; the chances of scoring on short passed balls, wild pitches or fielding that would not permit scoring from second are too small to be counted on. The only justification for stealing third with two out, by any club that the runner intends to bump or interfere with the third baseman and strive to block or scare him into letting the ball go past far enough to permit scoring. This evidently was McGraw's idea in at least two cases during the last world's series—other that or his base runners blundered most astonishingly.

Stealing home is justifiable only under the most desperate conditions or against a pitcher who palpably is so "settled" that he is blind to everything except the mitt at the plate and allows the runner a flying start. Then an instant of hesitation by the pitcher may make the steal a success. It is a good judgment, at times, for a fast, darting man who is a dangerous base stealer when the batter is helpless before a pitcher and when two are out.

The double steal, executed with runners on first and third, is according to the closest students of the game, proper under the following conditions: When two men are out and a weak batter or a slow runner is at the plate, and when one run is needed to win the game—the play is the letter case being first base with no one out, or with two out—but not with only one out. Many judges object to the play unless two runs are needed, but season I saw it worked repeatedly by clever teams with no one out. With runners on first and third and a decent catcher working, the double steal worked to get a runner over the plate, ought not to succeed in more than two cases in seven.

In the defensive end of the game every baseball is a study of the batter, and, going beyond the individual batter it is a study of the stage of the game. The great problems of the game are: When to play the infield close, to check bunting and attempting a double play when runners are on first and third and letting the run count, and above all to place the outfielders with regard to the stages of the game.

The commonest blunders of really great baseball players are made in the disposition of the outfield. A great many captains who arrange their fields carefully with due attention to the second line of defense, and the third and last line, the line of individual brain work of the outfield has time after time lost games. Nearly is partly because they are more closely in touch with the infield and partly because of the fewer chances for the outfield to get into a vital play.

Outfielders generally outfield are more vexing than those of the infield. The outfield mobility is forced upon to come forward. In the early stages of the game the runner must be held to decide whether to allow the run to score or to try to cut it off and must boss his judgment on the ability of his pitcher to hold the other team to a low score, and of his own hitters to but in enough runs to win. Teams such as Detroit and the Athletics, hard-hitting and free-scoring teams, can afford to let the other team gain a run, rather then risk its getting two or three, as they can score more later. Teams such as the old Chicago White Sox, "the hitless wonders" of the American league, must play close any opposing team a run and had to play for the closest holds game.

Many of the hitless major league teams, that is, those possessing fast infielders, who play in for the single runners are on first and third, one out and the batter at the plate, can by simply playing the first basemen and third baseman close, and bringing the short stop and second baseman nearer than only part of the way—holding them to the position to make a long throw to the plate or to try for the runner at third, prevent the run. I have seen Evers and Tinker make the double play from second to first even when both were playing within ten feet of the bag, while the first baseman played like a flash, covering second and the pitcher's position, and at top speed, although they had played in to throw to the plate.

One of the greatest variations of the play I ever witnessed was made by Nichols of Boston. Catcher Collins and Berry were playing perhaps twelve feet closer to the plate than they would nardly do, runners were on first and third, one out and a run needed to be sent the champions. Collins saw Nichols try intended to try the double play if it were possible, and threw home as it was not. Mclnnis and Baker were drawn close with intent to throw to the plate. The ball was hit to Mclnnis on the base second bound, or rather to his right, and as he was coming forward and scooped the ball perfectly, Baker was caught flat-footed. Instead of throwing there he flashed the ball to Berry at second base, whirled, raced for first and caught Berry's return throw on top of the bag, completing the double play. It was a wonderful play both in thought and execution, and I do not advise any other first baseman to attempt it.

CURE FOR INEBRIATE

Indiana Town's Apparatus Expected to Succeed.

Many Methods Are Tried—Western Judges Have Adopted Novel Plans in Dealing With the Chronic Drunkard.

New York.—Cleveland's "Golden Rule" treatment of men and women who have transgressed the law in an unobtrusive way has been improved upon apparently by the late municipal judges of Evansville, Ind. The city has established a fumigating apparatus for prisoners on the tramp or plain drunk variety are passed through the various "cogs" of the machine. When they are released they submit after the manner of those who have been confined in hospitals for months and carry out with them the scent of carbolic acid and various other mixtures. It is expected that the odor will reveal the fact of arrest and arouse the sense of the offender.

Various expedients have been adopted in the past, both punitive and preventive, in connection with men and women put in cells over night for minor offenses. Originally "$10 or ten days" was held to be the very best, best word in penalty literature. Then folks pointed out that the poor man hadn't $10 to spare if he took care and if he was seat to jail for ten days because he couldn't pay the fine family suffered through his idleness and he might lose his employment altogether.

Suspended sentence was then tried in a number of cities and this seemed to a great extent, when coupled with a sharp lecture—to approximate the best way to deal with those who are the minor transgressor. Now and then a western police magistrate would try a cure of his own. The cure would be concededly as original one no matter how it did or always prove efficacious. One Judge sentenced an offender to stand on half a dozen cells every night for a week after he had finished his daily occupation outside—the station house, another Judge fined a man the Pacific coast cities sentenced a drunk and disorderly woman to twelve a month or a two months' attendance at meetings of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. He was the only man present at several of these meetings and he did not take part in the medicine at all, but he had to swallow it.

Still another magistrate gave a chronic drunk the alternative of thirty days in jail or buying and distributing a dozen temperance advocacy tracts every day for three days at specified addresses, where it could be proved he did not collect and if he collected the task. With the delivery of each tract he was obliged to repeat the words: "Wine is a mocker—strong drink is raging. Look not upon the wine when it is red, for at last it biteth like an adder." The cure was tried about a year ago and published on several of the "chronics" and never failed to work from six months to a year of reform.

Ragged Urchin Makes Himself at Home With a New York Auto Party.

New York.—While several automobile parties were dining at Sherry's hotel; a small boy, his clothes torn and his face and hands dirty, wandered into the dining room.

"Belong around here?" a man asked the lad.

"Not on your life. Live at 506 Fox street," replied the urchin.

"Where's your father?"

He should worry about him. He's home."

The boy said he was Louis Shapiro, five years old and that he had left his home, five miles away, in the morning for a day's outing in Van Cortlandt park. On his way home he decided it was time to get something to eat.

WOMEN RAID WILDCAT STILL

Surprise Moonshiners and Partly Demolish Liquor-Making Outfit in Georgia.

Rome, Ga.—Suspecting the existence of a "wildcat" still in their community and the almost open sale of liquor, a party of women from West Armuchee searched the woods in that section until the alleged still was found. According to the women, they surprised a party of moonshiners in the midst of their operations and a hasty and disordered retreat followed upon the approach of the "raiders." The women made an effort to demolish the equipment of the place, but were only partly successful. Revenue officers were notified and made a raid, only to find that the entire outfit had been removed.

Heroic Rescue From Drowning Made by an Alabama Lad—Seems Out in Gulf of Mexico.

Tampa, Fla.—At Sarasota twelve-year-old Frank Abbott of Birmingham, Ala., received a Carnegie medal when he swam out into the Gulf of Mexico and rescued R. W. Grinton, a real estate dealer. Mr. Grinton, who could not swim, had donned a life-preserver and was paddling about in shallow water. Caught by a treacherous tide he was swept into the gulf. He called for help. Young Abbott came out of those in more could swim, and he struck out bravely to save his friend. Grinton was only semi-conscious when Abbott reached him. He led managed to bring him ashore.

BOY KING STANDS BY KIN

Nine Year Old Son of Italian King Is Champion of Montenegro Ruler.

Rome.—A valiant champion of little Victor Emmanuel, the heir presumptive, the nine-year-old son of King Victor of Italy Prince Humbert does not approve at all his father's attitude toward Montenegro in the Balkan war, and intends to dismay that Italy was in thorough accord with the elder powers in demanding that the Montenegrins evacuate Scutari.

A few days ago Prince Humbert was "playing war" with his cousin, the royal baby. The king was an interested spectator of the game. Prince Humbert was the Montenegrin leader and he "killed off" all the Turks who stalere in the game. Turning to his father the little prince demanded to be sent to Cettinje.

"Why?" asked the king.

The prince thought for a moment and remembered that his mother and grandfather were Montenegrins.

"Well," he replied, "I think you ought to be there fighting, but as you are not, I suppose I ought to go to grandpapa and show him that we are on his side. Why are you not with him?"

"You see Italy is still fighting Tripoli and I am required here," replied the king.

"But suppose you were not required here," asked the little critic, "would you go to Montenegro?"

King Victor hesitated, and chose his words with care.

"No, I don't think so," he said finally.

Prince Humbert shouldered his toy gun and shook his head.

"I think it is very wrong of you," he said emphatically. "I am going to practice so that I can kill all of grandpapa's enemies. They're all bad, anyway."

THE LESSON OF MEMORIAL DAY.

It may be said that what has become the customary celebration of the Fourth of July is symbolical of license, while the appropriate observance of Memorial Day is symbolical of liberty. The hoopla of the "Glorious Fourth" has come to stand for just that kind of a thing and no more—just fun and sometimes the assumption of freedom by some people that amounts to an infringement upon the liberties of others.

Memorial Day is the one real American holiday and it is not the least of the good institutions for which we owe gratitude to the veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic. Through the influence of this nationally-observed occasion the heroes of bloody battle fields have become the advance emissaries of peace.

We are taught to cease briefly from the consideration of work-a-day affairs and give thought to problems that must be solved not by chance and not by some force foreign to the best of us, but by the patriotic effort and sane final judgment of a free people.

We are taught that war is not the question that the boy asketh when he wanteth a gun and ambitions to "enter" a gun and be a hero dreams about. We have learned that war comes when peoples and governments go wrong.

The spirit of Memorial day, the influence of the nation-wide observance, is a vital thing. It leads us to a thoughtful realization of the fact that the promotion of peace is a duty no less patriotic than the fighting of bloody battles and that so long as the sovereign will of the people keeps the government right there is always a great victory for peace just ahead.

Senator Penrose declares that though certain interests have "agents" in Washington, there is no "lobby." That is a rather fine distinction.

"TEDDY'S" GOOD JOB.

Though it probably was not necessary for Colonel Roosevelt to start a fleet suit to establish the fact of his sobriety, he has by the legal proceeding accomplished what he set out to do and at the same time he has rendered a great public service.

One of the disgusting features of our politics is the fact that a man cannot attain any prominence in politics without becoming subjected to billingsgate assault. If people would be content with criticism of a man's fitness for public service and his stand on public questions, politics would cease to be considered the dirty game that many people believe it to be. But in the heat of the fight nobody stops there. Some one makes a groundless charge against an opponent and it is repeated and magnified and grows in the telling by a horde of lesser lights. In fact, the extent to which some otherwise fair and broad men play the game sometimes is surprising. "Oh, it's politics!" is the excuse. But, of course, that is what is the matter with politics and that is why Mr. Roosevelt has rendered a public service.

If there were less rank vilification in politics, it would be much easier to properly label the "crooks."

It is his feature of politics that has caused many people to become disgusted with the whole game; it is this that has caused publishers of newspapers to refuse to allow their papers to be considered as political "party organs". It is this also that has caused papers that have existed for the purpose of being used as "political rags" to be useless for the purpose for which they have been intended—and that is a good sign.

Editor Cutter of the Thief River News-Press has been placed under bonds to keep the peace as a result of having threatened to "lick" the city clerk. The city clerk ought to be in much fear of bodily harm, or in fear of much bodily harm. There is no disguising the fact that editors are terrible men with their "ink."

Julian Hawthorne, son of a noted father, is writing poetry and the authorities are trying to secure his release from jail. Action should be delayed until such time when the effect of the cool weather may induce his recovery from the spring-time malady.

Minnesota may need a militiem commission, but having been without one of the things for so long it will no doubt be possible to struggle along without one until the next regular session of the legislature.

It is the duty of every good citizen to vote on the school bond proposition even if he knows there be no opposition and his vote is not necessary for the approval of the proposition.

Municipal bonds are now sold over the counter and it will no doubt soon be possible to buy a house and lot with your furniture at ten cents down and ten cents a week.

Colonel Roosevelt has won his great libel suit and the six cents awarded him by the jury will be sufficient for a glass of buttermilk and a modest dip.

The "agents" in Washington should conduct themselves with perfect propriety that they may not be open to the charge of being ordinary "lobbyists".

It is worthy of note that Rear Grand Forks is having a new lid of approved design node, one that may be clamped down tight.

The fact of Teddy's sobriety having been established, we're now off for the campaign of 1916.

the accusation of drunkard, laid at the door of the colonel by a Michigan editor, now defendant in a $10,000 libel suit brought by the colonel, is not true. Mr. Hulbert says it is the way he walks that makes many think he has been waiting upon the cup that cheers. Mr. Hulbert smerthed a letter fifteen years old written by Colonel Roosevelt when he was located at San Antonio, Tex., with his regiment, then en route to Cuba. A friend, representing a whisky house at Corsicana, Tex., sent the colonel several gallons of whisky and the letter was an acknowledgment of the gift. The letter was to the effect that while the colonel was not a drinking man he thought the whisky might be a handy thing to have around for medicinal purposes. He has sent the letter to Mr. Roosevelt in the belief that it will show that the colonel is telling the truth when he says he is not a drinking man. Colonel "Bill" Rich of St. Paul is the owner of the letter.

With the first of the month the state began borrowing money with which to pay its bills and now the state university has arranged to do some additional borrowing. Monday it touched the Minnesota Loan and Trust company for $100,000 and will pay 5½ per cent for the privilege. State Treasurer Smith pays only 5 per cent, as the state will not allow any more. Unless the next legislature takes on an economical streak Minnesota is going to be swamped with interest charges. This year State Treasurer Smith has been compelled to call upon the banks for money with which to pay running expenses fully two months earlier than usual. This means that the "touch" will be made earlier next year. Last year Minnesota paid nearly $60,000 for borrowed money.

Senator A. J. Rockne has risked a second term in connection with the special session of the legislature which Governor Eberhart has announced he will call for the purpose of passing a public utilities act. When the late lamentable session of the recognition must kill he says it directed that the next legislature should consist of sixty-seven senators and 135 house members. Inasmuch as the late legislature adjourned since its lie holds that the special session, with its present membership, will not have the required legal standing. Senator Rockne, however, says that he is not pressing the point. Others senators say the thing is absurd.

July 1 next the various counties will pay into the state nearly $1,250,000, probably more than ever before by them from the several state funds. The amount will come due on the date named. The school fund will receive the major share of the money. This money as soon as received, will be loaned out again. State Auditor Iverson, who welcomes also permanent state funds, says the above sum is not a surplus for the state but will be collecting in the shape of principal and interest in the next ten years.

This may be news to some of you, but Professor Eugene Grubb, considered the foremost potato expert in America, was at the capitol last week, relieved himself of the opinion that Minnesota and the Northwest is approaching a crisis in its potato industry. Insect disease and innumerable varieties of blight, he says, will cause the coming crop of tubers and seed if the crop is to be saved farmers must get busy at once. He has made an experiment with the potato fields and finds them all badly infected.

Former Governor John Lind has been honored with a decoration by the king of Sweden which entitles him to be called "Sir" and now those who keep their eye on things political in Minnesota say that in recognition the former administration governor has put the lid on his ambitions to be United States senator. Under the federal constitution no persons holding titles of nobility are barred from federal office. Knute Nelson could have had the best in the nobility line that Norway has to give, but no one ever heard of him being decorated. Not if your Uncle Knute knows it.

Letters and pictorial postal cards received from E. E. Smith, Republic an state chairman now in Europe for his health, indicate that he is enjoying himself. Several of his friends in Minnesota have been honored with souvenirs and they all speak of a highly enjoyable time. From all accounts Mr. Smith is enjoying every sick man and his tour of the old country is to be an extended one.

Some comment is being hedged in because Governor Eberhart, in nominating a minimum wage commission and also one whose duties will be the placing of the state labor bureau on a civil service basis, confined his selections entirely to men of German extraction. His excellency, however, saw nothing in the selection that would call for any comment.

Frank A. Day, the former Democratic king maker, visited the state capitol this week and in deference to that timeless Anthlyn, who says he fills the position that Frank once occupied as private secretary, permitted him to occupy the chair of state and ponder over things of old for a short period. Frank has not heard from Washington in the matter of that fed. eral job he would like to have and the probabilities are that he will not, for a while at least. The tip down here is that there will be no plums until after the tariff bill is out of the way.

THE COUNTY CHAIRMAN.

CARE OF THE YOUNG CALF.

Should Be Taken From Mother After a Few Hours.

When the calf is dropped, leave it with the dam a few hours, to afford her an opportunity to lick it. If the cow gives milk containing only a medium amount of solids, the calf may be permitted to take what nourishment it wants the first time; but if the cow gives very rich milk, only a little should be allowed; otherwise there is danger of having a bad case of indigestion on your hands the second day. Always milk the cow and then let nature shovel in the rich milk. Never question should be given the cow by way of grooming; not with a currycomb, but with a fine, soft brush or rubbing of the udder. This will prove beneficial to the cow and profitable to you. After the calf has taken nourishment once, it should be removed, preferably when the dam is not in the stall or pen; for it is better that she should not become familiar with the sight of her calf, that she may more readily surrender her affection to you. By removing the calf at once, it is soon forgotten, and thus disturbance is minimized.—Prof. H. E. Hasbrouck, Dairy and Animal Husbandry, University Farm, St. Paul.

A Singular Reception

By RYLAND SELL.

One night after dining late I went home. I found my wife in one of her moods, all alibi, and many are the mistakes I have made in trying to get into the wife's good books. I soon learned that if my hitchley did not work and my hair brush was out of order, that on this occasion I must have found the door unlatched—either this or my key happened to be lost, for I had no trouble in getting in. If it hadn't been for the wine I had drunk down less I would have realized that something was wrong, for in my own house she had light would have been turned low, while here it was out.

My foot tripped on something, and I stumbled, but caught myself. Placing my hat and overcoat on the chair where I was about to feel my way upstairs when I heard a voice in the adjoining room. It was apparently that of a heiress old woman trying to be rentlute.

"Go away at once! The house is wired for burglars and the police will be here directly!"

"What is the world"—I was beginning when the name voice continued:

"I deny what you say you might be, but I want to go to jail. No consider! Prison life is awful. Just go right out the way you came in, and I'll not call the police this time."

I was entitled to me by this time that I had made one of my blunders in getting into the wrong house, and, not relishing being taken for a burglar, I was about to apologize and go out when it occurred to me that a burglar would neither be believed nor arrested if I had been caught in the act without one. Indeed, I was not quite sure but that a man might be found waltzing with a gun till he could locate the intruder. So I concluded to go at once, but during the pause for air and nevercont to establish my identity. While I was fumbling my way to the closet all was silent, but no sooner had I stalked for the door than an unearthly different voice came from upstairs. It was apparently that of a girl.

"If you don't get out of here away with, you go to the sideboard, and reaching in a drawer you will find the key to the drawer, and the silver in the hands, but get out of the house, only go away as soon as possible."

This was too much. I could not forbear reasoning into the darkness from whose voice was melodious.

"I don't want your silver. I'm not a burglar at all. I've simply made a mistake and am going to the wrong house. I'm going away at once."

"Police! Robbers! Murder!"

Confound the girl! She will bring the police down on me and get me into a fix.

"Shut up!" I cried. "I mean, he quiet. Nobody's going to hurt you. I tell you. It's all a mistake. I'm in the house, and my house is"—

"Don't dare to take everything—silver, jewelry, silk!"

I hesitated between flight and going upstairs to calm this hysterical young woman and finally concluded on the latter course. Groping my way, I soon came from the hand of the stairs. I ran up two steps at a time, to avoid not quick enough. There was a light in this upper hall, and I was relieved to low that I could only distinguish a table with a box on it, but couldn't see what the latter contained. The girl was in the hall I couldn't see her.

I heard a movement in a room adjoining while cross the hall. Then the gas jet was turned up, and I saw a girl in a dressing gown enter it. What she saw was a young man in evening dress, a silk hat in his hand as he bowed and staggered.

"Calm yourself," I said. "I've been afraid you would turn an innocent mistake into a tragedy. Do I look like a burglar?"

"If you're not, what are you doing here?"

"Oh, Gwen," cried the old woman's voice in the next downstairs, "come back. He'll kill you!"

I was puzzled. These persons were been talking to me, and yet they didn't seem to have heard me. And how did the old woman get upstairs?

"Are you two deaf?" I said, irritated.

Gradually the girl regained her equanimity. When she smiled. Her smile broke into a laugh.

"What in thunder does it all mean?" I shouted.

"Wait a minute and I'll tell you."

She ran into a bedroom and in another moment emerged in a kimona. She was very pretty in either costume.

"Mamma and I live alone and are in constant terror of burglars, so we got two phonographs, and mamma talked in one and I in the other the words you have doubtless heard. Every night we connect them with a fine wire in the vestibule so that if a burglar broke it with his tool it would set the phonographs talking."

"Well, I'll be jigged!" I exclaimed. "I'd rather be arrested and jugged for a burglar than be made a fool of."

A silvery laugh from the girl rang out, and I added:

"You need a man in this house, and if you want me all you've got to do is to say so."

"Thank you; we get on very well with two phonographs. We don't need any more at present."

"I consider one man better than two phonographs any time."

With that I left. My words were spoken incisively, but with more than that date I stood in the house not as a burglar, but as a bridegroom.

Mrs. Claude Johnson of Crookston was the guest of Mrs. Louis Sieff over Sunday. She left Monday evening to go to Wolfe Point, Montana, and will take up her residence on a claim near that city.

Mrs. C. R. C. Baker and children left Friday evening to go to southern Minnesota and will spend a few weeks with relatives at Dodge Center and Brownton. They were accompanied by Miss Florence Griswold, who was a guest at the Baker home.

Two well known Garnes citizens, Oat Tande and R. H. Green, were in the city Memorial day. Mr. Green on his return home was accompanied by his daughters, Gwen and Stella, who have spent the school year here, attending the Red Lake Falls high school.

Jos. Cottrell returned Wednesday from Crookston, where he had gone to visit Mrs. Cottrell, who is a hospital patient. Mrs. Cottrell underwent an operation a few weeks ago and for a time her condition was quite serious. She is now getting along nicely and will be brought to her home in this city Sunday.

Miss Gwen Green and Miss Hilinger of Red Lake Falls, were here on Tuesday morning, the former leaving on the morning train for Bemidji near which place she will spend the summer on a claim for the benefit of her health, and the latter went along with the stags for Radebl.—Plummer Pioneer.

Paying no attention to the advice given him by elder counselors little William Walton, the nine year old son of L. M. Walton, head miller at the local mill of Crookston Milling company, was drowned Thursday afternoon while running logs on the Red Lake river about a mile east of this city here what is known as the Ikeaka pumphouse. The lad went down within a few feet of the place where two years ago last August two of his sisters, Grace, aged 10, and Lucila, aged 16, were drowned while bathing.—Crookston Times.

Presbyterian Church.

In this world we, as individuals, have three main factors with which we must contend. These factors are people in general, your own individual self, and our God.

On Sunday morning I shall give the first of a series of sermons, "Trusting People"; "Trusting Yourself"; "Trusting Your God."

In these sermons I shall try and show in what and how much we can trust these three factors.

On Sunday evening the Sunday school will render its Children's Day program.

All are welcome.

LAMBERT (OKLEE)

Francois Lambert of Red Lake Falls, the founder of our town, is here with his bride visiting his children, grand-children and great grand-children.

Jos. Fortier and wife of Blackduck are visiting friends and relatives in Lambert this week.

There are to be first communion services at the church next Sunday at eight thirty, a. m.

Mrs. Lauritzen closes her school at Oklee next Friday with a fine program in the evening at the Oklee church.

Mr. Lauritzen left Monday morning for Pine River where he has purchased a creamery and Carl Rindal, the former wood buyer, will make the butter at the Oklee creamery hereafter.

Two new automobiles are owned in this town. Oscar Lindberg and Carl Rindal each sport new touring cars, one a Flanders and one a Ford.

ENGINE HITS AUTO.

One Young Man Killed and One Injured.

Stephen had a similar experience to Argyle last Thursday that happened within eleven days of the Argyle accident a year previous when the Todit automobile was struck while crossing the track and the lives of Miss Lulu Todit and Miss Minnie were instantly taken.

Last Thursday at about 7:45 p. m. while Clem Carnegie and his chum Arthur Boer, 18 and 19 years old respectively, were out for a little pleasure ride in an old auto of the run-about type which they had fitted up they were struck by a light engine that was returning from the north after pulling a special into Stephen. The accident happened on the north crossing, the main thoroughfare of the village. Clem Carnegie was fatally injured and succumbed to his injuries about eleven o'clock the same evening. His skull was fractured and the bones imbedded in his head, while his left arm was torn from the socket and was picked up about thirty feet from the body. His companion, Arthur Rost, was painfully bruised and one arm was broken close up to the shoulder. He will recover. The automobile was reduced to kindling wood and scrap iron.

The victims of the accident were both Stephen boys. The deceased was the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Carnegie formerly of Argyle and a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. John Dunlop of this place. Arthur Rost is a son of a prominent farmer of Stephen. The funeral took place on Saturday and was very largely attended.

The parents of the unfortunate young men have the deep sympathy of a large circle of friends in Argyle and of those who knew them in Stephen.—Argyle Banner.

SOUTHERN CIRCUS KING TO INVADE THE NORTH.

E. Hunz, proprietor of the mighty Hunz Shows, which exhibit in Thief River Falls on June 19, is considered the Circus King below the Mason and Dixon line, has decided in his sixteenth transcontinental tour to come north of the Mason and Dixon line, being the first time the big southern circus has ever been out of its accustomed haunts.

The invasion will be watched by jealous eyes by the big northern shows of occasion, and a big novelty is in store for the northern people as they will have a change to see this southerner as he really and truly is in all phases of his life, as the show is managed, directed, owned and all departments managed by southerners only.

There will be real southern bucking riding blue ribboned Kentucky bred horses; the southern colonels will be in evidence, with his wife helmeted "whitehat, together" (it his "yes sah" that has made the southerner famous.

Mr. Hunz also claims to have the finest sixteen head of Kentucky mules, which are world renowned, and will be of great interest to horsemen of this section. Taking it all in all a great treat is in store for the public wherever the Mighty Hunz Shows exhibit.

THE HOLLOW LOG

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by Associated Literary Press.

The lazy man of the village of Comstock was Tom White. He made no pretensions to long locks and other pains and aches, but said that the girl he married knew all about his listless beforehand and must therefore abide the results. As she made no kick about earning with her needle the main support, the public did not feel toward him as it otherwise might.

All lazy men are more or less optimistic. Tom White was wholly so. Any man who lost a cow or horse by death, any one that had a barn burned by lightning, any one that bought a gold brick of a passing stranger, was made to feel that life still held something for him after a talk with Tom.

Tom White was lazy, but he was not a liar. Lying and laziness generally go together. The community took this into account when sizing him up and said of him:

"No matter how lazy he is, you can always believe what he says."

One evening after Tom had beat the champion lazy man of the village for fifteen years he had a rest with a calf a dozen other men around the village stove in Snyder's grocery. He hadn't been doing nay talking when all of a sudden he said:

"Fergus, I had a singular dream Wednesday night, and it was repeated Thursday and Friday nights."

"Was it hard work?" was laughingly asked by one.

"I thought you looked done up," added a second.

Nearly all had some remark to make, and when they were through Tom continued:

"You have all dreamed all sorts of dreams, but lemme ask if any one here has ever dreamed of a holler log?"

"Beech, oak or maple?"

"I dunno. Just a holler log."

"On the woods or where?"

"Didn't seem to be in the woods in my case, and yet I can't say where else."

"How long was it?"

"Ten or twelve feet, mebbe."

"Was the holler large enough for you to crawl into?"

It was some time before they would take the man seriously, but his serious face and sober answers finally prevailed, and he said:

"I didn't dream that I was walking any where, but I did dream that I stood beside a holler log with an ax in hand. There was some one else near by, and a voice said:

"'Tom, split it open.'

"Yes, boys, the voice said them words, and I obeyed the command."

"And out jumped a dozen rabbits, and you killed them all and are going to have rabbit potpie for a fortnight to come?"

"No rabbits jumped out."

"What did?"

"The log was yanky as well as holler. Two or three blows split it wide open, and there in the middle of the holler was an old tomato can. It looked as if it had been there for forty years."

"But you are not going to tell us that the tomatoes were spoiled?"

"Boys, the contents of that can could not spile in a thousand years. The can was sealed up, and when I broke it open it was full of twenty dollar gold pieces."

"By George!"

"You don't say?"

"But it was only a dream!"

"Just a dream," replied Tom, "but I dreamed it three nights running, you will remember."

"Shucks!" exclaimed one of the listeners after a moment of silence. "We all know what dreams are. There is a man in the state that ever dreamed anything that come to pass."

"Reckon not," was Tom's comment.

"Did you think this with?"

"Of course."

"Then you haven't got the sense of a chipmunk!"

"I know it, but it will come to pass. I'm going to look for that holler log and find it. There's a can of gold in it."

In a day or two the whole town was discussing the dream, and the people were pretty evenly divided. No matter how vigorously the opposition denied the foolishness business, they were those that shouldered axes and went hunting through field and forest in search of holler logs. The search was continued for a week and then was given up. Tom White himself did not participate. It was cold weather, and he said he would wait for spring. For the others found the log and the gold it would be their good luck.

It was a cold day in the fall when under a cherry tree in his back yard, and with his back braced against the trunk he fell asleep. By and by his wife came to the door and called:

"Tom, I want to take some pies, and you must split some wood."

The wood pile consisted of two or three old logs and chunks left over from the winter. Slowly the sleeper rubbed his eyes and got to his feet, and as he did so he lifted his ax and began on one of the logs. The third blow split it in half.

"Was that one there?"

"It sure was."

"And full of gold?"

"The same."

Who put that one there and when didn't count. Tom got it and used it and is using it still, and the most he has had to say when questioned about dreams was:

"You see, it was a holler log I dreamed of."

LONG BEACH DEATH LIST REACHES 36

DAMAGE SUITS LIKELY TO FOLLOW PATH OF DERBY OF SATURDAY.

MAY TOTAL MILLION DOLLARS

Grand Jury to Commence Probe—Police Guarding the Ruins—Injured List Indefinite—Thirty-six Lost Their Lives.

Long Beach, Cal., May 27.—Prospective damage suits, aggregating probably $1,000,000 or more and a grand jury investigation engage the attention of the city officials as the most important outcome of the disaster Saturday, when 36 persons lost their lives in the collapse of a portion of the municipal pier just after the close of the British "empire day" pageant.

Death List Grows.

The list of dead, which numbered 33 Saturday night, was added to by the death of Mrs. E. C. Bush, 60 years old, of Long Beach, who succumbed to her injuries. Miss Ethel Bush, daughter of the bereaved, of Los Angeles. Her mother was among those instantly killed.

The list is expected to be still further increased by the death of Miss Marguerite Reed, aged 14, of Long Beach, whose back was broken, and Gilbert Cooper of Pasadena, one of the two veterans of the Crimean war who were in the van of the empire day parade.

Recitation of errors made in the earlier list of dead brought out the following names:

Miss Frances Harriet Newell, Redonda, Wis.

Mrs. Mollie Gates, Oak Park, Ill.

Miss Lilly M. Holme, Denver, Colo.

Ernest O. Esler, Los Angeles.

Mrs. Esler, his wife.

Mrs. M. P. McDonald, Compton, Cal.

Miss Rose was the only man killed and his body remained unidentified until late tonight. He was a friend of his wife. Both were dead when taken from the death pier. Mrs. McDonald, on rapid viewing, died last Monday.

A Grand Jury Probe.

While City Attorney Stephen Long was occupied with the legal phase of the disaster's aftermath, Mayor J. S. Hatch, members of the city council and of the board of public works conferred with District Attorney John D. Fredericks with reference to the grand jury investigation. This will be started either on or just before the coroner's inquest. The object of the inquiry is to fix responsibility for the many two officers were placed on guard over the ruined section of the pier. They were instructed to watch conditions and to observe what was allowed by the grand jury and allow no tampering with any part of the condition of the pier, a section of which in front of the municipal auditorium went down under a weight of human beings which has been estimated at not less than 2,000 tons.

Police Guard Ruins.

On the order of the district attorney three officers were detailed to each several hundred of the merrymakers gave in a fusion of jagged timbers and boards to the strand within a few feet of the cross tides. Several broken timbers, which were expected to show the general condition of the pier and those aid in developing the evidence of negligence, if there be any, were taken out of the pier today and locked up under official seal.

The weakness of the pier, which was built eight years ago and never repaired in that particular portion, is believed to have been due to the decay caused by the action of salt air on wood and to iron fasteners and supports. However, it was declared that a much stronger structure might have been wrecked under the circumstances, as the participants in the big parade marched upon the pier keeping step. Military men pointed out that the weight distribution created by the measured tread of thousands of feet caused a tremendous strain upon the structure, which already had been heavily bordered by the crowd which thronged about the auditorium doors awaiting admission.

Detroit, Mich., May 28.—The fifth annual report of the Baptist centennial commitment committee which included a recommendation that the organization make the raising of $6,000,000 for missions annually, the ultimate objective, was presented by the North-ern Baptist convention in session here and the recommendation was approved. Several of the recommendations in the report were subjects of active debate. One for a united missionary campaign by the convention and the raising of $1,000,000 for sectional director, was also acted upon favorably.

Army of Grasshoppers Reported.

Amarillo, Texas, May 28.—Traveling in countless numbers, a column of grasshoppers five miles wide and 12 miles long, is reported in northeastern New Mexico. It appears that the millions of the grasshoppers seem to spread as they travel and also the appearance of smaller hordes of grasshoppers in sections of west Texas have caused fear of a general grasshopper plague in the Southwest, especially in Texas. Oklahoma and Kansas. The drouth in New Mexico seems to interest Illinois and Texas.

Weekly Weather Prediction.

Washington, May 27.—Unsettled weather will open the coming week throughout the country east of the Missouri river, according to the weather bureau's weekly bulletin. "There will be showers Monday and Tuesday on the great central valleys and the lake regions," said the bulletin. In the Central West generally fair weather should prevail about the middle of the week, followed by unsettled conditions at the close. In the Northwest fair weather also will prevail, except about the middle . . .

TIME SHOWS WORSE REVERSES

ONE THOUSAND ITALIANS ARE KILLED.

Battle With Arabs in Tripoli Worse Than at First Reported.

Rome, May 28.—The reverse suffered by Italian troops under General Garbretti in the battle May 16 with Arabs at Sidi Garbaa, Tripoli, was worse than reported.

Early advices said the Italian losses were about 400 men killed and 250 wounded. The first rollcall after the Italians returned to headquarters however, showed that 1,000 men were absent from the ranks, having either been killed, wounded or taken prisoners.

The Italian forces numbered 5,000. Fuller reports to the Italian commander of the Arabs had 2,000 men while in reality they aggregated 10,000. They were led by 300 Turkish officers and soldiers and reinforced by cannon.

During the Italian advance the Arabs feigned a retreat, but later they made an attack which took the Italians by surprise. The Italians defended themselves heroically, but heavy fire finally compelled them to retreat, leaving their artillery, ammunition and provisions in the hands of the enemy.

OCEAN DEATH LIST KNOWN

Forty Lost When Ship Sank—Ship Carrying Paralyzed in the Gulf of Smyrna.

London, May 27.—A dispatch from Smyrna to Lloyds says that 40 persons were drowned by the sinking of the steamer Nevada, which Saturday struck a mine in the Gulf of Smyrna.

Shipping Is Paralyzed.

Smyrna.—Shipping is completely paralyzed in these waters on account of the recent accidents due to mines. The consignees have warned incoming steamers to remain away and outward bound vessels are afraid to leave port.

Took Poison; is Better.

Chicago, May 27.—W. L. McCutcheon, an automobile salesman who has been stricken with paralysis, called by his mistake, and who doctors Saturday thought could not live, received the last sacrament of the Catholic church, after an examination and consultation of the hospital, decided that McCutcheon had eliminated most of the poison from his stomach before it had entered the intestines and concluded that in all probability he would recover. It will be necessary to watch his condition carefully.

Wisconsin Governor Vetoes Bill.

Madison, Wis., May 28.—A bill directing the state industrial commission to establish a system of direct primaries was vetoed by Governor McGovern. The bill which was introduced by Senator Hull, would give the commission power to furnish the names of farmers to reputable consumers from a "fair list" to be compiled. The governor declared the bill was vague and unconstitutional and questioned the right of the state to spend the public money to assist prospective purchasers and sellers of farm products to bargain with each other.

Supreme Court Adjourns June 15.

Washington, May 28.—Determination to decide all the cases under consideration before it before adjourning was the long summer recess the supreme court of the United States further proclaimed the present term by the unprecedented act of fixing a date as late as Saturday, June 14, as a tentative final decision day. It will meet on June 9 to hand down decisions and all cases not disposed of then probably will hold another session after June 14.

Adventists Adopt Resolutions.

Washington, May 27.—A nation-wide campaign in opposition to the efforts of various religious bodies "to secure religious legislation and subvert religious freedom" was authorized in resolutions adopted at the conference of the Seventh Day Adventists of the world at Takoma Park. The preamble to the resolution declares that "the present agitation to secure religious legislation and to subvert religious freedom demand this most earnest efforts to teach and maintain true principles of religious liberty.

PRESIDENT SCORES CAPITOL LOBBYISTS

SAYS THEY ARE WORKING TO CREATE PUBLIC SYMPATHY AGAINST TARIFF BILL.

WHEAT LIKELY ON FREE LIST

Senate Sub-Committee Will Probably Also Declare for Free Live Stock —Other Congressional News of Interest.

Washington, May 28.—President Wilson stirred congressional circles with an emphatic statement denouncing the "industrious" and "insidious" lobby in Washington attempting to create public sympathy against certain features of the Underwood tariff bill. This was accepted as the capitol as referring to the unusual efforts being made against free raw wool and free sugar.

Legislators Are Besieged.

While the president was declaring it his opinion that the public should be relieved from the intolerable "lobbydoo," senators, and representatives were viewing on every hand the evidences of the lobby's power among them.

Significance was attached to a statement made by Senator Simmons, chairman of the finance committee, which now has the tariff bill in hand, that, in his opinion, the lobbyists were not making any headway.

The president's declaration that the lobbying was "un-American" also couldn't throw a brick without hitting one. Two measures pending in bills recently introduced in the house and senate to regulate lobbying on pending legislation.

Senator Kenyon of Iowa and Representative J. S. Smith of New York have declared their intention to press bills they have introduced before their committee or to carry on a campaign for the regulation of lobbying action. Heavy penalties will be proposed by both bodies.

Democratic leaders were almost unanimous in support of the president's statement, although Senator Kenyon well able to handle his important pending tariff legislation and Senator Gore and wool will be thoroughly conferred and discussed by the finance committee and Democratic caucus before it is reported. No change of policy relating to free sugar has been yet been determined, however, it is emphatically declared by the members of the committee.

Wheat, Also, Free.

Following the statement made several days ago by Senator Williams of the finance sub-committee, which has the agricultural schedule under consideration, that the duty on live stock and likely extended guard against what their products would be equalized, it is reported that the committee has also agreed to put wheat on the free list as well as flour.

In the Underwood bill, wheat is given a duty of 10 cents a bushel, while flour has a duty of thirty.

It also is reported that the committee probably will recommend no removal of the 10 per cent duty on cotton, sheep and hops in conformity with the free list policy of the house under the Underwood bill.

Senator Penrose, of Ohio said that a large delegation of manufacturers of clothing from his state and from Cincinnati and other cities called and informed him that they did not care what was done with the free wool tariff duties placed on ready made clothes.

"They said they would not experience, "that they were ready right now to meet foreign competition and compete with the foreign manufacturers of ready made clothes."

PUNISHMENT TO FIT CRIME

Boys are Sentenced to Throw Pebbles Until They're Tired—Judge to Keep Eye On Them.

Malden, Mass., May 27.—Judge Bruce of the local court has adopted the mikado's system of making the punishment fit the crime.

The judge has organized a class in stone throwing and on July 2 it is expected that as many as 25 boys will be collected in a large field which the judge has leased, and there, under the eye of Probation Officer Killion, will be required to throw pebbles for an hour, or, says the judge, "until they get tired of throwing stones and abandon hitting the crime and finding amusement to the crowd with which it is associated."

James Barrett, 17, and Leo Halligan, 16, of Malden, were the first prize who brought upon themselves the poetic justice. They were brought into court by Chief Hill of that town for stone throwing.

To Reconvene Hunger Strike.

London, May 28.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the Militant suffragettes is again in Holloway jail. She was sentenced to three years' imprisonment for conspiracy, which, however, was suspended on her return to the jail, and being served at another period of her sentence of three years' imprisonment. Mrs. Pankhurst, though evidently not strong when arraigned at the Bow street police court this morning, made it that she would continue her hunger strike until she gets the government gave women the vote.

Astor Baby Delayed With Gifts.

New York, May 27.—John Jacob Astor VI—"Baby Astor" as he is known in society—has, it is just learned, been showered with gifts illustrative of the world-wide interest in the little child of millions and of tragedy—for in the most part, they have come from strangers. In many instance these gifts have been returned with thanks and regrets. The physical labor of their return to the would-be donors has consumed almost the entire time of a secretary.

Ship Returns From Cocos Island by South Seas Without Legendary Gold Believed to Be Hoax.

San Francisco, May 28.—Failure of another expedition sent in quest of a fabulous treasure, said to be buried on Cocos Island, in the South Seas, was announced here when the British steamship Melmore put into port.

These fabled millions, according to the story told by the sailor on his deathbed of his knowledge of the location of the cache and supplied them with a chart, were the words accepted in interesting British capitalists and the Melmore was purchased for the expedition. Mrs. Till and Miss Davis accompanied the party and directed them. After many months of labor with pick and shovel, the search gave up their quest and started homeward. The Melmore put in St. Paineau, where the two women and others of the party left the vessel to proceed homeward by the most direct route.

Within the last fifty years, a half dozen expeditions equipped with ample funds have been dispatched to Cocos Island to search for the gold believed to be buried there. In each case the incentive has been the same, the account of some sailor to whom had been bequeathed charts showing the location of the treasure. Several fortunes have been dispatched in the quest and oxcide had been the sequel in more than one case of disappointed hope.

Seafaring men regard the Cocos fable as a gigantic hoax, perpetrated by some sailor himself ignorant of the fact that his victims in each succeeding generation.

TO PROBE PIER DISASTER

Total Number of Deaths at Long Beach, Cal., is Now Thirty-Seven.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 28.—Keller investigation and coroner's inquest into the collapse of the municipal pier at Long Beach, Cal., by which 37 persons were killed and 200 injured, was begun today by Coroner Nicholas Hall.

Coroner Hall has inspected the scene of the accident and arranged to complete his task before the arrival of District Attorney John D. Fredericks of Los Angeles county will co-operate with the coroner.

Rev. I. B. Kilhance, aged 64, one of the dead, testified that the list now brings the total number of deaths up to 37.

Superintendent is Electrocuted.

Keokuk, Iowa, May 23.—H. T. Herrick, superintendent of the new division of the water power construction work, was instantly killed by a live wire only a day before the current from the big power house of whose construction he had charge, was to be turned on for the city of Keokuk. A pole full of wires in the power house plant of the Keokuk Electric company and one of the poles of the Keokuk plant belonging to the water power company. Herrick tried to push them off the board and received 1,100 volts. He was a graduate of Purdue.

Copper Magnate Sued.

New York, May 28.—A suit for $200,00 against E. Augustus Heinze, the copper magnate, by the New York Life Insurance company, has been begun in the supreme court, Brooklyn. It is charged that Heinze borrowed $230,000 on 24 notes, drawn on the Union Bank of Brooklyn, on a defunct institution, and its predecessor, the Mechanics' and Traders' bank, and pledged stocks as security, and that the state banking department has been unable to realize on the security.

Prominent Man to Testify.

Washington, May 27.—Prominent men called here because of the sent brought by Colonel Roosevelt against Editor Newett are: Gifford Pinchot, Emlin and Phillip Roosevelt, Wm. Loeb, Jr., Surgeon General Rixey of the United States navy; Dr. Alexander Lambert of New York, the colonel's physician; Truman Newberry of Detroit, former secretary of the navy; Jacob Riis, Lawrence Abbot, Robert Bacon and six or seven newspaper men whom the colonel has summoned to testify.

ROOSEVELT DENIES EDITOR'S CHARGES

COLONEL SAYS HE ISN'T TOTAL ABSTAINER BUT WAS NEVER INTOXICATED.

CORROBORATIVE TESTIMONY

Witness for Ex-President Tell of His Hectic—Doctor Speaks of His Wonderful Physical Health as Evidence.

Marquette, Mich., May 29.—Theodore Roosevelt, a picture of rugby vigor and perfect health, turned a square head and a square jaw in the direction of twelve men, farmers, teamsters, miners and woodsmen, in court and gave his character for sobriety on "not a total abstainer," but never intoxicated in his life.

His testimony and that of others who followed corroborated such a description of abstemiousness.

Matter of Fact.

If the sturdy looking men who spent seven years of his life in performing the duties of president of the United States saw anything peculiar in his position of explaining to the twelve simple tellers of the woods and the mines that he was not really a drunkard as charged in an alleged libelous editorial by the defendant, George A. Newett, his countenance did not betray it, nor did his manner.

"When Mr. Pound, his counsel, after a brief outline of the plaintiff's case to the jury, hauled the colonel to the witness stand, the latter, who had been inconspicuous among a number of prospective witnesses and visitors, stepped briskly forward.

Outline of Testimony.

In substance Colonel Roosevelt defended himself as a man of complete sobriety, although not a total abstainer. The leading points in his testimony were about as follows:

"I am not a total abstainer.

"I have never drunk a highball or a cocktail in my life.

"I do not smoke and I do not drink beer and I don't drink red wine.

"I have never drunk whisky or brandy except when a doctor prescribed it or possibly on some occasion, after great exposure, when I was chilled through.

"The only wines I have drunk have been white wines, Moselles, champagne or, very occasionally, a glass of sherry.

"At home, at dinner, I often drink a glass or two of white wine and Poland water.

"At public dinners I sometimes drink a glass of champagne or, perhaps two. On an average I may drink a glass of champagne a month.

"There was a fine mint bed at the White House, and I may have drunk half a dozen mint juleps there in a year. Since leaving the White House I think I have tasted mint julaps twice, that is a glass at St. Louis and a sip from a loving cup at Little Rock, Ark."

The Succeeding Testimony.

Much of the succeeding testimony was intended to indicate that the plaintiff's physical vigor, his constitution, his defense and exercise and his immenses capacity for work could not exist in the person of a drunkard as the alleged libel editorial in the Iron Ore charged.

Important witnesses of this phase of the examination were Dr. Alex Lambert, Roosevelt's family physician and intimate friend for 30 years, and Dr. T. N. Rixey, surgeon-general, U. S. N., retired, who official chief was during the McKinley and Roosevelt years. Both testified that since Roosevelt's physical well-being.

Other witnesses were Jacob Riis and Othon Gardner, the former a socialist writer, who had not taken a newspaper men whose duty for many years compelled him to take down words of everything pertaining to Colonel Roosevelt.

Dr. Lambert, aside from his intimate social and professional relations to the Roosevelt family, testified that he had made a special study of the heart and lungs, and of the effect of alcohol, tobacco, opiates and drugs on the human system.

Testimony of Doctor.

"He is extremely temperate," testified the doctor. "His heart and liver which if alcoholic would be affected, he said, were prodigiously healthy and complete. He never was called upon to treat his friend professionally until he was called to Mercy hospital, Chicago, after Colonel Roosevelt's life had been attempted, at Milwaukee. His described the course of the bullet through the ribs, his ghastly wound in the chest and big bruise which covered a considerable part of the patient's side.

Pelkey Held Yet.

Calgary, Alta., May 28. — Hugs crowds flocked to view the body of Luther McCarty, heavyweight champion killed in the ring last Saturday, when it was laid in state. The body of the pugilist was later shipped East to Hugo, Okla., his former home. Manager McCarney intended to accompany it, but was detained here by the authorities. Pelkey was placed under arrest by mounted police and gave bail of $10,000. He was told to appear for a preliminary hearing on a charge of manslaughter.

No Bonds for Bank Examiners.

Washington, May 28.—President P. Kans, acting comptroller of the currency, reminded an order of former Comptroller Murray requiring bankers to back examiners to furnish bonds of $10,000 each, holding that such bonds have no legal force and are worthless. While examiners had been compelled to give bond, Mr. Kane said there is no authority in law for the comptroller to require such security. It is declared that in case of fraud recovery could not be made under the law.

LANGUAGE FULL OF POETRY

Natives of Madagascar Use Single Words That Tell a Story.

The language of Madagascar is held by linguists to be one of the most fertile in poetical expressions. Many of its single words are full of poetry. One of the native names of the island is "the land in the midst of the moving waters." The sun, which for one-half the year is a blaze of unclouded light, is called "the eye of day." A river is a "mother of waters," and the capital the "mother of towns."

Those who dwell on the wooded plains are "the people under the leaves." The word for fall of leaf, honor means "the flower of the grass." As the grasses are as beautiful as their the beautiful, the word suggests both the beauty and the fragility of that which depends upon the caprice of a single flower.

The long-horned cattle are the largest and most valuable animals on the island, therefore the military on the island are known as "the horns of the army." The word used as the Bible uses it, to denote strength, power and confidence.

Our word hypocrisy means "under the mask," and refers to the mask worn by actors in the Greek drama. The Madagascar word for hypocrisy means "the covering and the hiding."

The clay floor of the house is covered by a mat, which when soiled is not removed, but covered by a clean one. Often there is a layer of one or five rotten mats on the floor, each one placed on the other when dirty. When a stranger enters the house a fresh, neat is spread for him to sit upon, and all looks nice and clean. But underneath is all manner of dirt. The houses are built because cleanliness is a myth." The man who is all clean outside and dirty within is a hypocrite who has become "good by spreading a mat."

CRAP FUNDS GO TO HOSPITAL

Union Hill, N. J., Police Turn Over Cash Seized in Raids of Eleven Years.

New York.—The North Hudson hospital, Union Hill, N. J., received a donation of $11, mostly in dimes and pennies, recently. It was "subscribed" by the crap players of Union Hill.

It was not a voluntary offering, they having been "hooked" of the amount by the Union Hill police during the eleven years.

As the stakes were taken from the gamesters they were deposited in a safe. After the police station, Chief Wallmn found it was full of the other day and then decided to give the money to the hospital.

"WILD MAN" IS CAPTURED

Overpowered by Citizens After Terrorizing People of Lake Minnetonka.

Minneapolis, Minn.—A "wild man" who has been seen in a dozen places around Lake Minnetonka, a summer resort west of here, during the last two weeks, was captured after he had appeared entirely nude in the railroad yards at Crystal Bay, looked the door and terrified a dozen women who were waiting for a train. The screams of the women attracted the attention of a resident of Crystal Bay, who kicked open the door, silenced the man with a cane, overpowered the man and held him until the arrival of a deputy sheriff.

WEOGEO AS HE FLEES FIRE

Fireman Ara Completed 10 Use Axe to Release Fat, Medical Officer from Meritorious Predicament.

London—Called to a fire at the Friendly Societies' Institute, Great Yarmouth, fireman saw the corpulent resident medical officer, Dr. James Anderson, at the window of a third floor apartment, which was in flames. The escape was run up, but as tightly was the doctor wedged in the window frame that he could not get in. A fireman with axes before he could be released. He is now in a hospital.

To Restore Old Fort, Rose.

Sacramento.—There is a bit of sentiment back of a bill now before this legislature which has made a small appropriation for the restoration of the old Spanish fort at Fort Ross, in Sonoma county. At Fort Ross the Russians landed in 1812 and built the ruins of Senator Juilliat and Assemblyman Slater and Libby wish to be preserved.

Recently 1,600 Russians, men, women and children, have arrived to turned to the haven of a century ago and will engage in farming and other pursuits near the old fort.

The old chapel is restored they may again worship therein, as their predecessors did in 1812.

Bones 2,100 Years Old Found.

Geneva, Switzerland.—Prof. Revilliard, the government archeologist, in excavating at Bissassa, near Fribourg, has found imbedded in quartz the bones of a woman, together with some jewelry of the Gallic-Helvetic period, B. C. 150 to 200. The ornaments were a bronze necklace and a bracelet set with pieces of blue glass.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

UNIONS PROTEST PRISON WORK PLAN

CLAIM MADE THAT IMPORTED CONVICTS WILL BE EMPLOYED.

CALL MOVE BREACH OF FAITH

Meeting Results from Coming of 125 "Foreign" Convicts—Board of Control Issues Statement Denying Charges.

Stillwater.—Organized labor will not look with favor upon the substitution of convict labor, especially orders brought here from other states, for free citizen labor in the work on the new state prison building," said F. T. Wilson, secretary of the Stillwater Citizens' association, in submitting the association's protest to the state board of control, which met here to hear the complaints. C. B. Newby, of the board of control, presided. Mayor H. J. Mosier, of Stillwater, headed the delegation from the association.

Senator George Sullivan explained that there had been a thorough understanding in the legislature that convict labor should be used in connection with free labor, when provision was made for the erection of the new prison. He said: "We relied upon the integrity of the board of control, as it was originally constituted, to carry out this understanding. It is now said that the present plan to use convict labor is a breach of faith on the part of the board of control."

F. G. Hall, of Minneapolis, president of the Minnesota Federation of Labor, and H. H. Harrison, of Minneapolis, addressed the meeting, both of them condemning the importation of 125 prisoners, from Washington to work on the new buildings.

Chairman Vasaly said that the board of control intended to use the convicts only for the rough work and declared that three-fourths of the building construction would be done by free labor.

Board's Side Presented.

St. Paul.—The board of control declares that the report of the Stillwater meeting was exaggerated.

"No prisoner has been imported from anywhere," said a member of the board. "At the request of the federal government and under a statute of this state which permits it, the board agreed to allow the government to send to a temporary prison, to be recalled by the governor at any time, federal prisoners for whom there was no room in the federal prisons. This was done without the slightest reference to the question of any bids to be done at Stillwater. No definite decision has been made as to what will be done at Stillwater. Bids will be taken and it will depend largely upon the amount of the bids."

PROFIT AT RURAL EXPENSE

Judge Cray Criticizes Legislative Methods Before Third District Club Women.

St. Peter.—Addressing the delegates to the fifth annual convention of the Third district Federation of Women's clubs, Judge Lorin Cray of Nicollet criticised the state legislature for the extravagant expenditure of public funds. He said:

"We have been building up an educational and a financial oligarchy in our large cities at the expense of the rural districts. We have permitted the legislature to bestow appropriations lavishly. For years ago the state fair and the state university made up a budget and presented it to the legislature. This budget was for $1,500,000 or more than enough money to build every school house and every business house, every residence and every building of every description in the city of St. Peter. No doubt the buildings at the state agricultural college were needed, but they should have been scattered about rather than being centralized in one place."

JuJee Cray advocated better rural schools and better roads and the adoption of better farming methods as a means of preventing young people from drifting away from the farm.

Mrs. W. G. Clark of this city was re-elected district president for the fourth time today.

County Sanatorium Urged.

Mankato.—A mass meeting to consider the building by the county of a sanatorium to fight tuberculosis was held at the opera house Wednesday night, and was addressed by several doctors and others from all parts of the county, and at more length by Dr. W. J. Hawking of Minneapolis, president of the Minnesota Antituberculosis society and former superintendent of the state sanatorium at Walker. Resolutions were adopted, calling on the county board to erect a suitable sanatorium.

Kills Woman and Himself.

East Grand Forks.—Because of jealousy Leonard Erickson, 24 years old, shot and instantly killed Mrs. Elsie Seth Reece, 28, and then turned the revolver on himself and died in a few minutes.

Minneapolis.—Police drag the Mississippi river for the body of Roy John Christian, 44 years old, who lived on the Silver Lake road, and disappeared from her home Saturday. Footprints were found near the edges of the river

COUNTIES TO BUILD HIGHWAY

Direct Road Will Be Built From Twin Cities to Head of Lakes.

Rush City.—The good roads meeting held here under the auspices of the Twin Cities to Duluth Good Roads association was attended by delegates from sixteen towns besides the Twin Cities and Duluth, representing St. Louis, Carlton, Pine, Chisago, Ramsey and Hennepin counties.

The meeting was called to order by President J. A. Bratrom of North Branch. The principal speakers were Senator James T. Elwell of Minneapolis, who explained the Elwell road law; J. H. Armstrong, county surveyor of Ramsey county; J. H. Beck, general secretary of the Association of Commerce of St. Paul; H. J. Mullin of Duluth, representing the Automobile and Commercial club good roads committee; C. F. Meade of Moose Lake, who spoke of good roads work in Carlton county, and Grear Dent of the state highway commission.

The resolution adopted by the association at the December meeting, to establish a direct highway between the Twin Cities and the head of the lakes was indorsed. It was the consensus that the direct route is the best one to establish. The importance of immediate action was urged.

The meeting decided to appoint an executive committee consisting of delegates from each county to formulate plans for work. The following were selected:

St. Louis County—Dr. J. D. Parks, Col. Shillis and Frank P. Lindsay; Carlton county—C. F. Mahnke; Pine—John and P. D. Vibert; Pine county—Robert Jones; Chisago county—A. E. Webb, W. F. Hogan and Edward Olmsted; Chisago county—Charles Andrews, C. M. Johnson, J. A. Bratrom; Anderson Anderson and C. B. McCurdy; Ramsey county—Louis H. Pelet, F. J. Murray, J. H. Beck, W. J. Murray and Mayor Smith of St. Paul; Hennepin county—Secretary J. T. Elwell, Judge Hastings of 1852 and 1856 legislatures, F. Hubbard, Howard Strong and Aaron Gaines. The next meeting will take place at Forest Lake June 15.

UTILITIES CONTROL SCORED

Opponents of Governor Eberhart's Plan Hold Conference at Duluth.

Duluth.—Bitter denunciation of Governor Eberhart's plan to hold an extra session of the legislature this state control of capital, utilities and interests as Governor Eberhart and Attorney General Lyndon Smith, of Minneapolis, characterized the conference of opponents of such control of public utilities which was held at the Spalding hotel. A banquet was served at 6:30 p. m. after which the conference was in session. After the banquet the importance speeches of the conference were delivered.

City Attorney Harvey A. Clapp presided at the evening session, and the principal speakers were W. E. Lee, of Long Prairie; Frank Peterson, of Minneapolis, and Hugh Halbert, of St. Paul. Those who were not present, but were in attendance, Speaker Henry Riben, of Moose Lake, Senator Boyle, of Eveleth, or C. N. Haskell, of St. Paul. They had been expected to address the conference.

An attack upon the governor, the control state government and the so called "machine" was one of the features of the speeches of the evening.

EDITORS TO GO TO BEMIDJI.

Committee Making Ready for Northern Minnesota Publishers in June—To Visit Reds.

Bemidji.—On June 13, 14 and 15 the Northern Minnesota Editorial association will hold its annual outing in Bemidji, the feature being a trip by launch to the head of the Mississippi to Red Lake, where the party will be entertained by the government boat and later attend a pow-pow and feast to be given by the Chippewa Indians. The trip to Red Lake will be free to editors and their wives, the Bemidji Commercial club having arranged for the expense of the special train.

Plans also will be automobile trips to modern farms in the vicinity of Bemidji the evening of June 13 the editors will be given a banquet at the Commercial club rooms and at the same time a reception will be held for the wives of the editors.

The program for entertainment are under way and it is expected the meeting will be the largest and most representative ever held by the association.

School Head Fired Upon.

Shakopee, Minn., May 24.—What is believed to have been an attempt on the life of School Superintendent T. B. Miller by an unknown person took place here while the latter was on his way to his home. Three shots were fired at Mr. Miller from a window in the living room window, but the bullets passed wide of the mark. The last shot of the supposed would-be assassin. Description of the identity of the man has been discovered as yet, although the sheriff and deputies are at work on the case.

Resorts Are Closed.

St. Paul.—Chief Flanagan of this city has ordered all resorts here to close May 30, authorities fearing the face-Preston law which was passed by the last legislature. This law went into effect June 1.

Dr. Olmstad Fatally Injured.

Crookston.—When two miles from Mentor, Dr. Barthen's car, the rear one in the first run of the season of the Fosston Automobile club turned turtle and Dr. Olmstad was injured fatally.

GEN. GEORGE H. BAKER DIES

Passing of Distinguished Minnesotan Hastened by News of Death of Friend.

Mankato.—General James H. Baker, one of the foremost men of Minnesota for many years, died here rather suddenly of hardening of the arteries. He was seriously sick several weeks and had been improving.

General Baker's death comes profound sorrow in the community, where he was so long a leading figure. He was a member of the Masonic lodge, Witkin post of the G. A. R., the Loyal Legion and of the council of the State Historical society. He was for years a member of the official board of the Methodist church. His wife survives him, as do also two sons, Harry Edgar Baker of Ogden, Utah, and James H. Baker, jr., a student of the University of Minnesota.

Born in Ohio in 1829.

General James H. Baker was born in Monroe, Butler county, Ohio, May 13, 1829. Mr. Baker was only two years old when the family moved to Lebanon. In 1847 he entered Wesleyan university at Delaware, Ohio, graduating in 1847, taking Latin honors. A short time he became secretary of a seminary at Richmond, Ind.

In 1852 he bought the Ohio Gazette at Chillicothe, Ohio, one of the oldest papers in the state, and took its management. At the age of 25 he was nominated for secretary of state and after canvassing the field with Solomon P. Chase, the head of the ticket, was elected. The agitation of his term of office in 1857 found Mr. Baker on a long cherished purpose of moving to Minnesota, and the same year was a successful candidate on the Republican ticket for the same office he held in Ohio. He was reelected in 1861, and resigned the same year and enlisted in the Fourth Minnesota infantry. He was appointed colonel Nov. 16, 1861, and was under General H. H. Sibley in the campaigns of 1862 and 1863 against the Sioux Indians. Ordered, to the South he was soon after he departed for St. Louis with his regiment, of which he was placed in command of the post there by General Schofield. Such executive ability did he display that the 25th regiment was ordered elsewhere he was made provost marshal of the Department of Missouri under General G. M. Dodge. For faithful and meritorious service he was brevetted brigadier general of volunteers dating from March 13, 1866.

DISCOVER IDENTITY OF "I.C.R."

Richard Roe, Mystery Man, Believed to Be J. R. Retrom, Naval Hero; New Clue At Hand.

Rochester.—That Richard Roe, the mysterious patient at the Rochester state hospital, is Lieutenant Jacob R. Retrom of the United States navy, a hero of the Spanish-American war, the opinion of officials of the hospital staff here and is confirmed in a certain degree by the man himself, making a strenuous effort to tell his identity has been established.

The identity of "J. C. R." if it should prove true, has come to the officials in a letter from Edward Yost of Newark, N. J., who says he is a sailor.

According to the meager facts galeed in the letter, Richard Roe is Lieutenant Retrom. Yost writes he served with Retrom on the old battleship New York in the Spanish-American war, and that they participated in the battle of Matanzas, Cuba, in which Retrom received several wounds.

Yost's attention was called to the case by reading an article in the New York Star concerning "J. C. R." picture, and he encloses the newspaper production, declaring it is an excellent likeness of the lieutenant.

The latest clue to the discovery has been made in Yost's letter is strength by the enthusiastic manner in which "J. C. R." received the letter in which it was pronounced to him, exclaiming with joy, "That's it."

Upon receiving the communication Dr. A. Kilbourne examined the unknown. The name of Edward Yost was mentioned to him and he mentioned that he knew him by the name of Lieutenant Jacob R. Retrom was spoken.

For a moment the man looked dazed. Then he sprang upon his face brightened as never before, and he repeated it elapsed he left hand on his knee, crying, "It, it, it, it." Then ceased communicating in the affirmative.

A few moments later Roe, with pencil on paper, wrote "J. C. R.," and, encircling the C, substituted R. implying that that should be the middle letter. Later the name of Retrom left with his mind apparently at rest on that point, but that his first name is Jacob he declares is true.

Russian Woman May Stay.

Minneapolis.—Gittel Borowsik and her little 3-year-old girl may remain in the United States, if the mother whose husband sent aid to Rasnitzer, Russia, for her to come to Minneapolis, and then when she reached Ellis Island the government officials that he did not want her here. Through the intercession of Senator Clapp and Congressmen George R. Smith, the immigration officials have consented to allow the woman to remain here, if bonds are placed to insure against her becoming a public charge.

Clearing Right of Way.

Brainerd.—Swampers have commenced clearing the right of way for the new cutoff, 5.3 miles in length, which the Minnesota & International railway proposes to build from West Brainerd to Leaks.

Barneerville.—Plans are being formulated by the Centennial club for the biggest Fourth of July celebration in the history of Barneerville and western Minnesota. Some $1,200 has already been subscribed. The new ball grounds will be ready.

CIVIL WAR VETERANS TO MEET ON GETTYSBURG BATTLEFIELD

Huge Reunion of Blue and Gray to Be Held July 1 On Fiftieth Anniversary of Conflict—40,000 Are Expected to Be Entertained by the State of Pennsylvania.

Harrisburg, Pa.—On July 1 the veterans of the Civil War, both Blue and Gray, will meet again on the battle field at Gettysburg, Pa., after fifty years, but this time it will be in amity and affection.

The state of Pennsylvania on May 13, 1909, created a commission to consider and arrange for a proper and fitting recognition and observance, at Gettysburg, of the fiftieth anniversary of the battle at Gettysburg. In this the co-operation of the congress of the United States, and of other states and co-ordinated with the commission's duties and prerogatives and responsibilities, was made necessary expenses.

Text of Invitation to Veterans.

The invitation is as follows: "Pennsylvania, by its commission formally invites the soldiers of the United States and her Sister States and Commonwealths to accept this invitation from the commonwealth upon whose soil the battle of Gettysburg was fought, to share in this important anniversary and to help make it an event worthy of its historical significance, and an occasion creditable and impressive to your great and reunited nation," and likewise invites the co-operation and participation of the Grand Army of the Republic and the United Confederate Veterans.

Plans Will Be Liberal.

Pennsylvania—she providing all entertainment at Gettysburg during July 1, 2, 3 and 4, 1913, for 40,000 veterans (40,000) "honorably discharged veterans of the civil war," and she and the national government together, as provided by the act of congress of August 26, 1912, by each paying $50,000 for the war department with the Hon. Henry L. Stimson at its head, maintain a great camp around the battlefield, complete in all the necessaries of camp and garrison equipment, with all quartermaster, commissary, hospital and other necessary supplies and pie for such forty thousand veterans.

Free Transportation To and From Gettysburg.

With each commonwealth, state and territory of the United States co-ordination, as each deems best, to effect completion of the details of war it will issue free transportation, Pennsylvania's invitation being that to such "honorably discharged veterans of the Civil war" as come to Gettysburg for the above mentioned celebration from free transportation or at their own expense, and provide such credentials proving them to be such veterans as she will provide food, shelter and entertainment therefor, provided not she furnishes free transportation to or on cars sent to any point by veterans or veterans now resident within her borders, and to "all persons in leader legislative direction, which is now pending in her general assembly, the national government furnishing no free transportation at all.

The Trolley Transportation.

The trolley transportation question in whose territory Gettysburg is, is granted a new one by Pennsylvania's broad trip excursion rate, good for June 28 and returning, original starting point by July 15, a round trip ticket, good only on same route going and returning, at two and one cents per mile, but each state must have its own arrangements as to such similar associations covering the territory of the state to Pennsylvania. The railroads of Pennsylvania refuse, because of lack of room, to grant excursion rates to any association side tracks.

Great Reunion in Great Tent.

A great tent, seating between ten thousand (10,000) and fifteen thousand (15,000) persons, has been ordered immediately adjoining the camp, and there will be a great deal of audience, excepting the military parade and the reviews, and speech, save for the hours set apart for the above exercises, the veterans may hold all meetings they desire, for the best being arranged to be subdivided into numerous separate industries.

All veterans of the Civil war, north and south, are urged to wear their sovereign's uniform, and their corps, divisions, brigades, regiments and badges, as a means of identification and for the purpose of the reunion, and in the expectation that it will assist in forgetting irritations as to when and where their different commands, companies and in bringing together comrades who in the hostilities, for reason of lapse of time, fail to recognize each other.

Program for Four Days.

The program for four days' exercises and entertainment is not yet perfected in detail, but the tentative suggestions are:

July 1—Veterans' Day: Appropriate exercises under the joint direction of the Pennsylvania commission, and the commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic and the United Confederate Veterans.

July 2—Military Day: Under the direction of the chief of staff of the United States army. Special attachments of each arm of the regular service to participate as directed.

July 3—Civic Day: Under the direction of the governor of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, presiding and participated in by the governors of the several states. Oration, sermon and music.

July 4—National Day: The chief Justice of the United States presiding. Address of welcome by the president of the United States. Response by the governors of the states and territories. Fireworks.

40,000 Veterans Expected.

It is expected that 40,000 veterans of the war, not all of them, however, survivors of the Gettysburg battle, will be found encamped upon the field during the celebration of the anniversary of July 1. It will be a different reunion, to be sure, from the fife and drum corps of the two great armies of forty years ago. The call to awakening will be a call to a peaceful celebration while the call to the awakening July, 1863, was a call to arms to conflict and, to thousands of them, to death.

For years the veterans have been looking forward to this reunion. It is probable that there will be among many thousands of survivors of the battle.

Many of the states of the Union, north as well as south, have made appropriations to send the survivors to the Gettysburg reunion and to pay all their expenses. The battle of Gettysburg is recognized as the turning point of the war between the states. It has been called time and again one of the decisive battles of the world. Generally it is recognized that Gettysburg decided the great conflict, helped in the great mission probably by the fall of Vicksburg on the Mississippi, which on the same virtually at the moment that the conflict on the Pennsylvania field was decided in favor of the northern armies.

Large Sum for Entertainment.

The state of Pennsylvania has appropriated a large sum of money as its disposal for the entertainment of the surviving veterans, and the thousands of persons of local interest. Gettysburg, by its mark the days. Fifty years of Pennsylvania and in the north of repelling the visitors from the south. It is only fair that the same state will have its arms wide open in welcome to the men wearing the gray. Entertainment facilities in the north will be offered the visiting veterans, but it is hardly well understood that the state's interest in revisiting the scenes where Longstreet, Pickett, Pettigrew, Cemetery Hill, Culp's Hill and Spangler's Spring, Devil's Den, Little Round Top, Big Round Top, Cemetery Ridge

ORGANIZE GUN CLUB

Gun Club Starts With Good Membership—E. A. Nelson President.

A bunch of enthusiastic trap shooters attended a meeting Tuesday evening called for the purpose of organization of a local gun club.

The organization was completed by the election of the following officers: E. A. Nelson, president.

W. H. Krueger, secretary-treasurer Fred Cyr, field captain.

The club started with a membership at twenty-five. More have joined since the meeting and it is expected that the membership will reach forty or fifty.

Grounds will be acquired and a building put up. The club has also bought standard professional traps.

The local club has joined the state association and shooting contests with other towns will be arranged.

The new club starts out with the following members: Chas. Fellman, Oliver Sulzy, Vern Healy, Geo. Cyr, Fred Cyr, G. W. Locklin, M. A. Converse, Mr. Parrington, R.E. Fletcher, Walter Hale, A. L. KILLED WHOLE FAMILY

Northern Pacific's Winnipeg Flyer Crashed Into Auto Near Elk River Killing Five.

Running at a rate of fifty miles an hour to make up time Monday's Great Northern Winnipeg flyer crashed into an automobile at a crossing near Elk River, killing all of the six passengers in the car except a little girl five years old who escaped uninjured. The dead are:

J. L. Dawson of Kalonia, Ia.

Mrs. J. L. Dawson, his wife.

Mrs. C. C. Dawson, a daughter-in-law.

Frances Dawson, daughter of Mrs. C. C. Dawson.

Ernest Dawson.

The Dawsons had purchased a farm about 30 miles north of Elk River and were on their way to that point to make their future home. The highway which crosses the railway near the town of Nord, parallels the right of way for many rods, and Dawson, who was at the wheel, undertook to cross ahead of the fast running train. He had miscalculated the speed with which the locomotive was bearing down and his auto was struck when upon the track and buried 50 feet and torn to pieces.

WORLD PEACE, AMERICA'S PROBLEM

ABLE ADDRESS DELIVERED BY PRESIDENT FRANK L. McVEY.

It was an able address delivered by President Frank L. McVey of the North Dakota State University on the occasion of the 1913 high school commencement in Red Lake Falls last Thursday evening. His subject was "World Peace, America's Problem." He discussed the war problem in the logical and analytical manner that one would expect from the authority on economics and yet his address did not lack interest.

Mr. McVey was, before going to North Dakota, at the head of the department of economics of the University of Minnesota and is a recognized authority. He realigned his place with the University of Minnesota, he serve as a member of the Minnesota state tax commission.

His address was a forceful explanation of the enormous waste of energy in the program of all governments to sacrifice all opportunities for advancement to bring about preparedness for war. For centuries the people of Europe have been burdened with the tax and the services of their best men required for no other purpose than that they might at all times be prepared to engage in the occupation of killing.

This condition has retarded development and progress in all lines, and its effect has been felt in this country, though not in such a degree as in Europe.

His conclusion is that America's great opportunity for service is in the advancement of world peace. America should not be controlled by any one nation of either side of the country, the Mexicans quarrelling among themselves and the peace-loving Canadians and other friendly. There is little reason why America should expend much energy in war preparations. This country is the one world power prepared to take an advance stand in the cause of world peace.

Other numbers on the commencement program were well rendered selections by the high school chorus and Red Lake Falls band. The diplomas were presented by Dr. N. M. Watson, president of the Board of Education.

TRIMMED CROOKSTON

Locals Took an Early Lead and Kelfenbein Took a Rest.

The ball game played on the local grounds between Crookston and Red Lake Falls was won by the locals by score of 6 to 4. While the score was close, Red Lake's victory was more decided than the score would indicate.

The locals rounded in four runs in the first inning and got another in the third. The Crookstonites could do nothing with Kelfenbein's benders and at that stage of the game with a wide margin to spare the pitcher decided to take a rest, but arm being sore from the Memorial day game.

Healy went in and held the visitors well until the seventh when a couple of hits and a little misplay at air work gave Crookston four runs. Kelfenbein pitched the last two innings and wound the game up with a jerk, striking out five men in the two rounds.

EIGHTH GRADE GRADUATION.

Two Girls of District No. 112 Receive Diplomas.

Two young people received commencement diplomas at commencement exercises held at the school house in district No. 112, the first school of which Miss Viola Longtin is the teacher, on the evening of Memorial day, May 30, 1913. There was a program of pleasing patriotic numbers and an appropriate address by Rev. Fr. Degree.

Rose Longtin and Louise Emard are the young people who received diplomas. The diplomas indicate that they have satisfactorily completed the work of the eighth grade and they will have the privilege of entering upon the first year of high school work.

SHOOTING SCRAPE ON RESERVATION

SQUATTER TOOK A FEW SHOTS AT HOMESTEADER—WAS ARRESTED.

The following story of a shooting scrape was sent out from Thief River Falls this week:

Anton Kotlan, a homesteader of the town of Cloverleaf, was arrested and hailed before Judge Tarnant by Sheriff LaBree on Saturday last, on a charge of having fired upon and shot Jos. Hruby, another homesteader.

"In April, 1911, when the Indian reservation east of here, was opened up for homestead entry, both Kotlan and Hruby squatted on the same land, but Hruby was the first to file, waiting 7 days for the time to come when they would be open, and was the first in the long line of homesteaders that waited before the doors of the land office. Kotlan later tried to file on the same land, but his filing was rejected. This caused a series of contests in which the courts each time sustained Hruby.

"A year ago, Kotlan, anxious to get even threatened Hruby's life and has packed under bonds by the municipal assessor at this place to keep the peace for six months. Since the bond expired Kotlan commenced to annoy Hruby again, which resulted in Kotlan getting out his rifle and shooting Hruby while he was in his cabin. "The first shot fired went through the board will of the shanty and struck Hruby in the side. Hruby went outside and Kotlan fired two more shots but both went wide of the mark. The sheriff arrested Kotlan and he was bound over to the grand jury about June 25th.

"Hruby is not suffering any very great injury from the bullet wound he received, as the bullet was considerably spent by the time it reached its mark."

PLANS FOR NEW SCHOOL APPROVED

E. F. BROOMHALL OF DULUTH HAS BEEN EMPLOYED AS ARCHITECT

The plans for the new public school building to be built in Red Lake Falls, call for a modern building, substantially made and commodious and of attractive architecture, though not elaborate.

The building will be 116 x 75 feet in dimensions with a basement thirteen feet high and two stories above the basement. There will be sixteen rooms, including the gymnasium and the assembly room. The assembly room will be of a size that will make it possible to accomodate three hundred and fifty people when necessary. The ceiling of the gymnasium will be high, having the elevation of the basement and first story of the building. The boiler room is to be located outside of the main building.

Plans submitted by K. F. Broomhall of Duluth were approved by the board of education and he has been employed as architect and is to be preparing the plans and specifications in detail. He will have the plans ready about June 25th and as soon after that date as possible, bids for the contract of constructing the building will be considered and the contract awarded. It is expected that the work on the building will be commenced about the middle of July.

Architect Broomhall will prepare several sketches of the front of the building that the members of the board of education may have several of somewhat different design to choose from.

It is estimated that the building completed will cost about $37,000. However, it will not be necessary to complete all of the rooms. It is the opinion of the architect that the building may be completed as far as may be necessary for $31,000 or $32,000.

There is no doubt that the purpose of the board of education is to so construct the building that the future needs of the district may be provided for, will be generally approved.

AUTO DRIVE TO CROOKSTON

AUTO CLUB AND BAND TO BIG CELEBRATION THIS AFTERNOON.

Twenty-one members of the Red Lake Falls Automobile club drove their cars to Crookston this afternoon. T. convention this afternoon and evening.

CONTRACT INVALID

Thief River's Agreement With Phone Concern Is Held Void

As noted in the News Press of last week the Supreme Court reversed the order of Judge Grindeland in the case of Arpin vs. the city.

The court in its opinion holds that the contract with the Tri-State Company amounted to a franchise and was therefore illegal as the advertisement for the granting of such franchise was made.—Thief River News-Press.

FOREIGN SOLDIERS IN MINNESOTA

GOVERNOR GIVES PERMISSION FOR FOREIGN TROOPS TO PASS THROUGH STATE

Armed Canadian troops will invade Minnesota soil on June 22 and July 5 says a newspaper report.

Governor Eberhart has given permission for them to do so as a result of a request from J. S. Moore, counsel of the Department of State at Washington.

Mr. Moore requested that Companies A. C. and D., ninety-eighth regiment, Canadian infantry on their way from Fort Francis, Ontario, to Winnipeg, to attend an encampment at Sewall and on their return, be allowed to pass through Minnesota on the Canadian Northern railroad. He said that the men would be in full uniform and if required, their arms would be boxed in accordance with international usage in such cases.

Governor Eberhart's reply was that it would not be necessary for the arms to be boxed and that the Canadian soldiers would be welcome on Minnesota soil.

According to the Federal laws, troops of a foreign country cannot pass through United States territory without the consent of the governor of the state through which they journey, and the secretary of war.

BROOKS DEFEATED ST. HILAIRE

Won Game Sunday by a One-sided Score.

The fellows who represent Brooks on the base ball diamond have again demonstrated their superior ability as ball tossers. They went to St. Hilaire Sunday and trimmed the St. Hilaire fellows by a score of 21 to 7. The score indicates that the Brooks boys are probably not exactly pikers when they say they pounded the ball all over the lot.

OMER MILLER WINS THE HONOR

SON OF MR. AND MRS. SAM MILLER WILL GO TO STATE FAIR.

Omer Miller, the eighteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Miller living east of town, has won the honor of being the boy to represent Red Lake county at the state fair.

The prize to the easy-writing contest is a trip to the state fair and a week at the fair as a member of the boys' camp, with all expenses paid by the fair officers. The prize is certainly one worth working for.

Omer Miller's essay on the subject of "Corn," is as follows:

"In northern Minnesota the most preferable corn is Minnesota 22, because it is best adapted to the climate, maturing between ninety and one hundred days.

"The seed should be selected in the fall before frost, from the best stocks. The seed ears selected should be of uniform size, having straight rows well filled to the tips. The seed should be kept in a dry and well ventilated room, preferably over the kitchen, where usually the temperature is about seventy degrees. Before shelling the corn from the ears the kernels from the tips and butts of the ears should be separated from the rest. This will result in yield of corn of a more uniform size.

"To test the seed, take one hundred kernels from twenty-five ears, which have been numbered and place them between two woolen cloths in a dish, placing another dish over it to prevent evaporation. Keep warm and thoroughly damp. If the seed is good, the corn will germinate within three days. If more than ten should be kept in a warm place and sprouted. The cloth should be unwrapped in three days and the number of sprouted kernels counted, thus finding out the fertility of the seed.

"Corn does best on clover sod plowed in the fall. In the spring disk and harrow well several times so that the soil will be well pulverized and weeds killed while young. As the institute people say, cultivate early, while the seed is still in the attic. The corn should be planted three feet apart, and so apart, being the right distance to which a standard make riding cultivator.

"The best time to plant corn is between the tenth and twentieth day of May. Corn planted from one to two inches deep will germinate more quickly and produce better results than if planted deeper. The seed may not before there is heat enough in the soil to cause it to germinate if planted deeper than two inches. Use five or six quarts of seed to the acre.

"The ground should be harrowed with a light harrow after planting. The corn cultivator should be kept busy as soon as the rows can be seen, cultivating deeply the first time and shallow later in the season. The purpose of shallow cultivation is to prevent evaporation by breaking the crust and to destroy the weeds down. Deep cultivation at this time would cut the roots. The corn should be cut as soon as the kernels are glazed. The stalks should be taken to cut before frost, thus preventing them the feeding value of the stalks greatly. The corn should be shocked as soon as it is dry and kept dry to avoid moulding when stored away.

"Farmers now understand better the value of corn as an all-around feed for all kinds of live stock. A crop of corn puts the soil in a good condition for small grains and is also a good way of destroying weeds. Corn is the best grown feed on the farm for hogs and as a finisher for cattle before marketing. It is also a good feed for horses when mixed with other grain."

SCHOOL OFFICERS WILL MEET

ANNUAL OATHERING TO BE HELD LAST WEEK OF JUNE.

The annual meeting of school officers of Red Lake county will be held in Red Lake Falls during the last week of June. The exact date will be announced a little later when County superintendent Albany DeForge will have definite assurance from the speakers for the meeting when it will be possible for them to be here.

Building Fine Barn.

George Walker has about completed the construction, on his farm east of town, of one of the finest barns in the county. It is set on especially large building, being 37 x 65 feet in dimensions, but it is modern in every detail. It has concrete floors, a loft to hold an immense amount of hay, and is equipped with litter carriers, patent stanchions and arranged to be as convenient and sanitary as possible in every way.

TRIMMED THE FORKS

Locals Took Fast Contest Sunday by Two to One Score.

The ball game on the local ground Sunday afternoon between Red Lake Falls and the Grand Forks "White Sox" was a real thriller—a fast 9 to 7 contest featured by much clever work by both teams.

Hutchinson put up a star performance in the heaving department and had the visitors swinging wildly all of the time. He was especially cursed by every good support by his team mates.

The "White Sox" had taken on some of the university fellows and came prepared for a warm game. They got it and gave almost as good as they received.

Each team scored once in the first inning and then it was blanks for everybody until the seventh when both teams pushed over another. They scored a third time but through a slip on the part of the umpire, it was not counted. The "ompe" called a man out at the plate on what he thought was a force play. The catcher made no attempt to tag the man and there were only two men on bases, instead of three as the umpire supposed, when the score was made. The empire did not see fit to change his decision and the local manager decided not to "roar."

The locals are certainly playing winning ball and giving the fan his money's worth and plenty of opportunity to exercise his lungs.

Following is the score by innings:

GUN CLUB SHOOTS

Series of Six Will be Held on Tuesdays.

During the next six weeks each member of the Red Lake Falls gun club will attempt to break one hundred and fifty clay pigeons in a series of six shoots to be held on Tuesday of each week. In each shoot each club member will attempt to break twenty-five pigeons. Some of the members will shoot in the afternoon and others in the early evening. The one who breaks the largest number of birds will be awarded a suitable trophy.

The club members have leased shooting grounds at a very convenient location on the south edge of town. If you want to see some classy gun work any Tuesday evening, just go to Paul's hotel corner and then south to the end of the street and you will be rewarded.

CARRIED BY A DECIDED MAJORITY

FIFTEEN CITIZENS VOTED NO ON THE SCHOOL BOND PROPOSITION.

The special election held Friday evening for the purpose of voting on the proposition to issue and negotiate bonds in the amount of $16,000 for the purpose of constructing a new public school building in Red Lake Falls, resulted in 92 votes for the proposition and 15 against—and several hundred citizens absent.

Red Lake Falls being without a school building, except the small grade building, since the fire, it is hard to believe that any intelligent person would be opposed to the reconstruction of a modern building, especially on a proposition so modest as that proposed in Friday's election and it is just as hard to believe that there are fifteen citizens in the city looking in intelligence and a reasonable degree of public spirit. It is easier to believe that the fifteen citizens decided to vote no at the polls.

FINE SHOWING AS USUAL

NEARLY SEVEN HUNDRED THOU SAND ON DEPOSIT IN LOCAL BANKS.

In their quarterly reports, published in today's paper, the banks of the city make their customary excellent showing of business. There is on deposit to the three banks, ranging from $50,000 the total of money on deposit in the banks of the city at the season of the year, indicating that the people of Red Lake county or enjoying a fair measure of prosperity.

MISS LILLIAN ZAISER.

After Penful Illness, Death Came Monday Morning.

Though her death was not unexpected and it was known that only in death could there be relief from bodily suffering, the announcement that she had passed away brought pain to the many friends of Miss Lillian Zaiser. She died at 5:15 o'clock Monday morning, after many weeks of suffering.

Funeral services were held at the Presbyterian church at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, Rev. David V. Richardson officiating.

Lillian Grace Zaiser was born in Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, July 11, 1895, and at the time of her death was 22 years, 10 months and 29 days of age. She was the eldest of her life among the people of the city up to the time of her graduation from high school in 1913. She united with the First Presbyterian church April 16, 1905. After completing her school work she went to Northfield, where she was employed up to the time of her illness. She passed away surrounded by the members of her family.

She leaves her father and mother, six sisters and one brother to mourn her loss besides many relatives and hosts of friends, all of whom will remember her as a bright and cheerful girl, with a smile and hearty laugh for everyone, and whose first thought was for others even during all her intense suffering.

Oh why and whither?
God knows all;
I only know that all is good.
And that whatever may befall
Or here or there, must be the best that could—

PASSAGE OF LAW SEEMS CERTAIN

COUNTY CHAIRMAN THINKS GOVERNOR WILL WIN IN UTILITIES FIGHT.

Special Correspondence.)

St. Paul, June 9.—With a full knowledge of the strength of the Eberhart administration, knowing its control so far as the Twin City dailies are concerned and its many ramifications in a wire pulling way, it is no stretch of the imagination when I say that the passage of statewide law for control of public utilities seems olmost certain, but what bothers is whether the law as enacted will give the proposed control to the people or the utilities. The problem had its first rising last week when the house committee named by Speaker Rines to inquire into the question of control of public utilities met at the state capitol and organized. That is all it did, organize, according to the record made and if my observations are correct the committee will probably report that the utilities, which incloe the National Electric company of Minneapolis, the St. Paul Gas Light company and the several concerns supplying Duluth with heat, light and power, are not going to have everything their own way before the passage of the "yellow dogs," as the governor terms those organizations who are against his enactment of a law that will be to the interests of the people as he conscientiously believes. The biggest chump that walks the earth is the average voter and a heff dozen publications that operate in the population centers, so to speak of those who indulge in the biennial sport of kingmaking, are aware of this fact, still it is a matter of history that Nero fiddled once too often, that Cornwallis met his Waterloo and that Napoleon ate Waterloo. Who knows what might happen?

Tax Payers Protest.

To you taxpayers, patrons of gas, water and electric light companies, and the thousands who contribute annually to the Twin City Rapid Transit company, the Northwestern Telephone company and the Tri-State Telephone company, the same utilities is perhaps the least of your troubles. But that concerns you is what you pay, the fact that not content with the huge gun that it should be and that when you proclaimed the best you got in the way of relief was the merry "ha, ha." This "ha, ha" answer game is as old as the Egyptian pyramids and you don't get it gun is now the result. If the public utilities act prevails this fall at the general election as the governor say, will no longer be the style that has been the custom since you began trying to enact into a law. Sh'erious is his excellency that half of those connected with the legislature are at work working on the scheme and their efforts are covered with literature on the subject. His next step will be an invasion of those municipalities having public utilities within their midst with speeches covering the subject. His friends have prepared the way and, as I said, his speechmaking tour will be the matter of utilities before the state.

Duluth Is Interested.

Duluth, you probably know, already has the commission form of government and the people of the city of Minneapolis is now preparing to take on a charter providing for the new order that will give the people of the newest idea in fringe municipal Colonization. Those used to be connected with the Great Northern in a legal and a political way, but who now are with the Soo, Charles A. Pillsbury Washington county, remarked the other day that perhaps the governor might have some explanation for the sudden demand for a public utilities commission. It looked to him like considerable home government, with a demand for the rates in the matter of utilities that those operating the utilities were not prepared to grant. The governor was some boy in his day and he pilloted the Great Northern over many a rough political sea, what he does not know about the good old days is not worth knowing.

Governor Eberhart Is Pretty Much On the Job.

Governor Eberhart is pretty much on the job, for many days he has been on him and State insurance Commissioner Frank Day is after the state's immigration commission, without warning, and not named Fred D. Eberhart as state immigration commissioner. The naming of Mr. Sherman followed the retirement of H. J. Maxfield, who resigned some weeks previous following a disagreement with Secretary of State Schmahl. State Auditor Iverson and one other member of the board. State Insurance Commissioner Preus was decidedly against Sherman, for Sherman, you know, was a Leo man in the last campaign and if there is anything that Preus cannot stand it is opposition to his chief. No name in the matter of the state government stays long on the payroll who is so changed. As cop to the governor he was allowed to name John Klaisen as the Cambridge Press ex assistant commissioner. Throughout the proceedings Governor Eberhart made no protest, but I can see trouble ahead. In the matter of promotion Sherman is regarded as entitled to his new position, but sometimes it does not pay to buck the powers that be. As to what will happen, wait and see.

Attorney General Smith is now wrestling with the problem of whether or etternoyes employed by railroads and carrying a notorial commission can have free passes. A former decision was to the effect that they could not. Inasmuch as the anti-pass law has been modified so as to exempt policemen, firemen and mail carriers almost anything is possible now. The law was never of any value and the chances are that it will be put out of business entirely.

The state auditing department has been stocked up against the job of defending the mess claimsset law passed by the last legislature and as I get it those in charge do not relish the job. The federal courts have issued an order preventing the enforcement of the law and it is up to the state to show the solon court that the order should not stand. The law prevents the shipment of cream for a greater distance, than sixty-five miles unless in iced cars. If there ever was a good argument for a law this will compel the submission of a proposed to some referendum to be passed upon as to its constitutionality and language before passage is is this same cream law. This law was drawn in the interest of the country creameries and against what are known as the city creameries. Provision was made to have it effective limited to a legal authority. Presidents of the creameries of the state and the same prevailed in the case of its passage before the state will be at an expense of thousands of dollars to prove that it is constitutional, and the chances are that it will lose.

If the purchasers of automobiles are any indication of the prosperity of the country then the number of 31-horse power automobiles daily issued by Secretary of State Schmahl means Minnesota to be on the up trend. For the past month nearly 300 checks of $11.50 each have been received daily from the automobile owners. The total number of automobiles in Minnesota now is over the 50,000 mark. And for your benefit, dear reader, I will say most of the machines are owned in the country.

The commission seemed by Governor Eberhart, Speaker Rines of the house and Lieutenant Governor Burquist to select a site for a state state normal school is preparing to get busy. The members will visit the several towne which want the school. Among the applicants are Cass Lake, Walker and Park Rapids. Representative D. T. O'Neil of Thief River Falls was the author of the bill providing for the location of a school and it is no good bet that Dan will lend the plum.

Mayor Koller of St. Paul was presented with an automobile by administration delegates at Washington last week. GOLD MEDAL FOR BEST DAIRY COW

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY OFFERS COUNTY FAIR PRIZE

Some worthy Red Lake county cow is to have a great honor thrust upon her. The Northern Pacific Railway company is having made a gold cup, valued at $90, to go to the best dairy cow exhibited at the 1913 Red Lake County Fair to be held in Red Lake Falls, Sept. 24, 25, 26. The owner of the cow is to have the privilege of caring for the cup that the aforesaid cow shall win.

This cup is to be competed for each year of the fair in the future and is to remain the permanent property of the farmer whose cows may win it three times. Each year the farmer whose cow shall win the prize will have his name engraved upon the cup.

RECEIVE COMMON SCHOOL DIPLOMAS

CLASS OF SEVEN AT BROOKS, FOUR AT PLUMMER AND OTHERS IN COUNTY.

Seven young people who completed the work of the eighth grades offered in the public schools have received common school diplomas at exercises held in the Woodmen hall, Brooks, Wednesday evening, June 4. There was an appropriate program and the diplomas were presented by Albany DeForge, county superintendent. The following young people received diplomas:

Nellie M. Perrin, Mary C. Lambert, Selma Norden, Albert H. Lussier, Twisdred J. LeRoux, Wallace S. Bonekiln, Harriet M. Lockman.

The class colors were purple and orange; motto: "No Victory Without Labor;" flower: lilac.

At Plummer four young people have completed the work and have received diplomas. They are: Bertha McCaull, Hannah H.—Christensen, Annie L. Petersen, Percy Blodgett.

In the Lesha district, No. 40, Mabel E. Lesha has completed the work and received a diploma. As stated in the last week's paper, two young people of the Patnode district, east of town, received diplomas on Memorial day.

These common school diplomas have a real value. They are given only when that the pupil has satisfactorily completed the work of eight grades and is entitled to enter upon the first year of high school work.

LIKE OLD TIMES

Band Concert Monday Evening Was Greatly Enjoyed.

The open air concert given Monday evening by the Red Lake Falls concert band was a pleasant reminder of the time when Red Lake Falls had a band that was famed far and wide. And the concert was a pleasant one, enjoyed by people. In spite of the fact that more than one half of the band members are young men and comparatively inexperienced as musicians, the concert was first-class and several selections that are considerably longer could not "touch," were rendered in a very pleasing manner.

Director Dominic has, during the past few months, done excellent work training the younger musicians and now with the older and more handling the heavier parts, he has an excellent band of forty pieces. The forty band boys make an attractive appearance in uniform and because of the size of the band and the fact that they play several stirring marches are especially effective in parade.

BIG CELEBRATION AT BROOKS

GLAD DOINGS FOR ST. JOHN'S DAY—RED LAKE FALLS BAND WILL PLAY.

There is to be a big celebration in Brooks St. John's day, Tuesday, June 24.

There will be public addresses by well known speakers. The Red Lake Falls band of forty-five pieces will furnish music for the occasion. There will be a ball game between two strong ball teams and a program of athletic sports. There will also be dancing in the afternoon and evening. The Brooks people promise a good time for all who attend.

ROOSEVELT CASE IS COMPROMISED

EDITOR NEWETT WITHDRAWS CHARGE OF PAPER AND THE COLONEL IS VINDICATED.

TESTIMONY PROVES SOBRIETY

Nominal Damages of Six Cents Award of Court to Roosevelt—Jury Unable to Find Witnesses Who Saw Teddy Drunk.

Marquette, Mich., June 3.—Theodore Roosevelt has won his vindication. He has proved he is not a drunkard.

More than that, he has proved as nearly as a man may do by his intimates of a lifetime that he has never even been slightly under the influence of liquor and that he is no abstemious as a man may be and still drink alcoholic liquid. His libel suit against George A. Newett of lapbeming ended abruptly.

Charge is Taken Back.

Newett surrendered and withdrew the charge of intoxication upon which he will "gets drunk and that not infrequently."

A statement read in open court, he admitted he had combed the country and found not single witness who could testify he had seen Colonel Roosevelt take liquor to excess. To all intents and purposes he threw himself upon Roosevelt's mercy. And then Roosevelt unwilling to accuses upon Newett the heavy damages he could have claimed, arose in court and declared he had achieved his object. Disproved the lale that did him such injury in the last campaign and asked the court to direct a verdict in his favor for nominal damages only—which, in Michigan, means 6 cents.

The Roosevelt party left Chicago at noon and will settle his own costs of close to $10,000.

Refuses to Divulge Intent.

Somebody asked the colonel later what he would do with the 6 cents. He will threw back his head and laughed in hearty guffaw, but refused to reveal his intentions, except to say, to the slickel and the penny he had accepted.

As a set of citizens he is his case. Theodore Roosevelt brought into court Saturday four men who have lived closer to him than anyone that lives, aside from his wife and children, to testify that he had never taken liquor to excess.

Colonel's Closing Witnesses.

W. Emlin Roosevelt, his cousin and lifelong chum; Charles Tyree and James Sloan, the secret service men, who spent all their waking hours with him while he was president and sliept at his door at night: William Loeb, Jr., the colonel's private secretary who while he was governor and president, all months she stood at were the colonel's use of strong drink comes close to total abstinence.

They who attended the door during the ten hotly exciting days of the Chicago national convention and testimony that in that time no drink but milk entered the colonel's room.

Dr. Shandels of Cleveland, the railroad traffic manager who routed and traveled with the colonel's campaign train in 1912, also testified that Roosevelt tasted no more than a single glass of mildly alcoholic drink on any occasion.

Depositions by George H. Roosevelt, cousin once removed to the plaintiff, Albert Shaw, editor of the Review of Reviews; George B. Cortelyou, president of the Consolidated Gas corporation of New York and former secretary to President Roosevelt, and Alexander Graham, newspaper correspondent, were read.

All testified to the colonel's strict sobriety.

Other depositions from Admiral George Dewey, Dr. Edgar A. Mearns and William B. Delaney, the colonel's barber while he was president, were read at the afternoon session.

Yesterday, which Colonel Roosevelt testified at Marquette Tuesday., The "proper use" of mint, according to George, is only in julips.

Editor of "Century" to Retire.

New York, June 4.—Robert Underwood Johnson has announced his retirement from the editorship of the Century magazine. Mr. Johnson who is widely known for his poetical writings as well as for his efforts in behalf of his activities in the campaign against the game piracy and the campaign of international arbitration has been on the staff of the Century since 1875. DECLARE SCHOOL HEAD GUILTY

FINDING OF CITIZENS' COMMITTEE IS UNANIMOUS AGAINST HEETER.

Shows That Pittsburgh Superintendent Took Liberties With at Least Three Women—To Get Further Hearings.

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 4.—Superintendent of Schools S. L. Heeter, into whose morality a committee of citizens went as an investigating committee appointed by the board of education, was adjudged guilty of "making improper advances and taking unwarranted liberties" with three women, in the report of the committee, made to the board.

Recommend Immediate Hearing.

The board received the report and ordered that a copy be placed in the hands of the superintendent and that he be suspended and that, under the provisions of the school code, he be entitled to a hearing at once.

The finding of the committee was unanimous on the immorality charges, but in the matter of an alleged refusal to pay the bill of a teachers' agency, the majority found that the superintendent made "an improper and dishonest proposition to use his official position in order to compromise a claim made against him judicially."

The latter case, known as the Brewster case, was brought about by a claim for money alleged to be due for services in securing Heeter his position. In response to letters, Heeter is said to have written one offering to find positions under him for applicants to the agency in payment of the claim against him.

Minister's Dissenting Vote.

The dissenting vote was that of Rev. George R. Shelton, of the Second Presbyterian church.

With the report, the committee submitted to the board of education a letter from Heeter, purporting to contain the testimony taken in the committee's investigation. This the board declined to make public.

Rumors associating Mr. Heeter's name with charges brought by a domestic, who was taken from his home by Mrs. Claire Heeter and children, began 11 weeks ago. When it was thought the girl would die, the coroner was summoned and Heeter was implicated in the girl's statement. Saturday four men who have been closer to him than anyone that lives, aside from his wife and children, to testify that he had never taken liquor to excess.

ALLIES AND TURKS SIGN PEACE PACT

TURKEY MUST GIVE UP LARGE PORTION OF EUROPEAN TERRITORY.

MAIN PROGRAM AT ARLINGTON

This Question and Partition of Spoils Left to Commission—Disarmament Protocols Are to be Considered Separately.

London, June 3.—Representatives of Turkey and all of the Balkan allies, Bulgaria, Greece, Montenegro and Servia, have affixed their signatures to a treaty of peace, thus bringing to an end the Balkan war that began eight months ago, costing several hundred million dollars and countless lives.

Separate Protocols.

As soon as the peace pact was signed, Bulgaria and Turkey drew up a separate protocol, providing for immediate demobilization of their armies.

The peace pact was signed in the presence of Sir Edward Grey, British foreign secretary, and several ambassadors of the great powers.

By the terms of the treaty Turkey will give up all European territory west of a line running from Enos, on the Egean sea, to Midia, on the Black sea. The Turks also give up Crete.

Albania will be given 'an autonomous government, the boundaries to be fixed by the powers. The fate of the conquered territory will be divided by the allies. They have not yet agreed on the lines of division.

The ownership of the Egean islands also will be settled by the powers.

Matter of Indemnity.

The matter of indemnity is left to a commission to meet June 2 in Paris. The allies demanded $300,000,000 each indemnity.

The Balkan war began Oct. 8, 1912, when Bulgaria, Greece, Servia and Montenegro, in a federation known as the Balkan league, declared war on Turkey. Roumania declared neutrality.

Peace Positions Attacked.

London.—Bulgarian artillery at Fresya have opened fire on the Greek positions in the direction of Eleuthera, according to the Exchange Telegraph company correspondent at Athens. The Bulgarian commander refused to enter into negotiations for the purpose of stopping the firing. Owing to this aggression by the Bulgarians a portion of the Greek fleet has been sent to Eleuthera.

Plan Strike Probe.

Washington, June 3.—The senate committee on education and labor met to plan its investigation of strike conditions in the Paint Creek district of West Virginia. Methods of procedure were outlined, and a sub-committee probably named.

Kills Boy by Mistake.

Kansas City, Mo., June 2.—Pat Lawson of Fulton, Mo., 15 years old, was shot fatally on a train by John Sick, a deputy sheriff, who, it is said, mistook Lawson and his companion, Albert Pruett of Potean, 20 years old, for horse car stealers. Lawson died here as he came off his run. Sick knew he had shot a man who he thought was trying to enter his car near Howe, Okla., but was dismayed when police told him the man was dead.

Of the boys were beating their way.

Labor Man Accuse Lorimer.

Chicago, June 3.—The Chicago Federation of Labor at its regular meeting last afternoon adopted a set of resolutions in which it was declared that collusion between Senator Lorimer, the legislature and William Lorimer defeated the initiative and referendum bill. This members of the federation in repudiating the resolution declared that they were "willing to be put it necessary." The resolution declared that Lorimer sat behind the speaker's chair at the legislature and directed the battle against the bill.

Two Killed in Indiana Wreck.

Lafayette, Ind., June 3.—Two unidentified men were killed and five injured when a passenger train crashed a Big Four freight train near Stockwell, Twelve cars, five of them loaded steel coal cars, were demolished. The seven men were stealing their way.

Washington, June 3. — All officers were re-elected, including Elder A. G. Daniells, as president, by the general conference of Seventh Day Adventists of the World; at Takoma Park, Md.

FOUR DIE IN WELL OF GAS

THREE SACRIFICE LIVES IN RESCUE ATTEMPT.

One Death Due to Exelted Crowd Who Drop Man Into Pit.

Chicago, June 3.—Four men were killed by gas in a new well at Chicago Heights, a suburb 30 miles from here. Three of the men sacrificed their lives in rescue work. Their bodies were recovered late last night.

The dead are: Robert Bruce Johnson, Edward Revoir, Wtaxyzta Volkir and Jaynte Parnygnat.

Volkir was in the employ of Parrygnat, digging the well, and had reached a depth of about 30 feet. He entered the well in the forenoon and never returned. In the afternoon the coroner descended with a rope tied to his neck. Neighbors who noticed his failure to return gave the alarm.

Johnson's death was caused by a panic of those who remained above the well, it is said. He was the last of the four to descend and, instead of going down a ladder he was being lowered by means of a rope tied around him.

When about 15 feet of the rope had been let out Johnson became faint from the gas and called to be pulled up. In the excitement those who held the rope let go and he fell to the bottom.

All of the men were employed in the factories of the National Brick company. Revoir was the first to volunteer to enter the well to help Volkir and Parygnat.

Penitentiary Pennant Race.

Atlanta, Ga., June 2.—The pennant race among the baseball clubs in the United States Penitentiary Baseball league here is now two months old and has developed an early surprise as the fights in the major leagues of the national game. The "Chasers" sinners last year, are no better than fourth, with a percentage of .500. The "Athletics" are in the "cellar," but a victory to their credit. The race now is between the "Hustlers" and the "Pipers," both with a clear record of victories, the "Hustlers" leading the "Pipers" by one.

URGE OUSTING OF WALDO

Protest Held Now York Police Commissioner "Incompetent and Wholly Unfit."

New York, June 4.—The removal of Richard Enright as police commissioner, an appointive post he has held for two years under Mayor Gaynor, is recommended in a memorial report adopted by the aldermanic committee on public safety. The report is part ment after Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, was slain last July by men hired by former Police Lieut. Charles Becker.

Commissioner Waldo is characterized in the report as "incompetent and unfit" and capable of administering his department."

Allies Reach Agreement.

Sofia, Bulgaria, June 4.—An agreement in principle for a meeting of the premiers of Bulgaria, Servia, Greece and Montenegro was reached by the Bulgarian and Servian ministers who were in Bucharest to the Bulgarian frontier, to exchange views on the situation. During their conference the Balkan premiers will attempt to settle all the matters in dispute between the allies. Dr. G. Danef, the premier, pal Bulgarian peace delegate, has left London for Sofia in response to an urgent dispatch.

Duel Wipes Out Family.

Greeley, Colo., June 3.—In a duel between Eugene Chaffee and Leon Bernard at their ranch home, sixty miles northeast of here, the entire Stanley family was killed, according to information telephoned to Corcoran Church by a Sedgwick, Colo., physician.

Church Taxing Law Accepted.

Madrid, June 3.—The papal nuncio informs the foreign minister that the Vatican will accept the new Spanish law taxing church properties of all kinds.

Falls 400 Feet Into Marsh.

New York, June 3.—Falling four hundred feet from an aeroplane, Arthur Lumpkam, a youthful parachute jumper, landed feet first in a Staten Island marsh and was buried to his neck in the mud. With ropes and boards he was extricated. At a hospital it was found he was suffering from shock. Lumpham was taken up by Harry Brown, an aviator, and was starting on a five hundred-foot drop. His parachute failed to work when he made his leap.

TARIFF COMMITTEE REVERSES ACTION

NOW VOTES TO PLACE WHEAT, OATS AND LIVESTOCK ON FREE LIST.

DISPOSITION IS NOW FINAL

th Line With Views of Wilson and Other Party Leaders—Inquisitorial Clause Is Being Dealt With.

Washington, June 5.—Reversing its former action in voting to place wheat, flour, oatmeal and fresh meats on the dutiable list, the senate finance sub-committee in charge of the agricultural schedule has now voted to place livestock, wheat and oats on the free list.

To Meet Wilson's Views.

This action, it was authoritatively stated, was taken to meet the views of President Wilson. Senator Simmons, chairman of the finance committee, and other administration leaders, who disapproved the decision announced Monday to tax meats 10 per cent as compensatory to a duty on cattle in the Underwood bill and to assess a compensatory duty on both flour and oatmeal.

The vote to reconsider was taken in the subcommittee on a motion made by Senator Simmons, ex-officio member of all the subcommittees handling the various tariff schedules, when he returned to the capital from a conference with the president.

In this contingement of the free list, Senator Simmons is known to have taken a leading part, as he did in the matter of raw wool and sugar before the ways and means committee. As he still is standing uncompromising for the wool and sugar schedules, so, it is declared, he will stand firmly for free cattle, sheep and hogs, and free wheat and oats now that this has been determined upon as the party policy.

Went To White House.

When the sub-committee's tentative action was announced the senator immediately took the alarm. Senator Reed, "I told the president," he said later, "that members of the finance committee in informal conference, had agreed that there should not be a tax on meats and flour. It was then that the sub-committee had taken different action, but I informed the president that the majority of the finance committee had said we would vote instead to place cattle and other live stock and wheat and oats on the free list.

"This, President Wilson agreed to and that would be all right."

The inquisitorial clause of the Underwood bill, which aroused foreign protest, has been giving the William's sub-committee considerable trouble, and in trying to work a modification of Mr. Previsions they have had the aid of Secretary McAdoo, Secretary Bryan and John Bassett Moore, counsellor of the state department.

Expect Peace In Duration.

A plan now is being discussed to combine a portion of the provision with the amendment proposed giving the secretary of the treasury the right to proclaim values, thus to have a safeguard against undervaluations and at the same time the operation of the provision's effect.

Dies at His Post.

Engineer French died with his hand on the throttle, having been so to attempt to save himself by jumping. He was true to the responsibility, even up his death. His body lay pinioned between the fireman and the boiler for hours before a wrecker arrived and released it. He sons survived remains. The gangway plate between the locomotive and the baggage car was two, and the engineer's leg had slipped down between the plate and the car apparently cut in two.

Fireman Spangler jumped before the engine toppled over. He was taken to a Mooreton hospital.

Delayed by Hot Box.

The cause of the delay to the ill fated train No. 1 was discovered by which a hotbox bothered the crew. Considerable delay occurred at Barnesville, Minn., where Frank French worked his last night's run. In connection with the train for the Great Northern, Engineer Wright was in charge of the traffic.

Evidence of the speed of the train is the fact that, plainly evident to the hundreds spectators who viewed the scene of the mess Saturday night, that the ponderous locomotive had thundered around for about 200 feet, then toppled over into a ditch and down a fill. Fireman Sherwin, the pilot smashed; and there was left of the steam dome from the valves like a tired puffing monster, exhausted by the wreck and ripe for retirement.

The wreck causing the derail sight to Jerch Guildice, the young Italian who is charged with the murder of Howard Jonas.

Physical Defects Halt Commissioning.

Annapolis, Md., June 5.—Four Midshipmen of the graduating class who are satisfactory in their studies will not be commissioned as ensigns upon graduation because of physical defects, it is announced, but will be given a commutation leave. They are Charles L. Austin of Pennsylvania; Frederick Lewis Ayres of Kansas; Addiction of New York and Paul de V. Siesger of New Jersey. Other members may not graduate, their cases now being in the hands of the secretary of the navy.

Denver Grounds Against Entertainers.

Denver, Colo., June 5.—Portz-zatan capitals of the Balkan states, whose treasuries of the nations, called for the Balkan conference, are represented at the Panama-Pacific exposition here.

Mr. Leo further said he could offer no theory or explanation as to the cause of the accident, but was confident the previous accident, he said and that the brakes failed to work, but that he managed to stop the train by time, so that only his front engine trucks left the track.

The tower man further substantiated his position by calling attention to the fact that when he threw the switch to put an N. P. train the right of way, all the switches governing Great Northern trains are automatically locked and cannot be unlocked until the time lock runs down.

ORIENTAL LIMITED IN THE DITCH

GREAT NORTHERN'S FINEST AND FASTEST TRAIN IN DITCH NEAR MOORHEAD.

ENGINEER FRENCH IS KILLED

Fireman Beeker is Injured and Several Passengers Were Severely Shaken Up—Cause of Accident a Mystery.

THE DEAD.

Engineer Frank French, aged about 40 years, Barnesville, Minn., survived by wife, two sons and daughter.

THE INJURED.

Fireman Wilse Beeker, aged 30, nose cut and severe bruises. Suffered hemorrhages; is at Moorhead hospital.

Dr. W. T. Hamilton, Havre, Mont., leg slightly bruised.

D. E. Ferguson, Minneapolis, hand cut.

Dr. T. A. Ewart, Chester, Mont., leg bruised.

Mrs. Judge Greenwald, Fall City, Neb., body shaken up.

Mrs. A. W. Wells, Sioux Pass, Mont., hip contused.

Sims Randall, Fergus Falls, Minn., severe shaking up.

Other passengers were severely shaken up.

Fargo, N. D., June 5.—The Oriental Limited, the Great Northern's finest and fastest train, known on the schedules as No. 1, was wrecked this morning on the ditch about a mile east of Moorhead, resulting in the death of Engineer French, an old time employe of the railroad company; the injury of Fireman Nick Becker and several passengers.

The Oriental Limited was running at a speed of about 60 miles an hour, being about 40 minutes behind its scheduled time, when the crash came. A wreck occurred was probably making 40 miles an hour. With little warning the engine left the rails, those who are going the mail car, baggage coach and smoker left the rails, but did not go clear over. The first, third and fourth cars and three standard Pullmans remained on the track.

Among the passengers was Great Northern Traveling Passenger Agent L. L. LaRue, who makes his headquarters in St. Paul. Mr. LaRue quickly went through the train and ascertained the injuries of passengers for report to St. Paul.

Wrecker Late in Arriving.

It seemed to take an unusually long time to get the wrecking train on the ground, and until the arrival about 9 p. m., the dead engineer's body remained where death came to him. Many saw him there—a gruesome spectacle to men used to a feeling of commendation for efficiency of a faithful perished at the post of duty.

Due to the delay in repairing the tracks, which were displaced several feet south the derailment occurred, the cars remaining in sound condition and ready to be hitched to Barnesville, from there sent around by way of Crookston and Grand Forks.

FAMILY WIPED OUT BY N. P. FAST TRAIN

WINNIPEG FLYER STRIKES AN AUTO AT CROSSING KILLING FOUR.

TWO ESCAPE WITH INJURIES

These in Serious Condition—Driver of Machine Tried to Cross Ahead of Fast Train on Dangerous Crossing.

Elk River, Minn., June 2. — The Northern Pacific's Winnipeg Flyer No. 13, which left Minneapolis about 8:25 a. m. Monday, ran down and killed four members of an auto party of six at the Nord highway crossing of the road, a half-mile below Elk River, shortly after 10 o. m. The dead are:

J. L. Dawson of Kelsea, Iowa; Mrs. J. L. Dawson, his wife; son-in-law of the Dawsons, name not known here; eight-year-old girl, niece of the Dawsons.

Two Are Injured.

The wife of the son-in-law sustained a crushed arm and the member was amputated at the Nord home about noon., A second girl, supposed to be her daughter, escaped with compara tively slight bruises.

Difficulty was experienced in gathering the names of the members of the party and the various details of the accident owing to the fact that the survivors were administered anesthetic and also because of the excitement and confusion.

The Dawsons had purchased a farm at Clear Lake, about thirty miles north of Elk River, and were on their way to that point to make their future home.

Miscalculated Speed.

The highway which crosses the railway steel near the home of Just Nord parallels the right-of-way for many rods, and Dawson, who was at the wheel of the machine, undertook to cross ahead of the fast-coming train. He had miscalculated the speed with which the locomotive was bearing down and his auto was struck when upon the very center of the track and hurled fully fifty feet in broken pieces.

The bodies of two of the dead were carried along by the machine in its flight and were crushed out of form almost beyond recognition. The injured who survived the collision were pitched up near the tracks.

Word of the accident was telephoned from the Nord farm home and county officials and citizens were taken in autos to the scene. In the absence of the coroner from the county, the bodies of the dead were taken in charge by the county attorney and brought here to this city. The survivors were removed to the Nord home, where the arm of the second woman in the party was amputated. Arrangements for an inquest are being made.

WESTON COMING TO STATE

Aged Pedestrian Is Now Waiting From New York to Minneapolis.

New York.—Edward Payson Weston, the famous pedestrian, whistled and in his seventy-third year started at noon Monday on a walk of 1,446 miles from New York to Minneapolis. The veteran "hiker" set out from the plaza of the College of the City of New York, Convent avenue and One Hundred and Thirty-ninth street, when President John H. Finley of the college gave the word "Go."

Concerning a statement by John Bain, 71 years old, of Stamford, Conn., that he would start Monday and beat him to Minneapolis, Weston said: "Well, I am glad to encourage the young fellow."

Weston intends to be in Minneapolis at the end of sixty days. He admits that Bains may get there first, but says he is not trying for any records.

Fire Destroys Five Saloons.

Moorhead, Minn., May 30.—Five saloons nearest the south bridge were burned by a fire which started from a lighted candle in the basement of a small lunch counter place. The saloons burned were those owned by O. Rustad, Ed Smith, Anton Larson, Peterson and Akeson and the Waterhouse saloon. They burned with great rapidity. The Fargo fire department was called. Total losses on the buildings and contents of the five saloons is estimated at $46,000.

Lived to Be 100.

Minneapolis.—Staying death until he had recorded out 100 years of life, Peter McDonough, father of P. F. McDonough, 732 East Twenty-fourth street, died early Sunday. During his declining years his last end only decline was to live until June, 1913, the month in which he was born a century ago, and he finally clung to life until the new month was ushered in. Then I was thought to bove born his birthday, though the records in always celebrated on the 24th day, that being the anniversary of his baptism.

RELICS OF PREHISTORIC AGE.

Holzinger Confirms Importance of Discovery of Elephant's Bones Near Wahaska.

Winona.—Professor J. M. Holzinger of the Winona normal school, gives out the following interview concerning the remains of an elephant recently found on the Dodge farm near Wabasha, the articles being preserved after a careful inspection of the skeleton.

"Some confusion," he says at the outset, has been caused by the fact that about a year ago an elephant's tooth was taken out of the gravel pit in the railroad right-of-way, a short distance above Wabasha station. That tooth belonged to a traveling circus elephant of recent years it is evidenced by the fact that students from Wabasha recalled that a show elephant had died about a dozen years ago at their home town and had been buried in the railroad right-of-way.

"Now, it happens that, close upon the heels of this incident, the workers, George and Frank Budde, reported to Dr. Sanderson their finding elephant remains on a farm of Frank, five miles in the country out of Wabasha. Frank Budde's farm is a secluded little valley tributary to Trout Creek valley, which joins the main valley of the Zumbro and Murfrees. '

Revealed by Erosion.

"The valley farms nestled in the side streams to the Zumbro in this vicinity have in the geological past been subject to tremendous erosive action at the annual spring freshets. Frank Budde's farm, nearly level, on the most fertile soil, has within one decade been gutted by a ditch nearly twenty feet deep and a mile long, with numerous side gullies. Down from the nearly perpendicular wall of one of these side gullies that o year ago Frank Budde found projecting a piece of tusk over six feet long and fully seven inches in cross section. Fragments of this piece are now in possession of George Budde, residing at Kellogg fully substantiating the statement of the large diameter of the tusk. But the larger part of the tusk has since crumbled into small pieces.

"The Budde brothers have brought to light two more well preserved elephant's teeth, nearly perfect. These have a grinding surface of 3.5 by 8 inches, the enamel ridges being about 1 inch. They have also laid bare a part of what appears to be the tusk in place, preserve this will, however, be a difficult task, for the bone has changed to a soft, cheesy consistency. What other parts of the skeleton are preserved under the mantle of glacial drift it is not possible to foretell. It will require the services of experts to do the excavating to lay it bare. This seems to be a most serious task, however, than the preserving of the bones after they are secured, unless they are in a better state of preservation than the bones of Stats Bluuid Excavate.

The conclusion reached is that while it is difficult to foretell just how much of the skeleton will be found, the spirit of science should be that some institution with sufficient funds available should undertake the task of unearthing this truly pre-historic mammoth."

J. J. Hill Aids Memorial Fund.

Moorhead.—The pedestal for the proposed statue of Ivor Anaen, the Norwegian scholar, which is to be erected on the campus of Concordia Lutheran college, has been provided through the generosity of James J. Hill. The local committee found itself short of funds and Mr. Hill was appealed to, as well as the general public. Mr. Hefle, secretary of the state association, was called upon by Mr. Noble, secretary and treasurer of the Great Northern, and after a short conference, Mr. Noble handed to Mr. Hefle a check to cover the pedestal, which is to be of light gray Minnesota granite. The statue of Anaen is by Mrs. Hill. In addition to Northern Pacific officials and employes a number of citizens of the pedestal from Morton to Moorhead. The statue is to be unveiled early in the summer.

SUICIDE REVEALS ROMANCE

Body Taken From Lake and Identified As Mrs. Florence E. Gebhardt.

Minneapolis, May 29.—The woman who rowed to the deepest part of Lake Como in a small boat late Tuesday and deliberately leaped out of the craft and was drowned at 8:30 o'clock, once E. Gebhardt, well known as a writer for magazines and newspapers under the pen name of "Florence Ames" and the divorced wife of Professor George F. Gebhardt, head of the mechanical department of Armour institute, Chicago.

She was the daughter of Rev. J. A. Adams, editor of the Advance. Her body was taken from the lake and identively identified. Mrs. Gebhardt ended her life after repeated talks with Raymond Burnham, a salesman for the company and a brother of Professor Gebhardt Burnham in a formal statement issued declared that he and Mrs. Gebhardt had engaged to be married and had only been waiting for the necessary time to follow the woman's divorce from her first husband.

Burnhem, in the statement, attributed the suicide to the disordered condition of Mrs. Gebhardt's mind and said she had been extremely nervous and melancholy for some time.

Beaks Trainer Bitten.

Minneapolis.—The suspicion of a visitor at the "Greatest World" show at the Lake Street festival came near causing the death of Montana Jack, snake trainer. He was bitten by a poisonous rattlesnake when he attempted to prove that the reptile had been defanged. "Jack was demonstrating methods of handling the snakes to a crowd, when one of the spectators declared that the reptiles had all been deprived of their fangs, and that they were perfectly harmless.

DON'T LET WRINKLES COME

Use Preventive Measures to Keep Your Face Smooth, and Control the Emotions.

I once heard a woman say: "The best way to treat wrinkles is to avoid getting them." This may sound absurd but it is true. Wrinkles are caused by bad facial habits.

Laughing, crying, frowning or smiling will not make you wrinkled, unless you do one or the other habitually, then the face becomes "set." To keep the muscles of the face exercised will not give you wrinkles. Scowling and wrinkling the forehead when reading or studying, or when conversing, will, if continued persistently, soon show deep wrinkles in the forehead, and about the eyes. You can check your self of these habits and thus avoid acquiring wrinkles.

If the eyes are weak or overstrained it is easy to fall into the habit of drawing the forehead down in wrinkles about the eyes, thus giving yourself a cross look, that you probably do not deserve. Pressing gently the nerves around the eyes and stopping now and then to close your eyes is very restful to them. If your eyes are troublesome, however, better consult an oculist.

Do not allow yourself to be tortured by shoes that are too small or uncomfortable clothing. Your comfort has more to do with facial expression than perhaps you realize.—Mme. Joanne La Place, in the Woman's World.

FOULARD DRESS

This sweetly simple dress is fit fonished with a pale grey ground, spotted with red blue. The skirt is trimmed above foot by a band of satin to match the blue spot. It is attached along each side. On the bodice a strap is used to edge the basque, collar and sleeves, and is also taken down each side of front in a line with edges of basque. Hat of pale grey Tagal, trimmed with large bow of old blue satin ribbon.

Materials required: 4 yards foulard 40 inches wide, 1 yard blue for trimming.

Custom Now Universally Followed. Goes Back to the Days of Chivalry and the Rapier.

Did you ever wonder why it seems natural to put trimming on the left side of the hat? Of course this year we are not natural, so far as trimming is concerned. We swathe our veils with thick folds, we gather our skirts in front, we fasten buckles, bows and other decorations at our knees, and we blithely wear the trimming of our hats at left or right, but rarely on the middle. Perhaps this fashion will dull our feeling that the left side is the suitable side for trimming.

This is the reason, anyway why we have had to hold ourselves in check last we put our hats on backward or sideways to bring the trimming to the time-honored left side.

In the old days, when men went about with swords instead of pen knives at their sides they were trimming on their hats; not the, small neat ribbon band and bridal bow they wear now, but a big, waving plume or two. These plumes, if they were fastened at the right side, interfered with the sweep of the sword when it was swung high in air to gather force for a fight at close quarters. Consequently the plume was placed on the left side, and there it has remained, on and off, ever since, until the fashions of the last few years came in.

Butterflies as Jewels.

Brilliant butterflies, brought back by travelers from the most beautiful distant countries, serve only to enhance the collection of naturalists, but is only recently that the multi-colored wings of these brilliants and charming insects have tempted artistic jewelers. They have imprisoned in the crystal, some of these wonderful wings and have made of them jewels which are not easy to imitate, but which reveal a very tempting originality. A brooch has been made with the two wings of one of these butterflies. They were arranged in the shape of a butterfly between two thin sheets of crystal. The edge of the wings were set with diamonds and an opal formed the body of the fly.

Bulgarian Ribbons Taken.

According to the Dry Goods Economist, the vogue for Bulgarian designs and colorings in ribbons continues unabated. The quaint old Bulgarian novelties are especially favored for millinery decoration, in the forms of bands and bows, and the neckwear manufacturers are using them for forming smart bow novelties and for color relief purposes. In both of these lines effect is made to bloe them in as simply a means possible on that the gorgeousness of the design and coloring will not be lost. Two and three inch widths continue the biggest sellers for these purposes.

Buttonholes in Thin Goods.

If you have trouble in making buttonholes in this material, here is a good one. Use fine cotton, if the cloth is coiled two or three times.

Pocket Work-Box.

The tidy and provident woman will delight in the rolls containing cottons and needles of such convenient size that they may be carried in the purse or pocket. The rolls, which are made of leather fastened with a patent snap, contain three small reels of cotton, a needlebook and thimble. — London Daily Mirror.

COMBINATIONS FOR THE FLOWER GARDEN

Cannas and Salvia Form a Brilliant Bit of Color.

(BY ESEN E. REXFORD.)

Every season I get letters from women who love flowers, and take great pride in their gardens, asking if I can't tell them about "something new" in the way of seeds, or of some new and desirable plants. They want something "a little different" from what their neighbors have.

Now there are always new plants, "novelties," as florists call them—and almost inveriably these plants are introduced with a great flourish of verbal trumpets. Whatever adjectives are used in describing them are quite sure to be in the superlative degree, and it is not to be wondered at that any flower-lover is curiously to be excited by what the dealers have to say about them, for it is at all strange that many persons are tempted to invertiay in the ne. Of course one cannot say anything as to the merits or demerits of these plants until they have been tested.

Some of them prove to be valuable; but, as a general thing, they are of so little merit that we never hear anything about them after the second season. Therefore, I have to say to those who ask advice about putting their money into "novelties" for sure it, unless you have so much that you would not mind the loss of what you invest.

Here is a suggestion that will, if followed out, give you a wonderfully brilliant bed. In order to secure the best effects from it, it should be given a prominent location.

Center of bed, scarlet salvia.

Surround this with calliopsis, rich golden yellow and white.

Border the bed with scarlet and yellow coleus, setting the colors alternately, a row of a each. A bed of this kind will fairly bleze with color at midsummer.

The annual phlox adapts itself to some lovely combinations. Use the pale pink, the delicate yellow and the pure white varieties together, and have a veritable garden of harmonious colors. These can be arranged in rows, in circles, or planted in masses, to suit individual taste.

THE RATE DECISION.

The decision of the supreme court of the United States handed down Monday in the now famous Minnesota rate case is of direct personal interest to all Minnesota people since its effect is that the 2-cent fare is to be re-established and freight rates will be reduced to accord with the state law that was temporarily knocked out by the decision of the United States district court. The decision of the supreme court reverses the lower court on practically every point.

But the decision is of further interest and enlightening in that it offers an explanation of the authority of the federal government and the state government to regulate rates for railway service. The decision recites that the federal government could by congressional enactment, regulate commerce within the states in the exercise of its authority to regulate interstate commerce. The court explains this point on follows:

"The authority of Congress extends to every part of interstate commerce and to every instrumentality or agency by which it is carried on; and the full control by Congress over the subjects committed to its regulation is not to be denied or thwarted by the commingling of interstate and intrastate operations."

But until congress acts the right of the state to make rates on intrastate commerce is not to be denied. On this point the court says:

"If this authority of the state be restricted it must be by virtue of the actual exercise of Federal control and not by reason merely of a dormant Federal power, that is, one which has not been exercised."

Though it is possible that at some date in the future—probably the quite distant future—the federal government may exercise a control over common carriers in all of their operations, until that time the right of the state to regulate the rates on commerce within the state, can no longer be doubted. The only limitation is the constitutional one that the rates shall not be made so low as to deprive the railroads of their earning power. The victory for the state is a sweeping one and many points about which there has been uncertainty, have been cleared up.

If the authorities and the newspapers don't soon find out something more definite about the mysterious "C. J. H." there surely will be an increase in the population of the state institution where the men of mystery is a guest.

When there is no game on account of rain, feature stories about the mysterious C. J. H. and J. Hamilton Lewis' whiskers seem always to be available as space fillers.

Elevators should become awakened to the great opportunity there is for practical work in mathematics in the "figuring" of batting averages and club standings.

THE PRESIDENT'S DANGER.

The president of the graduating class of the Owatonna high school has been neither sheast nor tardy during the twelve years of his connection with the department there excellent. That boy may some day be governor.

This is the proper season to take your pet dog, Caesar, to the woodshed for a heart to heart talk and instruct him if he wishes to be free from annoyance by some horrid dog catcher person he must be tagged approved fashion.

The Virginia Virginian says: "Here's hoping the home team can let the great ones speak remain in cold storage," and in the next column prints the standing of the old clubs of the Northern league with Virginia the "tail-ender"—almost hopelessly so. The Virginian is certainly a loyal fan and a good sport.

The Thief River Falls Times made the announcement last week that hereafter the Times will be published twice a week. This week's issue of paper has been tried in a number of small Minnesota cities in years past with the result, without an exception approvely, that the publisher has found that a country city there is no satisfactory "happy medium" between the country weekly and the country daily—that the latter can be satisfactorily conserved by making the weekly grow as the field grows until the field is big enough for a daily. Hereafter the Gazette expresses the hope that the Times publishers may be able to demonstrate that their move is the wise one.

CO-ADJUTOR'S REMARKS

Even the Duluth Herald admits that the principle of the "seven sisters bill" is now the settled policy of the nation and of the several states where there are large centers of population with large areas sparsely settled. In its issue of May 24 it refers to the fact that population is not the SOLE basis of representation in Missouri, while it points out that in New York state the senate representation of the city of New York is specifically entailed, a much more stringent law than that proposed in Minnesota where senate representation based on population is to be restricted 'not specifically but in a general way. So fair and necessary is the provision that in the last election the citizens even of Ramsey county acknowledged its wisdom and cast a majority vote in its favor. A senate representative of territory and o house representative of population is the settled policy of national and state governments in this country and the wonder is that there can be found those who oppose this wise and just method. —Long Prairie Leader.

President Roosevelt's suit for libel against the Michigan editor is chiefly important as marking the culminative tendency on the part of the public men to hold the press to a sharp accountability for unfound ed personal utterances. Recent proposals to establish a press censorship and similar developments all contribute to the same tendency. Here and there less scrupulous newspapers have, in the heat of partisan controversy, mistaken liberty for license. They have fallen into the pernicious habit of printing, without proof, charges involving personal character, exaggerating, vilifying and denouncing in other words living in the age of the muckraker, they have been infected by the contagion of the muckraker.—Rochester Post and Record.

"Studebaker wagons certainly last a long time"

"I have had this wagon twenty-two years, and during that time it cost me only $6.00 for repairs, and that was far setting two tires.

"And after twenty-two years of daily use in good and bad weather and over all kinds of roads, I will put this wagon against any new wagon of another make that you can buy today."

"Studebaker wagons are built of air-dried lumber and tested iron and steel. Even the paint and varnish are subjected to a laboratory test to insure wearing qualities."

"No wagon made is subjected to so many tests or is more carefully made than a Studebaker. You can buy them at Studebaker dealers everywhere.

"Don't listen to the dealer who wants to sell you a cheap wagon, represented to be 'just as good' as a Studebaker."

Farm wagons, trucks, dump wagons and carts, delivery wagons, bugsies, surreys, depot wagons and all other kinds of the same high standard as the Studebaker vehicles.

G. W. Hoople, the St. Hilaire telephone man, was in town Tuesday.

Miss Erma Schreiter visited with relatives of Thief River Falls this week.

Mrs. G. G. Kindseth and children visited with friends at Thief River Falls this week.

Miss Bernetta Schesser is visiting with relatives in Thief River Falls this week.

Dr. G. B. Fairchild spent Sunday with his parents in Grand Forks. Hah! Yeastr! with his parents.

Frank H. Fox, deputy county auditor, left Saturday evening to go to Wahpeton, his old home, for a visit with his family.

Miss Mebel Robinson, who was the guest of Miss Erma Schreiter, returned to her home in Grand Forks Monday.

L. C. Simons visited over Sunday in the city, having come up from St. Paul to look over his interests in the part of the state.

Carleton Christianson of Gervais township, who has been ill with rheumatism for several weeks, is much better, though still unable to do heavy work.

Supt. Albany DeForge will go to St. Paul this evening and on Friday and Saturday he will be in attendance at the state convention of county superintendents.

Miss Ilmei Healy, who has been teaching in the public schools of Hamilton, Montana, arrived in Red Lake Falls Monday and will spend the summer vacation at home.

Juhl Leabo left Tuesday evening to go to Duluth to attend the grand lodge I. O. O. F., as a delegate from the local lodge. During his absence Mrs. Leabo will carry the mail on the rural route that Mr. Leabo serves.

Charley Christianson came in from his home in Gervais township last week and went over to Crookston for a visit with friends there. His first visit in that city for seven years. He went to Crookston with Frank E. Heat, who drove his car.

H. N. Johnson, the Lenkity, N. Dak. banker, and former Red Lake Falls business man, and Mrs. Johnson, were guests of relatives and friends in this city over Sunday. They made the trip in their car and came by way of Fargo, having been in that city for the Shriners' celebration.

Graham Kindseth, who has been attending the State University, arrived on Tuesday morning's Great Northern train, but continued to Thief River Falls and played clarinet with the Red Lake Falls concert band furnishing music for the firemen's state convention Tuesday and Wednesday.

I have for sale a carload of high grade Holstein cows, just shipped in. Also some pure bred shorthorns, some good horses with colts at side and some yearlings and two year olds. Call at my farm, eight miles northwest of Red Lake Falls and two miles east of Wylie, or write to me at Red Lake Falls.—Dan Wheelon.—Adv.

Clyde H. Workman, superintendent-elect of the Red Lake Falls public schools, came from Fargo Saturday and met with the members of the board of education and Architect E. F. Broomhall, who came from Duluth, for a conference regarding the new public school building to be constructed in Red Lake Falls.

The members of the recently-organized Red Lake Falls Gun club will give a big dance at Wood-sen hall Monday evening, June 30. It's to be an old time dance, with no monkey shines, no kid business, and none of your new-fangled, top-sided modern dances. The sheriff has promised to see to that. But there will be lots of fun for everybody, young and old, and all are invited.

Sam Brandvold, a farmer living on section 22, in the township of Rocksbury, found a den of several wolf cubs near his farm while hunting cows last Sunday morning. Brandvold's hunting dog located the den situated in a sand bank. It was necessary to excavate nearly five feet before ascertaining the cubs. The animals were killed and brought to town last Monday morning. Deputy Auditor Axel Rieberg officiated at the ceremony of marking the pelts and counting the number. $27 as bounty.—Thief River News Press.

Ed. Enright lost one of his valuable driving horses Sunday and two others were quite badly hurt as a result of getting tangled up in a barbed wire fence. The horses had been turned into the pasture Sunday morning and a short time later were seen running toward the gate. But they did not attempt to go through or over the gate and they did not stop; they jumped into the barbed wire. Dr. Ostendorf, who was called, ordered that one of the horses be killed. This horse was badly cut in the breast, the muscles being severed to the bone and the shoulder joint was exposed. Though the horse was a valuable driver, he would have been valueless even if he would could have been induced to heal. Though the other horses were quite badly lacerated, each in the breast, a few stitches were taken and it is expected that the wounds will heal with no permanent injury to he animals.

ST. HILAIRE

J. S. Roy has commenced building operations on his new house.

The appearance of Ed. Anbell's house has been greatly improved by the addition of two new porches.

Cornelius Anderson has purchased the house on main, street from O. Gunsaid. He intends to repair the house and move in the near future.

Mrs. R. Brown returned from Crookston Wednesday where she attended the graduation exercises of Up-ligh school. She was accompanied by her daughter who was a member of the graduation class.

Misses Hilda Gisetad, Nora Johnson, Grace Hall, Anne Patterson and Agnes Burkoe returned from Moorhead this morning, where they have been attending normal the past year.

Wesley Smith came down from Thief River Falls Monday and has been initiated into the rites of the Spectator force. Mr. Smith has had considerable experience in the printing line and will have charge of the mechanical work.—Spectator.

PLUMMER

Miss Godrun Rice returned Wednesday night from Thief River Falls, where she has attended high school the past season.

E. E. Hipsge and son, Dewey, left Tuesday morning for Detroit, Minn., where they will spend the next week or ten days on an outing trip.

School closed Thursday of last week for the summer vacation. On Thursday afternoon a picnic party was given by the teachers for the pupils and their parents, at the old Plummer place.

Misses Emma Tandberg and Lou Green, our teachers for the past season, departed for their respective homes, the latter part of last week, the former for Thief River Falls and the latter to her home in Garnes township.

Mrs. A. Alrick and children were tendered a pleasant surprise by a number of their old time friends at the city hall Saturday evening. Refreshments were brought by the ladies comprgated and a very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all present. A social hop held away until the wee small hours of the morning. Before the guests departed a purse was handed Mrs. Alrick as a token of remembrance from her many friends here. Mrs. Alrick will visit friends here for a few weeks after which she departs for Minnesota to visit friends and relatives for a short time before leaving for Edmonton, Canada, where she will reside.—Pioneer.

BROOKS

There was a reception at the Brooks school house last Tuesday evening for the last year and this year graduates. Those who were present were, Misses Annie Fellman, Clara Tollefson, Octavie Gamache, Amy Bunkirk, Nina Bunkirk, Mary Rohidoux, Mary Lambert, Selma Nordin, Albina Robidoux, Nelle Pierce and Hattie Bunkirk, Walloce Bunkirk, Albert Lussier, Joe Gneorard.

Nels Lyngaas and sons are now busy working on their farm near here with a gasoline tractor.

Mr. Thompson has moved away from town.

Seven young people have completed the work of the Brooks school district No. 128, and received diplomas. Following are the names of the young people who have completed the work of the eighth grades that year:

Edward Lussier.
Napoleon Veron.
Armond Moreau.
Joseph Lamerand.
Albina Robidoux.
Nina Bunkirk.
Amy Bunkirk.
Burton Bunkirk.

The members of this year's class are

Nelle Perras.
Mary Lambert.
Selma Nordin.
Harriet Luckmann.
Wallace Bunkirk.
Telsford Leroux.
Albert Lussier.

Class motto: "Labor and Victory."
Class flower: Lilac.
Class colors: Lavender and Gold.

Miss Pelagie Tollefson and Gemache closed their school work last Friday for the summer vacation and had a very fine entertainment at the M. W. A. hall in Brooks.

Albany DeForge, the county superintendent, was in Brooks last Friday and presented the public school graduation with their diplomas. Three others were given for the class of 1913 and also for the class of 1912, the first to graduate. During the years that Miss Tollefson has taught in Brooks fifteen young people have graduated from the public school. That is a pretty good record.

FIGHT OVER DEAD MAN.

Man in Possession Would Get Rid of His Charge.

The county of Pennington is the defendant in an action started by H. M. Hicks in municipal court last Tuesday, whereby the plaintiff, who is an undertaker and embalmer, seeks to recover the value of his services for the care and preservation of the unidentified human remains that were found near the city about a year ago and have been in his custody ever since. The law prohibits the trafficing in dead bodies so that it can not be sold even if a purchaser could be found and the county commissioners do not seem disposed to go to the expense of a burial. Just what the outcome of the action will be remains to be seen.—Thief River Newspress.

SYNOPSIS.

Bill Cannon, the bonanza king, and his daughter, Rose, who had passed up Mrs. Corrinne Ryan's ball at San Francisco to accompany her father, arrive at Antelope. Rose is disappointed to find that Bill has begun that bachelor's establishment he refused. The determined old lady refuses to recognize her daughter-in-law, and Rose has been trapped into a marriage that has separated her from her husband for several years in exile. Embarrassed by money, they have frequently quarreled, and he—like a boy. Cannon and his daughter are received in at Antelope. Dominick Durack, the local banker, is a friend of Bill's, who established him in Antelope to help him. Antelope is cut off by storm. Rose Cannon nurses Dominick back to life. Two weeks later Dominick discovers in a desire to have husband and wife come together. Dominick, taking a hint, tells Rose Cannon how he loves her. Rose, in a fit of pique, accepts him. After they are engaged Dominick gets letter from wife. Tells how he doesn't love him and doesn't mind. Homebound people begin to depart, and Rose Cannon, Dominick and Mrs. Durack are left. Dominick and Rose Cannon become more and more friendly, even Miss Cannon, home to her mother's amusement in Paris. In Mrs. Durack runs. Cannon offers Berry $5,000 to go to Paris and get Rose Cannon to return. Dominick sees Rose. Cannon offers Berry $10,000 and is turned down.

CHAPTER XV.

A Confession.

Of late Berry had not been sleeping well and the fear that this would react upon her looks had spurred her to the announced exertion of walking. The route she had chosen was one of those thoroughfares which radiates from Market Street, and though not yet sluma, are far removed from the calm, wide gentility of the city's more dignified highways. With all her cleverness, she had never shaken off the tastes and instincts of the class she had come from.

Walking interestingly forward, she crossed Powell Street, and approached the entrance of that home of vaudeville, the Grenada Theater. There had been a recent change of bill, and an elsh dress artiste looked over the posters standing by the entrance on which the program for the coming week was printed in large letters. Mid way down one of these, her eye was caught by a name and she paused and stood reading the words:

"JAMES DERAY SUFFORD
The Witty, Brilliant and Incomparable Monologist
In His Historical Monologue
Entitled
KLONDIKE MEMORIES."

She remembered at once that this was the actor Dominick had spoken of as having been snowed in with them at Antelope. Dominick had evidently not expected to see him again in San Francisco. He had said the man had been going to act in Sacramento.

As she walked down the street she saw that she was approaching the car line which passed close to her old home. A clock in a window showed her it was nearly five. Hannah would have been home for some time, and Hazel might be expected within an hour. Without more thought she hailed an up-town car.

She found them both at home. Hazel having been allowed to leave her work an hour earlier than usual. Sitting in a small room in the back of the house, they were surrounded by the outward signs of dressmaking. Yards of material lay over the chairs, and on a small wooden table which filled close to her body and upon which portions of the material lay neatly smoothed out, Hannah was cutting with a large pair of shears.

If Berry had expected to startle sisters, she certainly saw had the satis faction of realizing her hope. For a moment after she told her news they stared at her, too amazed to speak even Hannah, who had assisted difficulties, being completely unprepared—after the way of human nature—for the particular difficulty that had cropped up. It was Hazel who first spoke.

"Say you off to leave Dominick? Give you money to go away from him, do you mean?"

That's what I said," returned her sister with dry grimness. "She's made me two offers to leave my husband. I wants me to get out and, after I've gone for a year, ask him to bring suit for desertion."

My Lord!" murmured Hannah in a hushed voice of horror.

"How much did she offer you?" asked Hazel.

The was a crucial question. Berry knew its importance and sat up, pushing back her disarranged hat.

"One hundred thousand dollars," she said calmly.

"A hundred thousand dollars!" gasped Hazel. "Why—why—Berry!"

She stopped, almost trembling in the excitement of her stunned incredulity.

A hundred thousand dollars!" Hannah echoed, each word pronounced with a slow, ghast ashellet. "Oh, it can't be that much!"

"It's that much now," said Berry, her calmness accentuated to the point of nonchalance, "and it won't can make them double it, raise it to a quarter of a million. Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars isn't so much when you've got millions in trunks. What's that in the Ryans?"

She rose abruptly from her seat, pushing it back and feeling that she had better go before she said too much

As she rose, Hazel rose too, her face full of suspicious concern.

"It's not another woman, is it, Berry?" she almost whispered.

Berry had told so many lies that she did not bother about a few more.

"Nearly four," said the actor. He looked down at his shoe for a moment as if considering, and repeated with out looking up. "It will be four next September. Trouble drove me to those four distant lands and hard luck drove me on the stage. I'd never had anything to do with it till then; I hadn't a stage game about me. Thereof even beat a time when I had a strong prejudice against the theater and never went to one. But a man must live and—"

He stopped, his attention arrested by a hand held softly on his sleeve. A youth of Hebraic countenance had issued from a door behind him, and, touching his arm with a hesitating, oddclean finger, began to speak in a low tone.

"Duty calls," said Sufford. "I am sorry, but they want me inside. I hope later to be able to place a box at your disposal. Madame, you say, is very desirous of seeing me. Well, I'll see to it that she does so under the most favorable conditions."

He bowed impressively as though saluting Berry in person, and then, with a last dignified farewell to Dominick, turned toward the door which opened at his approach.

CHAPTER XVI.

Rose's Point of View.

The following Sunday, at ten o'clock in the morning, Dominick noiselessly descended the stairs of the flat and let himself out into the street. He was greeted with the morning walking, sprightly its hunates, garbed in the light Sunday attire of the Californian on pleasure bent.

Dominick went up the hill in the clear, golden sunlight, and in his revolt he pushed Berry from his mind, and let Rose come in her place. His thoughts, always held from her, sprung to her, encircled her, seemed to draw her toward him as once his arms had done.

Standing on the summit of the hill, where the wall of the quarry drops down to the water front and Goat Island, he relinquished himself to his dream of her.

As if called, he turned sharply and saw Rose standing a few yards away on the path that led from the west side of the first evenings and pronounced him "simply great." She entered a promise from Dominick that, at the earliest opportunity, he would pay Rose Cannon a visit. He could not accompany her himself, she could go with one of her sisters.

He stopped to buy the tickets one midday as he was on his way to lunch, and while he was buying two, then Berry could either take her two sisters, or Hazel and Josh, whose courtship at the theater was an unassailable passion. He was turning from the ticket office window when a sonorous voice at his elbow arrested him:

"Mr. Ryan," it boomed out, "do I see you at last?"

It was Sufford, but a rejuvenated and prosperous Sufford, the reflection of his good fortune shining from his beaming face and fashionable figure. The red rasped look had left his features and the hollows beneath his cheek-bones were filled out.

"Glad to see you, Buford," he said, "glad to hear you've made such a success of it."

Buford acknowledged these compliments with cool, acquiescent condescence.

"I have struck my gait," he said, nodding his head in condescending acceptance. "I have at last won my spurs. The ways of fate—or let me say Providence—are truly inscrutable. I turned my face to the North in a bitter hour, and it was in a bitter hour that I adopted the stage."

"Then you went on the stage on purpose? You've only been on a few years?"

The question seemed to touch a nerve that startled and then stiffened him. He answered it with his head turned toward her, the eyes fixed, cold, a combative note in his voice:

"I don't know whether she does or not." He stopped and then said, with his face flushing, "No, I don't think she does."

"How can you leave her, then?"

"How expect to touch a weak human nature," he said.

"No," she answered, "I don't. I only expect what you can do."

He turned and looked at her.

"Then I'm to live for the rest of my life with a wife I don't care for, separated from the woman I love? What is there in that to keep a man's heart sinless?"

"The knowledge that we love each other. That's a good deal, I think."

It was the first time she had said in words that she loved him. There was no trace of embarrassment or consciousness on her face; instead she seemed delightfully calm and steadfast, much less moved than he. Her words shook him to the soul. He turned his eyes from her face and grasping for her hand, clasped it, and pressed it to his heart, and then, as she unloosed it and rose to his feet, saying to himself:

"Yes, that's a good deal."

Her eyes followed him, and then brought to the quarry sooner seeing Ryan on to long rack, strained and careening in the breeze. Rose, standing in the open, blew fresh and strong from the eastern Pacific.

"It's a schooner," she said absently. "What do you suppose it's doing?"

"I don't know. Somewhere a long way off, I hope. My devils are sailing down it."

They stood side by side, gazing down at the distant scene, and presently she said, with a sudden sweep of wisdom "Goodby."

"Goodby," he answered, and stretched out his hand.

Berry had been turning over in her mind the advantages of accepting the money and then letting Dominick dwell upon the delights of possible possession—when at the Sunday dinner that afternoon Mrs. McCrae took her back into the state of incensed relentless with which she had received the first offer. With his face wrestled in joyful fight at the thought of Rose and the fact that only an hour earlier, while walking on the hillside, he had seen Dominick there talking with Miss Cannon.

This was quiet for the rest of the afternoon, but it was not till she had gone to bed that she began to think of the unintended desertion, that she had an opportunity to turn the full vigor of her mind on what she had heard.

She put from her mind all intention of ever taking the money, and then said it desperately, terribly.

She would have an interview for which Bill Cannon had asked was for e test, deciding conversation. He was in search of truth. That was a moment of torture to her when she wondered if he would be, and her mind hovered in distracted temptation over the possibility of concealment and escape and the possible, quarter of a million.

She was in the state of feverish distractedness when she went to Bill Cannon's office.

Nothing could be more disarmingly friendly than the old man's greeting.

"What I asked you to come here for to-day was to talk about this matter, Berry," he began, "and not to talk any more. I've seen Mrs. Ryan since our last meeting, and she's been down here to you. She'll give you two hundred thousand dollars to leave Dominick."

"Well, I won't," said Berry, drawing herself to the edge of the chair. "She made me a better offer. It was a quarter of a million."

"Don't be in such a hurry; I've not finished yet. This is just between you and me," he went on slowly, his voice lowering as he drew it to the confidences. "I'll give you another hundred thousand to stick it with Mrs. Ryan's pile, and it'll run your fortune up well past a quarter of a million."

You think that I don't know why you're offering me this money, you old man, I do. You want to get my husband for your own daughter, Rose Cannon."

It was Cannon's turn to be speechless. He had not for many years had so unexpected and violent a blow. He sat in the same attitude of slow speech or uttering a sound, and looking at Berry with a pair of eyes grown like second grew colder and more steely.

"Come," he said with sudden authority, "I can't stand this sort of thing. Are you going to take the money or not?"

His manner, as if by magic, had changed. Every suggestion of deference or consideration had gone from it,

"Will you take the money?"

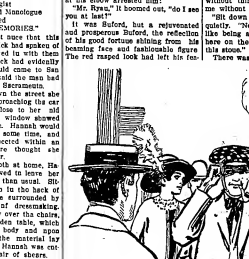
"No!" she said loudly. "Don't ask me that again."

"All right," he answered quietly, "that ends our business. Do you know your way out, or shall I ring and get some one to see you to the door?"

It was late, indeed, when that evening when Cannon left his office. As he walked down Montgomery Street to the car, he pondered on Berry, wonderingly and with a sort of begrudging, half-admiring estimation of a woman he could not bit admire. How she had come to love Rose he could not imagine, only it was very arranging that she should have done so. It was the one thing that was quite fast in the whole disagreeable business.

It was the first of May. By the morning's mail he had received a letter from Gene announcing, with the playful bitterness which marked all the young man's allusions to the transfer of the Santa Trinidad ranch, that the pair were on their way to Colfax and would shortly arrive in San Francisco to claim his own.

Quite a fair sum, read this missive in grim-visaged silence. The sense of self-approval which he might have experienced was not his; he only felt that he had been "done." Even months before, thinking that the ranch was slipping too easily from his grasp, that he was making too little effort to retain his own, he had hired a detective to go to San Luis Obispo and watch the career of Gene for signs of his old waywardness. Of the thirtieth of April the man had reported that Gene's course had been marked by an inclination to be genuine and complete.



"Then I'm to Live for the Rest of My Life With a Wife I Don't Care For."

oring for a response—he emitted one of those inarticulate sounds with which it was his custom to greet inquiries that he did not care to put the exact purport of which he did not fathom.

The only thing which would have made this sound like news to her was a conversation, peaceful and uninterrupted, with his daughter. He had not seen so much of her during the last few days, so she had been confined to her room with a cold. This was the first evening she had been at dinner for four days, and the old man had looked forward to one of their slow, enjoyable meals together, with Rose opposite him, pretty and in black coffee, as was their wont.

When dinner was over, and she rose from her seat, he asked her to play on the piano in the sitting-room near by.

Neither of the men spoke for a while. The music came to them softly from the sitting room. The old man gave the cigar a meditatively at his son.

"Well, you've got it!" said the latter at last, in a loud, pugnacious tone.

"You've got it, haven't you?"

"Well, I guess I have," said Gene, his triumph tempered by an air of modesty, "and I guess I earned it fair. I stuck to the bargain and there were times when I can tell you it was a struggle. I never once called you. If you don't believe my word, I can bring you men from down there that know me well, and they'll testify that I stuck the truth.

"It was Rose who really put me up to it," he went on. "She'd say to me when she'd do it, I only had to try; and she could do anything she really made up her mind to do. If you said you couldn't do a thing, why, then you couldn't. But if you said you could, you got your mind into that attitude, and it wasn't hard any more. And she was right. What I got my mind round to locking at it that way, it came quite natural. Rose always is right."

"Then, why the hell," said the old man, "do you go on talking about yourself and your damned concerns, bothering the life out of her when she's got troubles of her own?"

"Troubles of her own? What troubles has she got?"

"She's got a cold," said Cannon.

He spoke sharply and looked at Gene with a sudden access of observant malice. The young man gazed back at him, confused, for a moment half inclined to laugh, thinking his father, in a sudden unaccustomed playfulness, was joking with him.

"Well, if it's only a cold," he stammered, "it's nothing to fear on the ground about. I thought it was something serious, that Rose was unhappy about something. But a cold—"

After all, it was a good thing the boy did not know; he was of the kind who could not be trusted with any information of importance. He did not want Gene or anybody else to interfere. He, Rose's father, and he alone, without any collateral assistance, would go up and pick out for her any star that sparkled in the heavens, any moon for which she might choose to rave. He loathed Dominick Ryan for her husband. She should have him and it would be her father who would get him for her. He would give her Loch Ortigos—not satisfied to abate the Bonanza King's irritation.

Gene, however, was not at all abashed by any lack of cordiality. At the best of times, he was not a sensitive person, and he had been his portion since his early manhood, he was now used to it. Moreover, tonight he was in high spirits. In his year of exile he had learned to love the outdoor life for which he was fitted, and had conceived a passionate desire to own the splendid tract of land for which he felt the love and pride of a proprietor.

Always a loquacious person, a stream of talk flowed from him to which the old man offered no interruption, and in which even Rose found it difficult to insert an occasional, arresting question. Gene had a number of new plans.

The old man listened without speaking, his chin on his collar, his eyes fixed in a wide, dull stare on the happy boy. At intervals—Gene almost clamored with a sterility atop and cautious tooth, even in the kitchen, at that of a space and mumbling doors, continuing that he had had more than one experience with the wrath of Mrs. Ryan when she had been roused from her slumbers by a banged door or a dropped pan.

It was nearly lunch-time when she awoke, slowly emerging from the unconscious darkness of her drugged to a momentarily augmenting sense of depression. She rose, but only seeming to participate in the oppressed discomfort of her mind, and, going to the bedroom window, drew the sash open and locked out.

There was no promised little in the way of cheering influences. Fog hung heavy in the air, a gray veil depending from a gray haze of sky. Every portion of her neighbor's garden which the window commanded was drenched with it, the flowers drooping mutely in it. It weighed on them like a heavy substance under the pressure of which they hung and dripped. The stretch of wall, too, was also smeared with dampness. A corner of stone, on which a drop regularly formed, and then fell, held her eyes for a few fascinating moments. Then she turned away, muttering to herself:

"Good Lord, what a day!"

She was at her hand when the telephone bell rang. She dropped her brush and, with the instrument which was in the hall. She did not think that any especially rare news she did not expect anything in particular—but she was in that state of mental tension when she sensed the focus of portentous happenings, the point upon which events of sinister menace might, at any moment, bear down. Cannon might be calling her up, for what reason she could not guess, only for something that would be disagreeable and perturbing.

MANILA A MODEL FOR CHINA

New Republic Will Be Kept Busy Widening and Cleaning Her Streets.

Pekin, China.—The new republic of China indeed will have to make some day dizzy strides in civic improvements to bring her streets up to the standard of the new Chinese capital, as well as where throughout the world. The cities of China are notorious to travelers for their narrowness and uncleanliness. Often they are more crooked than the streets of a mountain stream, and are fit for pedestrian traffic only. The condition prevails to more or less extent in all Asiatic cities, and when we occupied Manila a similar condition confronted us. For a long time our officials tried to be content with the crooked streets, but it was known that sooner or later they must be widened, straightened and otherwise improved. Manila has many streets as dark, narrow and irregular as any to be found in China or Pekin. But these are being gradually straightened with great expence. It is probable that the Chinese will take some lessons for our undertakings in civic betterment in their beautiful city. They can do so to send some of their municipal engineers over to Manila to look around a bit. There is to be the most discouraging of thoroughfares turned into beautiful boulevards almost over night. In Manila the engineers have no hesitation in right through business houses and private residences to dodge curves and angles.

PRISON SUNLESS 80 YEARS

So Says Commissioner Blake, New York, of Lower Cells at Sing Sing—Stories of Torture.

Albany, N. Y.—Stories of torture of prisoners at Sing Sing, Auburn and like descriptions of luxuries in comparison to the holes that have been told mo of the lives that some of the prisoners in Sing Sing live."

This striking indictment of conditions alleged to exist within New York state's oldest penal institution is contained in a report of an investigation which has been made by Governor W. Blake, a special commissioner appointed by Governor Sulzer to probe prison affairs. The investigator describes conditions as "frightful." The prisoners cells, he says are dark, small, damp, filthy and infested with vermin. In them men contract rheumatism and so get crippled for life. The chief importance to the welfare of the state that no time should be lost in stopping it to the attention of men competent to present a method of betterment in conditions. The disease of the mind and body and that should be the object of every man with any human instincts."

WHALES ESCORT BIG SHIP

Uncounted Number of Cetaceans in Lins Reassures Master Sea Serpent, Says Captain.

New York.—Captain Tarnow of a big steamship which has been on the big school of whales observed by crews of other ships this spring, south of Scotland lightship, and which has just arrived here from the West Indies.

At two bells a line of long black objects rising and falling on the surface of the sea was made out. Strung together, the glistening bodies looked a monster about 1,000 feet long. They were still with them when the ship left. As Captain Tarnow, who had been called to the bridge, was sending for the steamship's photographer, the seeming sea serpent broke up into an uncounted number of whales. Captain Tarnow had never seen whales so near New York before.

MAN HAD HEART EXPOSED

Joseph Carey, Unique to Medical Profession, Passes Away in Canada.

St. John, N. B.—Joseph Carey, whose case was regarded as unique by the medical profession, died here recently. Carey underwent an operation in Boston six years ago for lung trouble and part of the left lung was removed, in performing the operation it was found necessary to remove several of the ribs, leaving the heart partly exposed. The beats of the heart could be seen plainly through the thin tissues which covered that organ and many physicians took advantage of the opportunity to study its action while at the accustomed work in the body of a living man.

Carey recovered his usual health following the operation, and had worked daily the last four years

THE TOWER OF BABEL

RUIN and desolation mark the site of the ancient biblical city of Babylon. Where, "by the water of Babylon," the Jewish nation "sat down and wept," stand today staggering walls of an old-time splendor. Until a few years ago what had once been the "cradle of civilization" was covered with the dirt and dust of ages, but in 1900 a number of German archaeologists cleared away the debris, in part, and uncovered portions of the royal city.

The work is still being carried on and the photographs here reproduced are the first to reach America showing the results of the German savants' labor of love. For twelve years Prof. Robert Koldewey, director of archaeological research in Babylon, assisted by Dr. Oscar Reuther, has carried on his work, supported by the emperor of Germany.

On the site shown in one of the pictures the Tower of Babel once stood. This is the scene of the confusion of tongues of the biblical story. Several sites have been assigned to the tower. That this is the true site is the conclusion of Dr. Koldewey and his associates in the expedition sent out by the Deutsche Orientgesellschaft of Berlin. Other scholars who have sought to locate the tower of Babel have differed widely from Dr. Koldewey in his extensive researches.

Only the site is left. Time and war and the elements assailed the tower. For twenty centuries it crumbled. It was a quarry of building materials for man. Practically everything was left unexplored until the last quarter of the nineteenth century. Before that the work of destruction had been completed. Even the last century modern towns and villages in the vicinity carted off or floated down the Euphrates the bricks that of the foundation of the Tower of Babel. The foundation was over 300 feet square, a huge, bulky mass. Hillah, a modern Arab town, found bricks south of it, was built with the bricks of the ancient city. Thus perished the pride of Babylon.

The temple of Etagila, the most important Babylonian sanctuary brought to light, was a part of the Tower of Babel. Its ruins were uncovered by the German archaeologists after they had sunk forty feet deep that was as broad as the mouth of a volcano. The pyramid walls in the center of the picture mark the entrance to the passage, a quarter of a mile long, which connected the steep pyramid of Etemenanki, known in the Bible as the Tower of Babel, with this temple.

Because of the depth of the debris and also of the action of the centuries which have veiled the earth over the entire foundation of the Tower of Babel has not yet been excavated, but layers of the floor level have been found here the sides until the temple walls were properly established and then the whole edifice was measured.

This is the oldest and most momentous ruin on account of its connection with the tower of Babel, and the bricks which once represented massive masonry are now so brittle that one can crush them between the fingers.

In the picture showing the ruins of Babylon the man on the left stands upon the remains of the brick pavement which was part of the long street named after Ishtar, who, no doubt, herself traversed its length many times. In the ruins on the right, in the hollow, there is the gate named after the goddess Ishtar. This is the most prominent and best preserved ruin in Babylon. Its walls are adorned with reliefs of bulls, the holy animal of Nebo, and dragons, the holy animal of the god Marduk. It was through this gate that the processional road of the god of Marduk led, and passing it and returning to the right, it led on to Nebochedezzar's throne hall.

The excavations have brought to light many curious specimens of the work of the ancient people of Babylon. The largest piece of pottery yet unearthed is that of a huge lion chiseled out of an enormous block of granite brought down the Euphrates on a raft from Mesopotamia. It shows a lion standing over a prostrate man. The work is crude and probably is a product of the very earliest art of Babylon. The sculptor typifies the superiority of the lion's strength over man's. Some coffins of the middle class were also found. They were of burned clay and like Babylonian in shape. Some of them were very short because of the custom of the Assyrians and Babylonians of burying their dead in a sitting position, with the head between the knees.

These sarcophagi were deposited often in round roofed tombs, in some of which have been found the bones of the dead of 2,000 years ago. Many of these coffins have been discovered in the excavations about the ruins of the ancient cities.

While German research has definitely fixed the location of the Tower of Babel, the origin of the biblical story of the confusion of tongues has not been found in Babylon. That it is a myth is the conclusion of scholars. It is interesting to note that a similar legend is found in Central America in connection with the pyramid of Cholula, which was also intended to reach the heavens and which brought disaster to its builders.

But it this legend has not been verified by research the discoveries which have rewarded the labors of explorers and archaeologists in Babylonia have been many and of the highest value. Innumerable tablets have been collected which when deciphered will throw light upon a civilization which was born more than six thousand years ago. The oldest temple in the world has been unearthed at Sirra. Large square blocks have been discovered which date back to the reign of Sargon I., 3,800 years before Christ. Even older is a platform built of the peculiar oblong bricks used in B. C. 4500. Inscriptions on bricks found in the temple at Sirra are stamped with the name of Dungi, B. C. 2750. A crumpled piece of gold bears the name of Paron Sin, B. C. 3750, which is much for the age of the antiquities of Babylon. The best preserved edifice of ancient Babylon that has been unearthed is the gate of the goddess Ishtar, of which the masonry remains well and perfect after two thousand years of neglect.

What is even more interesting to the general public, modern research is making the Babylonians live again after thousands of years. Much is known now of their daily life, their arms and occupations, their religious ceremonies. It is possible to reconstruct something of the life of the prophet Daniel in Babylon. It is possible to follow the course of a procession in honor of the god Marduk through the gate of Ishtar to the palace of Nebochadnezzar. The sculptures of the people and of the princes have been laid open.

Everywhere on the walls of buildings are to be seen representations of the bull, which was the sacred animal of Babylon.

Though it is uncertain whether the ancient Babylonians were more civilized than their Assyrian contemporaries there is but little doubt that they were the pioneers of civilization in the whole of western Asia before Greece and Rome came to the front. Four thousand years B. C. their system of writing had already been developed, and applied also the Semitic Babylonian tongue. Fourteen hundred years B. C. the so-called Amarna tablets testify to the high standard over the whole of western Asia as far as the Mediterranean and Egypt. Though not a warlike people the Babylonians were centuries more than once what might have been described at the time as a world-wide empire. They were energetic, intelligent, polished in their way and fond of letters. Excellent sculptures and engravings on hard stone exist to testify to their skill and artistic instincts. Representations of musical instruments imply also that the art of harmony was not altogether unknown to them. To this must be added astronomy, geometry and mathematics, such as they were, and their legal enactments, codified apparently by Hammurabi, are in their way noteworthy productions. In the matter of literature we owe to them no less than three accounts of the creation, two accounts of a flood, one of them put into the month of the Babylonian Noah (Utnapistim or Ara-hasis), who is represented as relating it to the semi-mythical Oligemus, a primitive king of Erech. To these must be added a number of other legends, such as the story of Ure (the pestilence), Etana, the horse and the ox, with many others—one at least, the story of Sargon of Agade, being historical.

It is difficult to judge which was the more proicommmast characteristics of the Babylonians, their trading instinct or their reverence for their gods, for both are equally marked. They had intercourse by means of trade with Elam on the east, Syria on the west, and many other places on the north and south. Slavery was common, and contracts concerning the buying, selling and hiring of slaves are frequently met with.

One of the pictures shows an interesting phase of present day life. How would it fail if the worry of moving could be eliminated as in the picture of the Babylonian who is moving his household goods and chattels. The Babylonian gathers his earthly possessions together, carefully arranges his furniture (in most cases a rug) on the back of his donkey or mule, and with his family comfortably seated on the pack, he starts merrily off to some place where he can strike his fancy.

The transportation by any other means that that of the donkey or mule is unheard of by the Babylonians who believes that this is the mode of transportation the world over. It is only the extremely wealthy, or personages of official importance, who can afford a carriage. A prince rap on the back of a donkey or mule is filled with many luxuries and is very comfy and tedious to those unaccustomed to that mode of conveyance, but the Babylonian, knowing no better, is satisfied with his lot and thankful to Allah that he has a donkey or mule to carry him about wherever he business or fancy dictate.

Feudal Dominions of Reuss in Germany a Absolutely Without a Parallel on Earth.

One of the oddest of Germany's feudal dominions, and decidedly the most individual, is the little province of Reuss. Both halves combined (for it consists of two distinct principalities) only comprise 441 square miles and a third of the area is constituted by Dr. Koldewey in his extensive researches.

Only the site is left. Time and war and the elements assailed the tower. For twenty centuries it crumbled. It was a quarry of building materials for man. Practically everything was left unexplored until the last quarter of the nineteenth century. Before that the work of destruction had been completed. Even the last century modern towns and villages in the vicinity carted off or floated down the Euphrates the bricks that of the foundation of the Tower of Babel. The foundation was over 300 feet square, a huge, bulky mass. Hillah, a modern Arab town, found bricks south of it, was built with the bricks of the ancient city. Thus perished the pride of Babylon.

The temple of Etagila, the most important Babylonian sanctuary brought to light, was a part of the Tower of Babel. Its ruins were uncovered by the German archaeologists after they had sunk forty feet deep that was as broad as the mouth of a volcano. The pyramid walls in the center of the picture mark the entrance to the passage, a quarter of a mile long, which connected the steep pyramid of Etemenanki, known in the Bible as the Tower of Babel, with this temple.

Because of the depth of the debris and also of the action of the centuries which have veiled the earth over the entire foundation of the Tower of Babel has not yet been excavated, but layers of the floor level have been found here the sides until the temple walls were properly established and then the whole edifice was measured.

This is the oldest and most momentous ruin on account of its connection with the tower of Babel, and the bricks which once represented massive masonry are now so brittle that one can crush them between the fingers.

In the picture showing the ruins of Babylon the man on the left stands upon the remains of the brick pavement which was part of the long street named after Ishtar, who, no doubt, herself traversed its length many times. In the ruins on the right, in the hollow, there is the gate named after the goddess Ishtar. This is the most prominent and best preserved ruin in Babylon. Its walls are adorned with reliefs of bulls, the holy animal of Nebo, and dragons, the holy animal of the god Marduk. It was through this gate that the processional road of the god of Marduk led, and passing it and returning to the right, it led on to Nebochedezzar's throne hall.

The excavations have brought to light many curious specimens of the work of the ancient people of Babylon. The largest piece of pottery yet unearthed is that of a huge lion chiseled out of an enormous block of granite brought down the Euphrates on a raft from Mesopotamia. It shows a lion standing over a prostrate man. The work is crude and probably is a product of the very earliest art of Babylon. The sculptor typifies the superiority of the lion's strength over man's. Some coffins of the middle class were also found. They were of burned clay and like Babylonian in shape. Some of them were very short because of the custom of the Assyrians and Babylonians of burying their dead in a sitting position, with the head between the knees.

These sarcophagi were deposited often in round roofed tombs, in some of which have been found the bones of the dead of 2,000 years ago. Many of these coffins have been discovered in the excavations about the ruins of the ancient cities.

While German research has definitely fixed the location of the Tower of Babel, the origin of the biblical story of the confusion of tongues has not been found in Babylon. That it is a myth is the conclusion of scholars. It is interesting to note that a similar legend is found in Central America in connection with the pyramid of Cholula, which was also intended to reach the heavens and which brought disaster to its builders.

But it this legend has not been verified by research the discoveries which have rewarded the labors of explorers and archaeologists in Babylonia have been many and of the highest value. Innumerable tablets have been collected which when deciphered will throw light upon a civilization which was born more than six thousand years ago. The oldest temple in the world has been unearthed at Sirra. Large square blocks have been discovered which date back to the reign of Sargon I., 3,800 years before Christ. Even older is a platform built of the peculiar oblong bricks used in B. C. 4500. Inscriptions on bricks found in the temple at Sirra are stamped with the name of Dungi, B. C. 2750. A crumpled piece of gold bears the name of Paron Sin, B. C. 3750, which is much for the age of the antiquities of Babylon. The best preserved edifice of ancient Babylon that has been unearthed is the gate of the goddess Ishtar, of which the masonry remains well and perfect after two thousand years of neglect.

What is even more interesting to the general public, modern research is making the Babylonians live again after thousands of years. Much is known now of their daily life, their arms and occupations, their religious ceremonies. It is possible to reconstruct something of the life of the prophet Daniel in Babylon. It is possible to follow the course of a procession in honor of the god Marduk through the gate of Ishtar to the palace of Nebochadnezzar. The man on the extreme right is Inspector Murray, and the man trying to hide behind his hat is Inspector Thompson.

WOMAN, 101, TRAVELS

Aunt Mary Is Not a Real Hobo, for She Works

Mrs. Everett of Maine Has Wanderlust as Certainly as Any Weary Willie—Entire Farmers in Their Work.

Fort Fairfield, Me.—Recently Mrs. Mary Everett celebrated her one hundred and first birthday. It is rather difficult to say where "Aunt Mary" will be in a few days, for she has the wanderlust and may be 'way up in Madawaska or down at Matteawamkeag.

Mrs. Everett is one of the oddest characters in New England. She was born in St. John, N. B., in 1812, according to the parish register. Her people were well-to-do and she went to school until she was about eighteen. Then, she says, there were religious differences in her family and she left home and never went back. Eventually she came to Aroostook county and was married to George Everett, a farmer. He died many years ago. Their one daughter is still living.

For many years Mary Everett has earned her own living, and she does today. Sprightly and vigorous as the average woman of sixty, she travels continually, staying but two or three days in a place. Everywhere known her, and almost anybody in the country towns of the county is glad to give her shelter. "She is as good as a show," they say. She has a vast fund of funny stories and anecdotes, and no end of odds and ends to tell, and she can relate many incidents of the early days of the country with historical accuracy, and knows the genealogy and the scandals of scores of families and has the second and third generation.

In the summer she earns money by picking up and sorting and selling apples, the average Aroostook farmer being too busy with his vast potato plantation to bother with them. In the winter she gathers scraps of silk and straws them in a capacious bag and sells them to a Boston dealer in crazy quilts. She is skilled with the needle, which she threads without glasses.

But it matters not how cordial her welcome and how comfortable her quarters, she remains in one place only a day or two and then takes to the road with the persistency of the professional hobo. She trudges along the road until a farmer's team comes along and gives her a lift. Of late years it is rarely she is compelled to tramp, inasmuch as automobiles, which are as far as the vehicle goes, do matter where.

Aunt Mary has been offered a good home several times, but she says, "Not Yet." She says she may settle down "shortly" when she gets old and feeble."

LOST BIBLE VERSES FOUND

Manuscripts Belonging to New Testament Discovered in Egypt Have Additions to St. Mark.

London, England.—Some long missing verses of the new testament are included in the manuscripts of the gospels discovered in Egypt six years ago and purchased by Charles L. Freer of Detroit, Mich., according to a study made of the Freer manuscripts by the Times. A facsimile of the manuscripts has been presented to the British museum by the University of Michigan, to which Mr. Freer assigned the task of publication, according to the Times study, there have been found in the gospel of St. Mark several verses which occur in no other known manuscript of the new testament, although they were known to St. Jerome, who quotes part of them.

In the Freer manuscript, after the passage in which it is said that Jesus upbraided his disciples for their unbelief, the text continues as follows:

"And they excused themselves, saying that this age of lawlessness and unbelief is under Satan, who, through the agency of unclean spirits, does not the true power of God to be ashamed.

"For this cause, said they unto Christ, reveal now at once thy right-eousness.

And Christ said unto them, the limit of the years of Satan's power is (not) fulfilled, but it draweth near (the text here as elsewhere is corrupt).

"For the sake of those that have sinned unto death I was given over, that they may return unto the truth and sin no more, but may inherit the spiritual and incorruptible glory of righteousness in heaven."

A large number of variations in other portions of the new testament are also pointed out by the Times in the Freer manuscripts.

WOMAN A HOSPITAL STARTLE

Seeks to Sell Her Body to Institution and Use the Money for Fine Clothes.

Cincinnati, O.—A woman, plainly but rather well dressed, sat patiently an hour in the receiving ward of the Cincinnati hospital and when her turn finally came she startled the receiving clerk. Mr. Wallin, by saying that she wished to sell her body to buy fine clothes. The woman said:

"My name is Eleanore Muchmore and I've simply come here to sell my body."

"You don't want us to kill you?" the astonished clerk gasped.

"No, sir," replied Miss Muchmore, "but I want new clothes badly, and I thought I might be able to sell my body to some doctor in this institution, to be delivered after my natural death."

Miss Muchmore seemed greatly disappointed when it was explained to her that her proposition could not be entertained.

Records His Wife's Reprieve.

Paterson, N. J.—To obtain a record of his wife's answers to his questions, John Gardner has had a phonograph in his home with a blank record, and when the woman returned at the hour, Gordon fired a lot of questions at her. Then he told her about the phonograph. Mrs. Gardner examined the machine and, seeing that it was, let Gordon saved the record.

STEALS MONEY FROM BIBLE.

Thief Takes Two $5 Bills Placed at Ten Commandments by Minneapolis Man.

Minneapolis, Minn.—A. J. Engebretson man, used the family Bible for a savings bank, and lost his money, the bank having failed. Mr. Engebretson deposited two $5 bills between the leaves marking the page containing the Ten Commandments, and went to the theater.

During the absence of himself and his wife, a thief entered the house and rifled the Bible of its weekly contents.

The thief must have been a very religious burglar, for he did not touch anything else," said Mr. Engebretson.

"I thought the money would be safe in the Bible, especially because the thief could not help being stared in the face by the Biblical injunction: 'Thou shalt not steal'—but the book were opened at the page where the money was concealed."

DOG IS JUDGE IN LAWSUIT

Snarls at One Claimant and Bounds Into Other's Lap in New York Court.

New York.—Shag, a collie, was the most important witness in the Morristanic court before Magistrate Marsh Monday when she gets old and feeble." when she gets old and feeble."

Shag identified himself as the property of Mrs. Morrissey to the satisfaction of the magistrate, who ordered him turned over to her.

Mrs. Maurer, who has had possession of Shag for seven months, was brought into court on a summons issued on the request of Mrs. Morrissey. The animal had been stolen, the complainant alleged.

Mrs. Maurer said she got the dog from some boys and had named him Prince. The magistrate directed that the two women sit at opposite ends of a table in the court room and that each call the dog by the name she had given him.

"Here, Prince!" shouted Mrs. Maurer.

"Come on, Shag!" called out Mrs. Morrissey.

The dog appeared confused for a moment. Then he snarled at Mrs. Maurer and leaped across the table into Mrs. Morrissey's lap.

Thereupon magistrate Marsh ordered the collie turned over to Mrs Morrissey.

CUPID CROSSES CRACK RIDER

Miss Griffen of Washington Refuses to Become Bride of Corporal Heffelfinger.

Washington, D. C.—Corporal J. P. Heffelfinger, crack rider of the Fifteenth United States cavalry, did not dream that when he was wounded seven and bliss ribbons at the recent military meet Cupid was also on hand for the affections of his fiancee, Miss Emma V. Griffen of this city. Post society at Fort Myer had been looking forward to the wedding as a culminating event of society functions more than two years ago in San Francisco.

The fact that the army's crack horseman had made a cropper in his riding of the matrimonial bridle became known when the license that had been issued from the court was returned to the city hall with the following inscription in Miss Griffen's handwriting: "Did not use this, as I have changed my name."

Corporal Heffelinger could not be found at the army post and relatives of the young woman refused to talk etc. Miss Griffen was said to have left the city.

Charley Palmole is constructing on his farm east of town, a modern building that will serve the purpose of several barns. The main idea of the combination affair—machine shed, milk house, granary, meadow shop, pig pen, etc., all under one roof. It is believed that there is an advantage in constructing buildings of this kind in that there is a saving in money in building one structure instead of several and a further saving in time, in that the work on the farm may be more easily handled.

The completion of George Walker's fine new barn, on his farm east of town, is to be properly celebrated on the evening of Thursday, June 26. On that date Mrs. Walker will serve a "barn supper" for the benefit of the Presbyterian church. It promises to be a most enjoyable affair in many ways, not the least of which is that one may buy all of the good things to eat, named below, for the small sum of 25 cents: buns and butter, chicken, radishes, onions, salads, cheese, cakes, marguerites, ice cream, coffe, pickles. Supper will be served at 5 o'clock and all are invited.

Will H. Wright, editor of the Woodworth (N. Dak.) Reader, was in the city this week. He joined Mrs. Wright here, she having been in Red Lake Falls for a few days for a visit with her father, Mr. Purington of the F. & S. Hardware company. Mr. and Mrs. Wright returned to Woodworth Wednesday.

Wm. Schaper has a farm of 320 acres at his home. The bees appeared at the farm about two years ago and had made themselves comfortable at home that Mr. Schaper forgot they were there. The bees took up their location in a cabin of the house next to the roof and are supposed to have stored away big loads of honey. This secret is told without any fear that bad boys will take advantage of the situation and attempt to "rob the nest." Recently Mr Schaper decided that his house needed reshingling and he put E. J. Dusterhoft on the job. Mr. Dusterhoft was getting nicely started with the work when the bees decided to resent the luinference with their domestic happiness. Mr. Dusterhoft made a few passes and that bit a few prominent places on the bone as to descended and landed considerably force on the ground. He was bruised, but not seriously injured. But the bone is not jolnged and the bees are still in command of the situation.

HORSE LABOR IS EXPENSIVE

This Cost Could Be Materially Reduced on Most Farms.

A careful study of the cost of maintaining a horse and of the amount of labor obtained for the expenditure will bring up the query, "How may motive power for the farm be obtained more economically?" Drawing upon the data of some kind or other, is an absolute necessity. It is probable that, for the great majority of farms, this motive force must be obtained from the farm horse. It is then of particularly important that methods of cheapening the cost of such labor be devised. A careful study of farm conditions and possibilities of organization, in connection with the detailed items of cost, shows that there are five practical methods by which costs may be reduced, either directly or indirectly. Below a brief consideration is almost every farm. They are—

MARE AND FOAL.

This mare is certainly caring for her keep, evan at night and on rainy days.

(a) The use of more farm brood mares.

(b) A better distribution of horse labor throughout the year.

(c) Reducing the number of work horses on the farm.

(d) More economical methods of feeding.

(e) Use, on small farms, of machinery requiring less horsepower.

The use of these methods means simply to so organize the farm, and the labor force available, as to obtain more nearly a maximum amount of labor from each horse. A sufficient number of illustrations of the practicability of this may be obtained, in many a neighborhood, to show the feasibility of one or more of the suggested methods, which are separately and more fully discussed in Extension Bulletin 15 of University Farm.

Buick

WHY A BUICK?

Because it has the power
Because it is reliable
Because it is durable
Because it is economical

140,000 owners are driving Buicks. They have found the Buick worth their money. You will find it worth yours. It is nothing unusual for a Buick to run 10,000 miles without having a thing done to the motor.

Buick cars are built by pioneers in the business. And they always will be built. This is the best kind of a guaranty to the user.

The famous Buick overhead valve motor is guaranteed to have more speed than any other type of motor on the market. It will pull stronger on low grade gasoline than any other type of motor ever built, and the fuel consumption is less.

Right now, today, is the time to buy if you want a Buick this season.

THE TWO SUITORS

By EDITH V. ROSS

"Circumstances alter cases." This on its face is an indefinite fdage. A minute, it is indefinitely expressed, but it is definite in fact.

Miss Arebella Simmonds was a very romantic young lady, one of those girls who dream of a prince who is to come and carry her off in spite of family and friends and other suitors. She spent a great deal of time picturing him in her mind's eye—tall, shapely and with immaculate in his dress.

When the picture came he came double—that is, there were two suitors, both of whom, though they did not fill Miss Simmonds' dream, came close to took upon. One was Peter Dowdy, with nothing unromantic about him but his name; the other Edwin Ledwith, whose name was well enough, but his manly beauty suffered a slight imperfection from a bald spot the size of a large dollar near the center of his head.

Both of these young men being at home Simmonds' disposal, both being especially desirable to her, she hesitated a long while between them, and one day made up her mind she would accept Mr. Ledwith. The reason for this was that she would prefer a husband with a bald spot to being called Mrs. Dowdy.

It so happened that the evening of the day on which she came to this conclusion both these gentlemen called upon her. Both had proposed and both were anxiously expecting an answer. Mr. Dowdy called first. He had not been with the lady long before she told him that she had been considering his offer, that she admired and respected him, but she did not love him well enough to marry him. The look of melancholy with which this dismissal was received quite touched Miss Simmonds' heart. He uttered no word of reproach, said nothing about having been led on to his discomfiture; he simply withdrew as one who had received his quietus and should have expected it.

It was quite dark outside when he left the house, and there was no street lamp near. Coal had been put in during the afternoon, and the colored man who did the job had neglected to replace the lid after having finished the job.

The result was that Mr. Dowdy stepped right down into a coal bin. He fell and was some time rolling about on the coal before he could get on his feet again. Then, to his horror, he discovered that the hole through which he had dropped was too far above him to be reached. There was a door to the coal bin, but it was locked.

Mr. Dowdy's object was to get out without attracting attention. The egress he preferred was by the hole above, and he set to work hoping up on it. It would give way, he felt sure, on which to stand, climb at the side of the hole and drive himself up and out. He had nothing to work with except his hands, but he scooped hard and succeeded in forming quite a sizable pile. He knew that when he stepped on it it would give way, so he did his shirt front, collar, cuffs, face and hands were oil as black as the sce of spades.

Discouraged, he examined the door of the bin and found it securely locked. A choice of two things remained—to make the most painful noise he could by or he must kick for some one to come and let him out. He shrank from the latter course, for he had not had refreshed him hegrimed with coal dust. But what mattered it? He had been turned down and could not be turned down more than he was. He did kick.

Now, it happened that Mr. Ledwith called just before Mr. Dowdy began to summon assistance. He had become tired of suspense and determined to bring the young lady to the point. Unfortunately he had missed the open coal hole by a few feet and was admitted to Miss Simmonds' presence. His appearance—he was in evening dress with a boutonniere—was conducive to openness. Miss Simmonds thought she had never seen him look handsomer. There was not a speck of dirt on him anywhere. A white kid glove rubbed all over him would not have been in the least soiled. He opened his case at once by telling Miss Simmonds that if kept in suspense any longer he would go mad. He implored her to end his sufferings.

Miss Simmonds was about to confess that she loved him when she cast her eyes aside at the doorway leading into the room and saw and reconsidered through the coal dust the figure of the man she had but a short time before refused. If his expression had then been melancholy it now expressed the wait of a broken heart.

"I regret, Mr. Ledwith," she said, "to give you an unfavorable answer to your very flattering proposal, but I am engaged to Mr. Dowdy."

Mr. Ledwith withdrew like a wounded Apollo, and Mr. Dowdy's smile through his mask of coal dust was appalling.

SOLVING CITY WELL PROBLEM

QUICK SAND CAUSES TROUBLE BUT THERE IS GOOD WATER SUPPLY.

Whether or not the city of Red Lake Falls has a well that will supply the city works system, is a question yet to be answered, yet it seems probable that the well on which Nick Dress has been working since early in the spring will furnish a sufficient supply. There seems to be no doubt of the supply of water, but how to dispose of it quick and in the well has been a problem hard to solve.

The original plan was to dig a well on the reservoir plan, ten feet in diameter, instead of putting down an pipe, and the plan seemed feasible. Near the site of the city well Leo Steinert had struck a vein with a secondary inexhaustible supply of water, at a depth at thirty feet. But the city's undertaking did not terminate so fortunately and when a depth of 63 feet was reached the big hole-in-the-ground plan was abandoned and Nick Dress started the drilled well.

Nine feet below the bottom of the big hole, the pipe struck quick sand and went through forty feet of the stuff. The drilling was continued until a depth of 270 feet was reached and from a vein at that depth a limited supply of water is coming. However, a big supply of water is now coming from the quick sand vein, coming up around the pipe and filling the big hole to within fifteen feet of the surface of the ground. If by some plan the quick sand may be disposed of, the city will have a fine well. This week gravel was put in the open well to a depth of five feet. Through this the water comes and the water seems to be clear of quick sand. Tests will be made to determine if the quick sand is kept out by this means and if it is, there will be no further doubt of the city's water supply.

A FINE SHOWING.

Automobile Club and Band Made Fine Showing at Crookston.

Red Lake Falls' Automobile club, with thirty cars in line, made a fine showing in the auto parade, one of the features of the Red L. T. convention, at Crookston, last Thursday evening. The delegation that went over with the band in the afternoon made a hit as they came into the city. The cars formed in two columns with the forty piece band leading the procession. As the local people proceeded along the business streets they were given an enthusiastic reception by the crowds assembled at the celebration. The band boys were complimented on every hand for their fine appearance and for the high quality of their music.

BIG CELEBRATION AT BROOKS

CELEBRATION OF ST. JOHN'S DAY WILL BE JOYOUS OCCASION.

The celebration of St. John's day at Brooks next Tuesday, June 24th, promises to be a glad occasion. There will be public addresses by well known speakers and a fine program of sports.

The Red Lake Falls concert band of forty pieces will furnish music and there will be a good ball game, a program of athletic contests and dancing afternoon.

It is expected that many Red Lake Falls people will attend the dancing afternoon and evening.

Sow Fodder Corn.

Don't forget that fodder corn is the king of forage crops and especially valuable for the young stock when sown at the rate of about three pecks per acre. It can be sown with the ordinary grain drill if the feed cups are so plugged or covered as to sow corn these feet six inches apart.

A corn planter may be used by adjusting the dropping device so as to sow thickly. If once over the row does not put in enough seed, go twice in the same row and sow accordingly.

The kernels should be from three to six inches apart in the row or proportionately thick if planted in hills with the planter. A yield of from three to five tons of field-cured fodder or ten to fifteen tons of green fodder will be produced per acre, if sown as above stated. Where fodder corn may be sown as late as June 15, or, in case of scarcity of pasture or hay, it may be sown as late as July 10, provided there is sufficient moisture in the soil to germinate the seed.—C. LATENDRESSE—OARCEAU.

Popular Young People Married Tuesday Morning.

The marriage of two popular young people of the city, Miss Leah Latendresse and Mr. Theodore Garceau, took place on Tuesday, June 17. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Fr. Deyne at St. Joseph's church at 7 o'clock in the morning and was witnessed by a few relatives.

Miss Mana Zeh was bridesmaid and Mr. George McLean groomsman. After the ceremony the bridal party went to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Latendresse, where a wedding breakfast was served. Mr. Garceau and his bride then went to Dugdale in a fine automobile and took a train for a short wedding trip. Up on their return they will go to Dugdale where rooms are kept ready for the happy couple.

The groom is a popular young man and has many friends who wish him well in the matrimonial venture he has entered upon. Mrs. and Mrs. Garceau are popular young people and their many friends will be glad of the opportunity to offer congratulations and best wishes.

ASSOCIATION OF RURAL SCHOOLS

SPECIAL STATE AID FOR ASSOCIATION WITH HIGH SCHOOLS.

There is no better example of the liberal educational policy of the state of Minnesota than the provision made for the association of country schools with the nearest agricultural high school. This association is brought about for the purpose of extending the work in agriculture, cooking, sewing and manual training in the rural schools.

If there is a desire on the part of the patrons of a country school to associate with an agricultural high school, which is that of Red Lake Falls, a meeting is called and the matter settled by ballot. If a majority is in favor of association, one member of the board is elected to serve with the city board in conducting the agricultural and industrial work in both the city and the country schools. The authority of the rural person member is equal to that of any member of the city board in regard to what is done.

Each associated rural school receives special state aid on account of association, to the amount of fifty dollars a year.

A large number of rural schools about the state have availed themselves of this opportunity for greater advancement. A very good example of association is found at Cokato, where thirteen rural schools have associated with the Cokato high school. Every one of these schools has been provided with a manual training bench and tools, a cooking outfit, sewing equipment, and a library of books dealing with agricultural topics. A suitable case has been provided for each library. Regular visits are made to the schools by the superintendent of the city school and the instructors in science, cooking and sewing, and manual training. In addition many Saturday afternoon and evening meetings are held for which specialists among the various branches of agriculture are secured.

The time is ripe for a movement of this kind in Red Lake county. The efficiency of the country schools could be increased vastly by association with the local high school.—P. C.

DROVE FAST HORSE OUT OF COUNTRY

THIEF TOOK DRIVER BELONGING TO MR. ST. MARIE, TERRE-BONNE MILLER.

A valuable roof horse belonging to Mr. St. Marie, the Terrebonne miller, was stolen last Thursday night and driven out of the county. The animal is the track horse driven by C. O. Kunkel last season.

The horse is a dark bay mare about thirteen years old. She weighs about a thousand pounds and has a white star in forehead and white spot on side of head. She is a blooded mare and carries her head high. The harness had collar and hames and horse was hitched to a rather old top buggy with red running gear. The buggy top is considerably worn. At the time the outfit was taken there was in the buggy a buffalo robe valued at about one hundred dollars.

The man who stole a fine colt belonging to R. E. Vance a few months ago is suspected of the horse stealing. He had been discounting among the farmers east of town for some time, "broadcasting" them and posing as a land-seeker. He disappeared at about the time the horse was driven away from Terrebonne.

The car started on the pole all right and then stopped suddenly—finding it too much like work evidently. The occupants of the car did not stop so suddenly. They were scattered all along the highway but no one was seriously injured. The car was damaged considerably.

The Baseball "Fan."

If you are interested in fine pegs, lax American game of base ball, no doubt you have read many columns of "dope" about the star players. But there is one individual, or rather a class of individuals, you seldom hear about that are very important to the success of the game from a professional standpoint. These are the "fans" who help to make the game interesting for the spectator and often remember for the players. Here is another page of this issue you will find a good story of the "fans" as they have been observed by Hugh S. Fullerton, the well known baseball writer, in his travels around the big league circuits. Whether you are a "fan" or just a lover of clean sports, you'll find this story worth while reading.

COMMISSIONERS PROCEEDINGS

BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS, RED LAKE COUNTY.

Red Lake Falls, Minnesota,
June 2nd, 1913.

On the call of the roll the board met pursuant to Chapter 230 of the General Laws of Minnesota, for the year 1905, and upon adjournment of the Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake county, Minnesota, met in special session at the Commissioners Room in the City of Red Lake Falls, in said county, at 10 o'clock a. m., June 2nd, 1913, for the purpose of considering the petition of Peter V. Kohkonen and others for repair of County Ditch Number 18, also known as Garnes and Emardville Ditch No. 1; and County Ditch No. 22.

Meeting called to order by the chairman at 10 o'clock a. m.

Members present: Hans Pigeon, Hansen and Schlafer.

Members absent: Crabtree.

The petition of Peter V. Kohkonen and others, for the repair of County Ditch No. 18, also known as Garnes and Emardville Ditch No. 1, and County Ditch No. 22, came on before the Board. The said petition was read and considered, and on motion of Commissioner Pigeon, duly seconded by Commissioner Schultz, and carried unanimously, H. H. Bruzer was appointed engineer to survey and make report of the repair of County Ditch No. 18, also known as Garnes and Emardville Ditch No. 1, and the repair of County Ditch No. 22; said reports to be filed in the office of the County Auditor no later than the 14th day of June, 1913.

On motion, seconded and carried, the Board took a recess until one o'clock p. m.

The Board convened at one o'clock p. m. and called to order by the chairman; all members being present except Cadieux.

The petition presented by Louis Ducherme and others, for vacation of that part of "Colony Road" in Section 26, township 153 north of range 46 west, as the same is described in said petition, was presented to the Board, and upon motion, duly seconded and carried, the petition was received and ordered placed on file;

And upon a further motion, duly seconded and carried unanimously, a committee of three, consisting of Commissioners Pigeon, Schultz and Cadieux, was appointed to investigate the merits of said petition, and filing as a plan and place of meeting for said committee June 23th, 1913, at 2 o'clock p. m. at the residence of Louis Ducharme in said town.

And further, that said committee report to the Board at County Commissioners at the next meeting to be held in the Commissioners' Room in the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls, on Monday, July 14, 1913, at 10 o'clock a. m.

MORE DECISIONS WILL FOLLOW SOON

RATE CASES FOR OTHER STATES ARE DUE ABOUT NEXT MONDAY.

LIKELY THROW MORE LIGHT

Expected That These Rulings Will Clarify Some Points of Minnesota Case—10,000 Copies of Decision Authorized.

Washington, June 12. — Absence from Tuesday's session of the supreme court of Justice Hughes, who is understood to be preparing decisions in most of the Missouri, Arkansas, Oregon, Kentucky and West Virginia railroad rate cases caused final action in these cases to go over until the last decision day, June 24.

Just before the court convened a rumor arose that a dissenting opinion in the Minnesota rate cases would be announced. The court had adjourned Monday immediately after Justice Hughes concluded announcing the court's decision. None was forthcoming, however.

Additional Light Expected.

Decision of the remaining rate cases is awaited as likely to throw additional light on the methods of valuing railroad property for rate making purposes, a subject dealt with in the Minnesota cases.

All the decisions are being awaited anxiously by the interstate commerce commission, which is launching forth on a task of making a physical valuation of all the railroad property in the United States.

On account of the widespread public interest in the Minnesota decision, the senate has ordered the printing of 10,000 copies of public documents, as Lawyers who gathered at the supreme court to listen to the application of the principles laid down by Justice Hughes in the Minnesota rate cases to the rate cases from Missouri, Arkansas, Kentucky, Oregon and West Virginia were of opinion rate making, both in the states and before the federal government has been reduced to a science from accurate basis than ever before.

Opinions as to Victory.

All sorts of opinions prevailed as to the victory reported in the Minnesota decisions. Minnesota state officials in dispatches expressed their pleasure over the result and Attorney General McKeregnis and members of the Interstate Commerce commission said they were fully satisfied. The prospect of congress taking charge of state rates affecting interstate commerce indirectly lent encouragement to the railroads that a deadlock would escape from regulation by 48 state commissions.

RECOMMEND TARIFF CHANGE

Senate May Eliminate Anti-Dumping Clause Held Discriminatory by Committee.

Washington, June 11.—Elimination of the anti-dumping clause of the Underwood tariff, which levies a tax of additional duties on imports sold to this country at less than the foreign market price was recommended by the senate finance sub-committee in charge of the administrative features of the measure.

The clause, as it passed the house, was not extended to articles on the free list, and the subject of the Republican leaders for this reason on the ground that it was discriminatory. It was first proposed that the section be amended to include the free list, but this was finally abandoned as a solution of the problem, many senators contending that the whole clause is impracticable and that it would precipitate tariff history into the courts for the foreign nations which would be disadvantageous to the extension of American trade in the markets of the world.

Fireman Pinned Under Debris.

Chicago, June 11.—One fireman was injured and damage of $175,000 was caused when fire destroyed the three story building occupied by the Sheridan and Sewhurst company. During the year, President Hibben stated, about six hundred thousand dollars had been received for endowments and about two hundred and twelve thousand dollars

INTERNATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP POLO MATCH

The international polo games for the championship here began and though polo is scarcely a sport of the masses, there is widespread interest in the outcome of the match at Meadow Brook, Long Island. The British players are succeeded to have a good chance to carry home the trophy.

DEMOCRAT REVENUE RETURNS

HOPE TO RAISE $347,000,000 ANNUALLY BY PLAN.

Articles Heretofore Untaxed Will Bring At Least $60,000,000 in Duties.

Washington, June 11.—At a table presided over by the finance committee showing comparative figures based on the Underwood tariff bill and the present tariff law, shows the average advalorem rate in the proposed law to be 27.81 per cent as against 43.64 per cent under the Payne-Aldrich bill.

The estimated loss of revenue through the augmented free list in the Underwood bill would be $94,718,320 of the import valuation of $1,702,534,656. Revenue under the proposed bill, exclusive of the income tax, is estimated at $226,701,130, as compared with $321,419,450 under the present rates. With the income tax revenue estimated at approximately $80,000,000 the total revenue under the proposed bill would aggregate about $347,000,000.

In the sundries schedule, wherein the Democrats have added many articles not heretofore taxed or have increased rates on luxuries, the advalorem equivalent shows an increase over the Payne-Aldrich rates from 54.37 per cent to 31.36 and the estimated revenue from this schedule is raised from $37,000,000 to approximately $60,000,000.

Wool revenues, it is estimated, will decrease from $27,000,000 to $13,000,000. The sugar revenue would decrease from $60,000,000 at the rate of $40,000,000 a year until sugar goes on the free list in three years.

To protect the city of New York against the operation of the proposed income tax, where it might fall upon the city's interest in the earnings of the Interborough Rapid Transit company, Comptroller Metzbrown and Acting Corporation Commissioner Hotchkiss of New York, have suggested important amendments to the income tax provision of the tariff law.

One amendment would make it clear that incomes of states or municipalities cannot be taxed. The other would exempt earnings of any private corporation, when the operation of the business is merely incidental to a state, county or city. The New York officials contend that under the Interborough contract for the building of the new subways the city has a direct interest in the earnings of the company until the obligations of the city bonds are paid.

Row of Buildings Burned.

Springfield, Mo., June 11.—Fire, which started in the basement of a department store here within two hours destroyed a row of buildings on the public square, causing damages estimated at $300,000. Fifteen buildings, practically a quarter of the business houses on the public square, were destroyed, and the entire northeast section of the square was in ruins. It was the worst fire in the city's history. It was believed to have started from defective electric wiring.

MILLIONAIRE WOOD HELD NOT GUILTY

INNOCENT OF ANY CONNECTION WITH PLOT TO PLANT DYNAMITE AT LAWRENCE.

BRIBE CHARGE TO BE PROBED

Prominent Attorney in Case Mentioned in Story of Juror Who Says He Was Approached—Jury Disagrees As to Others.

Boston, June 9.—What was characterized by veteran attorneys and court officials as the most sensational episode in the history of Massachusetts courts for over a century marked the close of the three months' contempt conspiracy case.

Collins Found Guilty.

Within ten seconds after the foreman had announced that the jury, after wrangling for 36 hours, had found William M. Wood, head of the $60,000,000 woolen and cotton trust, guilty of any complicity in the plot to plant dynamite in Lawrence during the textile strike of January, 1912, to discredit the strikers; that it found Dennis C. Collins, the Canadian dynamiter, guilty on two counts of the indictment for planting the dynamite, and that it had failed to agree in the case of Frederick E. Atkins, wealthy dealer to dye stuffs, Attorney Henry F. Harlow, one of the leading lawyers in the state and personal counsel for Wood, was on his feet. He called the attention of the court to the fact that a story was current that an attempt had been made to bribe Morris Shuman, juror, and that in the rumors his name was mentioned. He characterized the story as "abominable lie," and demanded that the court immediately institute an open public investigation.

If he was guilty of any attempt to influence a jury unduly, he said, he should be indicted on the spot in open room and disgraced publicly and immediately.

Grand Jury Called.

Judge Crosby appealed to District Attorney Pelletier for his views and Pelletier, after giving Hurlburt a clean bill of health and saying that his name had been used by a dishonorable "agent provocateur" instituted the proceedings.

Pelletier said he had already called a grand jury investigation for today and suggested that the public investigation go over until Wednesday, when he would be in a position to determine what part there is in the affair.

All through the night the jury stood eleven to one on the conviction of Collins. The one individual who hung out was described as a man of wealth and social prominence.

Rubber Offered Wrecked Car.

Chicago, June 11.—A thief who attempted to automobile of Charles Hilt, a real estate dealer, near South Chicago on Saturday, can have the rest of the machine for $50. Ritz whereby the 19 officials of the miners' union, indicted Saturday, charged with violating the anti-trust law, will appear voluntarily in open court Friday. No summonses will be issued until after that time. Coal operators and miners are gathering here for the hearings before the sub-committee of the United States senate.

HOME RULE UP SECOND TIME

COMMONS TO PASS UPON MEASURE SECOND TIME.

Will Then Be Referred to House of Lords for Consideration.

London, June 10.—The home rule for Ireland bill has come before the house of commons for second reading, preliminary to its second passage, of the three necessary for it to become law over the veto of the house of lords.

The house of lords. It is assumed, will throw it out again, as it did last year, and it will then have to go through the usual routine in the 1914 session before becoming law.

So far the government has not put a time limit on the debate in the house of commons, expecting the opposition to the measure will soon work itself out, and that within one or four days the Unionist members will allow the second reading to go through after registering their continued objection.

The house of commons, under the parliament act, which provided the means of passing liberal bills over the veto of the house of lords, has to be must go to the house of lords in exactly the same shape as it reached that chamber last season.

Members of the lower house, however, may suggest amendments to the lords which the latter may insert at their discretion. No suggested amendment has been talked of yet, but it is possible that at either this or next session, some changes may be made in the financial clauses of the bill to which such objection was raised by liberals as well as Unionists last year.

The servant girl was discharged and Miss Dennis was arrested.

Probe Indian Expenditures

Washington, June 11.—The senate Indian affairs committee agreed upon a resolution to instruct the Indian appropriation bill which requires a complete investigation of all expenditures of the Indian bureau, a detailed accounting for every cent spent of the $16,000,000 or more to be appropriated for the coming year, and to revolutionize the method of administering Indian trust funds and annual appropriations in the future. Another amendment will prohibit any contracts with Indians relating to tribal funds.

BUMPER CROP IS PRESENT FORECAST

WHEAT IS SUFFICIENT TO MILL MORE THAN 160,000,000 BARRELS OF FLOUR.

MAY EQUAL RECORD OF 1901

Results Follow Favorable Weather and a Large Acreage Estimate of Oats, Barley, Rye and Hay, Also.

Washington, June 11.—A bumper wheat crop, sufficient to mill more than 160,000,000 barrels of flour, and which may reach the proportions of the record harvest of 1901, if conditions from now on are exceptionally favorable, was forecast by the department of agriculture in its June crop report.

Government experts estimated this year's harvest would be 744,000,000 bushels of which 462,000,000 bushels will be winter wheat—a record for this crop—and 282,000,000 bushels will be spring wheat. The third largest acreages ever planted and favorable growing conditions account for the prospect for an abundant yield.

An increase of more than one per cent over last year's acreage was planted to oats this year, but the condition of this crop on June 1 was below the ten year average and official estimate the production will be 1,164,000,000 bushels, or more than 300,000,000 bushels below last year's harvest. The acreage planted to barley was less than that of last year, and the production is estimated at 177,000,000 bushels.

The Crop.

Spring Wheat—Area planted, 18,653,000 acres, compared with 19,849,000 acres last year, 20,381,000 acres in 1911, and 18,852,000 acres in 1910. Condition, 92.5 per cent of a normal, compared with 91.2 per cent on June 1 last year, and 92.8 per cent the 10-year average. Indicated yield, 13.6 bushels per acre, compared with 17.2 bushels last year, and 13.3 bushels, the 1908-12 average. Estimated total production, 253,000,000 bushels, compared with 339,346,000 bushels last year, 196,682,000 bushels in 1911, 200,979,000 bushels in 1910 and 245,000,000 in 1909.

Three young fellows make it their business to cooperate, by their efforts, to assist the city authorities to keeping the city clean and healthy.

They perform this work without increasing the enmity of the people, in fact are cordially welcomed by them wherever they go.

Such a movement deserves emulation by all of our large cities over the entire country.

WOMAN SEEKS HER AFFINITY

Travels Far and Wide Looking for Unknown Who Dying Husband Said She Should Wed.

New York.—The most remarkable story told for many years is one which new reports was recited here by Mrs. Eugene Williams, beautiful, wealthy, and handsome widow, who, as she sailed away for Sweden to find an affinity, said she never saw her, nor whose name she does not know.

"My home was in Chicago," said Mrs. Williams. "When I was sixteen, Mr. Williams, who lived in Pittsburgh, met me. We were married. Then I left. We were married. Two years ago he died. On his deathbed he called me to him.

"'I don't want you to marry again unless you marry one of my boyhood chums,' said my husband. 'I lived in Sweden. He is your perfect affinity.' Before I could say more he died.

"Three times since then I have sailed to foreign lands, looking for my affinity. A dozen times I thought I had found him, and became engaged"—and here the little widow displayed a hand covered with solitaires—"but each time I found it was not the right man. I don't know his name, don't know what he looks like. I don't know anything about this man who is to be my second husband except that he lives somewhere in Sweden.

"I was quite discouraged when I got back last time. Then I received spiritualists. They located my affinity for me and swore I am going to where he is. When I find him we shall be married. I'll bet you boys know all about him if I should marry him," said the girl waving a farewell from aboard the liner.

Rooster a Mollycoddle.

Fulton, Mo.—R. W. H. Stevens of Ashland has a rooster who has proved to his master the question: "When is a rooster not a rooster?" When he has given that community an entirely new and up-to-date egg handicap.

The rooster first gave evidence of his "New York" tendencies when he was discovered on a nest of eggs in an improved nest. At first nothing was thought of the matter, but the rooster persisted in returning to the nest after being driven off.

Mrs. Stevens has provided the rooster with a "set of Rockefeller" eggs and the rooster is faithfully on the job.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

DRIVER, WAGON AND TEAM PLUNGE 60 FT.

CYRUS KIMBALL KILLED AND TWO HORSES ARE HORRIBLY MANGLED BY FALL.

CAN'T PLACE RESPONSIBILITY

Accident Happened on Vacated Property and City Thought Not to Blame—Man Leaves Seven Unprotected Orphans.

St. Paul.—The city of St. Paul probably cannot be held responsible for the accident at Second and Minnesota streets Sunday, which resulted in the death of Cyrus Kimbell, a driver for the Crescent Creamery company, in which two horses also were killed and a wagon demolished.

Was on Vacated Property.

Corporation Attorney O'Neill and other city officials have started an investigation. They found that the fence which gave way at the top of the bluff above the Omaha yards, allowing the team and its driver to make a plunge of sixty feet, was not on city property, but on property vacated some years ago in favor of the Omaha road.

The curb in which the fence posts were fastened was put in by the city at the time Second street was cut through. The fence, however, was built by the railroad company.

The Accident.

Kimball was killed, two horses he was driving were crushed into a mass and his wagon was reduced to kindling wood, when the horses plunged 60 feet to a brick pavement below. The rig crashed through the frail railing and over the bluff with a roar. John Bawser, assistant manager of the Crescent Creamery company, for which Kimball worked, narrowly escaped.

The driver had no time to jump as Bawser had done. While still trying to manage his horses, before he even had an opportunity to look behind him, he was thrown with tremendous force from his seat, in reality by a giant catapult, sixty feet below, to the brick pavement of the Omaha freight yard. He was dead when physicians reached him at the hospital, and seven children are orphans.

The Horses Mangled.

One of the horses was split in two when it struck at the bottom of the wall, and the blood of the animals and the man made the scene a shambles. The wagon was broken to pieces, and mingled with the blood that spattered the pavement, were multicolored bricks and ice cream for Sunday dinner tables, with which the wagon had been loaded.

Throws Valise Scene.

Hundreds of people thronged to the place to see the broken curb and the pile of kindling that was a wagon before it backed over the cliff. Patrolman Sullivan stationed there to prevent another accident had difficulty keeping the crowd from climbing on the temporary fence built. Many risked a similar accident in an effort to get a cool view.

ROAD WORK IS PROGRESSING

Force at Work on Highway in Both Rice and Steele Counties.

Faribault. — Work on the various state roads in Rice and Steele counties is progressing and the county officials are giving considerable attention to this important improvement. The season take road, a stretch of about three miles, is about completed.

Work on the Faribault-St. Paul road also is progressing. At the present time work is being carried on north of this city at what is known as Hogback. Work on the road south to Steele county line will be taken up before a long time.

Steele county has this road nearly finished to the Rice county line. Considerable work yet to be done in the village of Medford, which is on this road. Here the engineer has changed the course to some degree and made the road in a straighter line.

CONVICT PLAYED CHAUFFEUR

Paroled Negro Admits He Took Two Autos from a Stillwater Garage Sunday.

Stillwater.—Henry Curry, a negro, admitted in municipal court that he had taken from the Dorgus-Dresdner garage the two cars Sunday morning, and one of which was ditched three miles west of the city. Curry, who is a paroled prisoner, was bound over to the district court, where he plead guilty.

A search is being made for Geo. Hill and George McCoy of St. Paul and Dave Peterson of Hudson, three of the youths said to have been in the car which overturned. Bernard Streich, a bottler in a brewery, arrested and charged with malicious destruction of property in connection with the joy ride, said Curry was running the car and was given $7 for making the trip.

The auto which was ditched belonged to Dr. Demster Kalloff.

VISITORS AT COMMENCEMENT

Exercises in Connection with Those at St. Mary's School Last for Several Days.

Faribault.—Commencement week at the Shattuck military academy and the St. Mary's school for girls began Sunday with baccalaureate services in the Cathedral of Our Merciful Savior. Rev. J. A. Schmid of St. John's Evangelical church of St. Paul was the speaker.

Many former graduates of Shattuck came for the exercises on old boys' day, June 15, the address of which was diverted to the annual steam battle and dress parade. "Sweet Lavender," by Sir Arthur Wing, Pinero, was staged in the evening by members of the academy.

The commencement exercises were held Wednesday evening, June 18, when B. Kellogg of St. Paul delivered the address and 23 members of the graduating class received diplomas.

UTILITIES MEETING JULY 14

Chairman J. M. Hackney Announces Date—Home Committee Home From Madison.

St. Paul.—Senator J. M. Hackney of the city, chairman of the senate special committee on public utilities legislation, has announced that the committee will hold its first meeting at the state capitol Monday, July 14. Senator W. S. Dewsnup of Minneapolis, who has been in British Columbia on an extended business trip, has returned home and will be in the city most of the time during the summer. Other members of the committee are away or tied up on business matters," said Senator Hackney, "so I found it impossible to call an earlier meeting. Not all the committee may be able to attend as it is."

Professor D. H. Holbrook of Minneapolis, who was chosen as secretary of the house special committee at its meeting Saturday evening in Madison, Wis., returned with a mass of information and will proceed at once to prepare letters to be sent out to Minnesota cities, asking for information as to their relations with public utilities. He also will compile information for the committee about the utility laws of other states.

BOOSTERS TO GATHER SOON.

Southern Minnesota Better Development League Will Meet June 16-19.

Northfield.—Herman Roe, of this city, acting secretary of the Southern Minnesota Better Development league, announced a number of conventions the league will be held in Austin on June 17 and 18. This is one day later than was planned bu the change was necessitated by the unavoidable absence of Governor Eberhart designating June 17 as' good roads day.

The work of southern Minnesota counties in the league all of which will be represented at the two days' session. Good roads, county agricultural agents and co-operation will be the principal subjects discussed. Minnesota's best informed men on these subjects will speak. Mr. Roe says that a record crowd is expected to attend.

Odd Fellows in Duluth.

Duluth.—Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday were red letter days for the Odd Fellows, as 1,000 visitors attended the annual convention of the Minnesota grand lodge here. Two steamers were chartered to take the visitors across the St. Louis bay and St. Paul Odd Fellows were here 500 strong, coming on a train with nothing but Odd Fellows on it. A parade took place Tuesday.

Montana After Laborers.

Butte.—Thousands of men are wanted for railroad work, throughout Montana according to the statement of the Butte Post, and only 10 per cent of the demands can be met. Lewistown is drawing on Minneapolis, and twoen Butta and Miles City there is much railroad work. The B. A. & P. is calling for laborers, the Gallatin Valley railroad and the Milwaukee for its new Extension between Cliff Junction and Butte. Chicago and Minneapolis are sending men to Butte, but Seattle is no longer shipping help.

Shot in Mysterious Manner.

Marshall.—While leaning on a corner at Minneota, A. O. Kompelien, a farmer, felt a stinging sensation just below the knee. Examination showed a wound made by a twenty-two-caliber rifle bullet.

Two Injured in a Runaway.

Hastings.—Mr. and Mrs. Martin Mc Gtennan of Vermillion were severely injured when the team Mr. McGlennan was driving became frightened at a scrap of paper blowing on the roadside and ran away.

WILL CONTINUE CANAL FIGHT

Legislative Commission Decides to Appeal From Decision on Supervisor-Mississippi Waterway.

St. Paul.—Minnesota will continue her fight for a ship canal to connect Lake Superior with the Mississippi river. This was decided upon at a meeting of the commission appointed by the recent legislature to push the project, in the governor's office.

On May 14 the local board of United States army engineers reported against the feasibility of the project, holding the expense was not warranted, owing to the existence of low railroad rates between St. Paul and Duluth with which a canal could not compete at a profit.

From this decision the commission decided to take an appeal to the general board of the United States engineers at Washington and a further notification of the action of the commission was ordered transmitted to L. M. Garrison, secretary of war, at Washington. The board of engineers must act on the case before a bridge at the cotton meter will be reviewed by them before final action is taken.

The Minnesota commission is composed of Governor Eberhart and Judge Irn B. Mills, chairmen of the Board of Railroad and Warehouse commissioners, Senator Hackney and Senator Stillwater has been the moving spirit in pushing the project and introduced the resolution in the Legislature authorizing the appointment of the commission.

If funds are available, a number of witnesses will be sent to Washington should the hearings be had there, to testify as to the commercial value of such a canal.

It has been twenty years since the first proposal was made for this canal. In 1894 army engineers surveyed two routes for it, by way of Lake Pepin and the other by the Brule and St. Croix rivers. They reported favorably on the latter route and estimated the cost of a canal eight feet wide at $7,500,000. In 1899 another report was made recommending the same route and estimating the cost at $6,012,500. Both reports, however, advised against the construction of the waterway because of the factor of railroad competition.

NORTHERN DEVELOPERS MEET

Approximately 300 Delegates Attend Meeting at Hinckley—Important Dinings.

Hinckley.—The Northern Development association, embracing all the counties in the northern part of the state, held a two-day session here last week with a number of excellent addresses presented, besides the officers of the organization.

Nearly 300 delegates attended from the various counties.

W. R. Mackenzie, secretary of the organization, accomplished a great deal for the association during his term of office. This was especially evident when the roster of delegates was compared with that at the former meeting of the association here two years ago. At that time there were only 40 members present, and the fact that there were nearly ten times that number present at the last week speaks volumes for the work accomplished by the association's officers in the past two years.

Contrary to the original plan, the movement for a second state fair in northern Minnesota was not pressed on the floor of the convention.

The association called for an extensive change in the policy of the state agricultural board and recommended a public domain commission. It also called for an agricultural soil classification and appointed a committee to confer with other state development associations regarding the formation of a state league. Benedetto was selected for the next summer convention.

A convention to consider land clearing in northern Minnesota was set for July 1 at Duluth.

YOUNG BOY HANGS HIMSELF

Body Bumps Against Father of Lad Who Goes to Feed Chickens.

Minneapolis.—When Henry Johnson went out to feed his chickens at his home 315 Cleveland avenue N., he bumped into the body of his 16-year-old son, Herold Johnson, swinging by a rope from a tree.

Why the son took his own life has not been learned by his grief-stricken parents. Leaving a party of cousins, he had gone to visit them, and who were laughing and singing in the front of the house, the young man had fastened into the back yard and taken his life.

South Haven Enterprising.

South Haven.—South Hevan's booster week under the auspices of the commercial club drew large crowds and was pronounced a success. Professor Hosmer of the state agricultural scool addressed a large crowd of them Tuesday afternoon on dairying. That ble talk was appreciated was evidenced by the throng that surrounded him after the meeting, asking questions and seeking special information. Governor Eberhart came Friday.

Faribault Prepares For Fourth.

Faribault.—Preparations are being made for a big Fourth. State Senator Kenyon of Iowa will make an address. This will be the opening day of the Chautauqua, which will be held here for eight days.

Marshall Aids Electric Line.

Marshall.—One hundred and eight shares of stock of the Luca Electric railroad line have been sold here and more will be taken by farmers and business men. The stock required will undoubtedly be raised by the 15th.

STATE WINS R. R. RATE FIGHT

Long Legal Battle for Low Tariffs and 2-Cent Fare Decided favorably for Minnesota.

St. Paul.—The 2-cent-a-mile passenger rate will be in operation again in all Minnesota within from a few days, as a result of the United States supreme court decision in the Minnesota rate cases, according to attorney General Lyndon A. Smith.

Meanwhile, every purchaser of a ticket on a railroad in Minnesota, for transportation between points within the state, will be given a receipt, if it is asked for, and will get a refund when the 2-cent fare becomes operative.

Every holder of a receipt for purchase price of a passenger ticket in Minnesota, at any time after June 1 1911, except in the case of the Minneapolis and St. Louis road, will be able to collect the difference between 2 cents and 3 cents a mile by filing a claim with the state railroad and warehouse commission.

All shippers of merchandise who, since June 1, 1911, have paid the rates demanded by the railroads in Minnesota, and who have exceeded bills, will be able to collect the difference, with 6 per cent interest, by filing claims with the state commission and those actually collected by the railroads.

Shippers may also collect the difference between commodity rates, fixed by the state, and those actually charged since June 1, 1907. The total of such claims will probably exceed $5,000,000.

A. & St. L. To Meet Rates.

Vice-President W. G. Bierd, of the Minneapolis & St. Louis, which was the only road to contest the state decisions finding the Minnesota mode rates not confiscatory, says that while he has not yet had a conference with President Newman Erb, of the New York, Chicago & St. Louis, Minneapolis & St. Louis from the information he has, the Minneapolis and Minneapolis territory will have to go on paying the 3-cent rate fare.

"The Minneapolis & St. Louis road will not be able, as I see the matter now, to file tariffs with the interstate commerce commission made where competitive rode go on the 2-cent basis," Mr. Bierd said, "and while I would not wish to speak authoritatively for Mr. Erb, I expect that we will be governed by the same changes that will affect the other carriers."

The decision of the supreme Court follows:

Opinion of Justice Hughes.

"Justice Hughes delivered the opinion, said:

"1. The constitution gives congress no authority, at any time subsequently to the admission of a state into the union, to limit the power of the state to control rates to provide effective regulation within its boundaries, state v. Minnesota Rate Cases, 230 U. S. 352.

"2. The commerce that is confined within the limits of a state is not taken from the state by the fact that interstate commerce may also be affected, and the power of congress to exercise its paramount authority in the regulation of interstate commerce does not enable it to cut down the power of the state over commerce which is purely internal, even though interstate commerce may incidentally be involved. Wherever the line may be drawn which separates regulations of interstate commerce from those which are of such character as to be inseparably connected with the exercise of the power of the single authority, there is those extreme cases which must be dealt with as they arise, but the principle that intercourse, real and substantial between the citizens of the several states is interstate commerce and that the state has no power to impose any burden upon the exercise of the authority of the nation in the regulation of such commerce is not to be denied. Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196.

"3. The fact that the railroad rates herein will reduce railroad transportation charges for intrastate transportation does not show that there is any invasion of the constitutional power of congress. Such a result would be merely incidental and by the act itself. As a power appropriate to the exercise of a function granted by the constitution, congress has the authority to extend its control over intrastate transportation if that be necessary to secure the adequate protection of interstate commerce. Houston, E. & W. T. R. Co. v. United States, 234 U. S. 342. But congress has not exercised this power. It has not set up a standard for intrastate rates or delegated to the commission any authority to establish them. It has not even required that intrastate rates shall not be unjustly discriminatory. It has simply established a maximum limit for the intrastate rates to be charged by railroads engaged in both intrastate and interstate commerce, leaving the state to deal with the matter of intrastate rates as it will. It has not undertaken to say that the state shall not establish rates which shall be reasonable and just, or which shall not be unjustly discriminatory. It has not even required that intrastate rates shall not be unjustly discriminatory as between localities. It has not undertaken to prescribe any general rule for the guidance of the state in the establishment of its intrastate rates. It has not even required that intrastate rates shall be reasonable and just. It has not established any standard for intrastate rates, or any test by which their validity is to be determined. It has not provided any machinery for the enforcement of any requirement with respect to such rates. It has not required that they shall be substantially relative to interstate rates. It has not required that intrastate rates shall be such as not to unjustly burden interstate commerce. It has not required that intrastate rates shall be such as not to obstruct interstate commerce. It has not required that intrastate rates shall be such as not to subject interstate commerce to undue or unreasonable prejudice. It has not required that intrastate rates shall be such as not to constitute undue preference or advantage as between localities in interstate commerce. It has not required that intrastate rates shall be such as not to constitute undue preference or advantage as between persons or localities in intrastate commerce on the one hand and persons or localities in interstate commerce on the other hand. It has not required that intrastate rates shall be such as not to constitute undue preference or advantage as between persons or localities engaged in intrastate commerce. It has not required that intrastate rates shall be such as not to constitute undue preference or advantage as between persons or localities engaged in interstate commerce. It has not required that intrastate rates shall be such as not to constitute undue preference or advantage as between persons or localities using the same railroad in intrastate commerce. It has not required that intrastate rates shall be such as not to constitute undue preference or advantage as between persons or localities using different railroads in intrastate commerce. It has not required that intrastate rates shall be such as not to constitute undue preference or advantage as between different railroads operating in the state. It has not required that intrastate rates shall be such as not to constitute undue preference or advantage as between localities in intrastate commerce where one locality is more remote from the border than another. It has not required that intrastate rates shall be such as not to constitute undue preference or advantage as between localities in intrastate commerce where one locality is more remote from the center of population than another. It has not required that intrastate rates shall be such as not to constitute undue preference or advantage as between localities in intrastate commerce where one locality is more remote from the market than another. It has not required that intrastate rates shall be such as not to constitute undue preference or advantage as between localities in intrastate commerce where one locality is more remote from the point of production than another. It has not required that intrastate rates shall be such as not to constitute undue preference or advantage as between localities in intrastate commerce where one locality is more remote from the point of consumption than another. It has not required that intrastate rates shall be such as not to constitute undue preference or advantage as between localities in intrastate commerce where one locality is more remote from the point of shipment than another. It has not required that intrastate rates shall be such as not to constitute undue preference or advantage as between localities in intrastate commerce where one locality is more remote from the point of destination than another. It must be admitted that we have had considerable more weather since the shake-up in the department.

The recklessness of a reckless auto driver isn't nearly so reckless until he has taken on a cargo of booze, in which condition he becomes about the most dangerous animal at large.

Most people will continue to occupy seats in the grand stand when the flying game is on, until the rules of the game are so amended that the spectator will be provided with a soft place to light or a means of lighting softly.

The man who "discovered" the "cure" for tuberculosis, insisted, he says, when he sold the "cure" that there should be "free treatment for those who cannot afford to pay." He may or may not have known just what that means and he may have been attempting to let himself down without too much of a jolt. Who cannot afford to be cured? And who is to judge and determine when one is in that class.

The state's legal department rules that the law passed by the last legislature increasing the compensation of certain county officials, is unconstitutional. One point on which it is held to be "bad" is that the title of the act does not express the true subject. The title conveys the impression that the act is one "to establish a uniform tax on certain classes of personal property." The title is certainly not enlightening, it is not actually misleading as to the subject.

The law passed by the last legislature, prohibiting the shipment a longer distance than sixty miles of cream that has not been pasteurized, in bringing on a merry war. The little scrap is not unexpected, for the probable effect of the law, if not held unconstitutional, will be to put the centralizers, the big city creameries, out of business. That is no doubt the effect the members of the legislature intended the law should have. The centralizers contend that the prohibition amounts to a discrimination against them and that the law is unconstitutional as for that reason. At first thought that looks like the logical conclusion, but the law is to be defended on the ground that it is a public health measure. It is a known fact that the product of the big city creameries is not so good as that of the local creamery, because the raw material is not received in such good condition, but whether or not the public health is endangered because of this fact, is an interesting point for the supreme court to decide.

CO-ADJUTORS' REMARKS.

Red Wing Republican: A nice point of law may be raised if the governor should call an extra session of the legislature. The session recently closed re-districted the state completely and increased the number of senators from 63 to 67 and the members of the house from 129 to 130. Some constitutional lawyer will hold that it would be illegal to hold a legislative session until after the election of the house and senate in accordance with the 1913 reapportionment.

Beach Center Herald: On and after Jan. 1, 1914, the nine-foot sheet will be due an all hotel hole in Minnesota. But a zip down the center of the sheet won't be any more comforting to the guest then is a rent in a shorter one.

Elk River Star-News: The state supreme court has handed down an opinion which sustains the legality of the distance tariff law passed by the last legislature. It says that the common law imposes upon all common carriers that they charge the same shipment rates to all persons shipping the same class of material the same distance.

Wadena Pioneer Journal: Northern Pacific officials are developing what is termed a "sunny disposition" for the benefit of the passengers. Sept. Brown is quoted by the Aitkin Age as saying that the people of that city may rest assured that the new depot will certainly be built. "The matter may drag along for some time on account of other improvements and completion plans of the company," said he, "but the new depot will be built." This is almost the same song Supt. Sovereign's assurances that Wadena's new depot would be built "just as soon as spring opened." Mr. Sovereign neglected to state which spring he meant.

Cass Lake Times: A young man from the southern end of the county was a caller yesterday and related his experience in "Bunny Affairs" during May and the first days of June. The man seemed to be satisfied with "letting well enough alone" and when he had looked over the opportunities and all the disadvantages that the country possesses and found them not equal to the same in Minnesota. He says that the cost of living there is inordinately high, that a common laborer must pay at least $2.00 a week for such board as can be purchased here for four dollars, that every thing that a settler needs to begin life, is so high that it is almost prohibitive. He says, that thousands are returning, satisfied to remain on the old farm where a good living is secure, and that the general attitude of the settlers there, especially those from the United States, is to secure title to a large tract if and and sell out to the first green Englishman who will pay a fair price.

Morris Sun: The combination of home and automobile is a dangerous thing, and the accident which occurred at Red Wing last week, in which a woman was run down and killed by three young men who had been drinking heavily, shows that a heavy penalty should be provided where reckless driving results from such indulgence.

Political Economy.—"What's the wrangle about in Plunkville?"

"Some of the community want to maintain a roadless and swell their private fortunes by hauling automobiles out. Others want to improve the highways, pinch 'em for speeding and apply the proceeds to public works of all kinds."—Kansas City Journal.

PLUMMER

J. L. Painter and A. W. Johnson, of Mound, Minn., arrived here the first of the week and will erect a new dwelling and other buildings for Ang. Giwiewe, on his farm north of town.

O. J. Johnson arrived here Friday morning of last week from his new home near Wharranton, Alta., Canada, and will spend the next two or three weeks here on matters of business.

Mrs. G. A. Krueger arrived here Tuesday evening of last week for a few days visit with her sister, Mrs. S. J. Rice. Mr. Krueger passed through here that evening enroute to a point below Alexandria, where he has been assigned a lucrative position with the Soo line.

Word was received here yesterday of the death of Ole Askeland, formerly of Malone P. O., which occurred some time Wednesday. Mr. Askeland was returning from International Falls to Little Fork, where he was working for the Magnus-Griffith dredging company, and while waiting along the crank he was struck by a train, dying shortly from his injuries. The deceased was about a short time ago to take up his work on a dredge at the latter place, and the news of his sad fate came as a shock to his friends here. He has a brother at present living near Malone —Pioneer.

ST. HILAIRE

Mrs. Marts was called to her had the first part of the week, having had the misfortune to sprain her ankle.

A crew of carpenters arrived last week commenced to take down the mill and expect to have it all down this week. It will be shipped to Larimore, N. D., where Mr. Friker intends to locate.

The Peerless car belonging to C. C. Elliott, which he drove up from Minneapolis this week, is the last word in speed and style, commanding having all the latest improvements, including electric lights, starter, etc. The car is an exact copy of the Peerless and costs in the neighborhood of $6,000.00 and is considered one of the finest cars in the state.

Another victory was added to the already acquired long list (?) of the local ball team, on Wednesday, when they trimmed the bunch from Brooks to the tune of 7 to 22 (in favor of Brooks).

Mr. D. Patterson, accompanied by Miss Mabel and the younger children, autoed to Maple Lake Saturday to bring out Mrs. Patterson for their occupancy during the summer season. The rest of the family followed Monday.

Ferdinand Hall returned from Bagley Tuesday morning, surprising his friends by bringing with him a bride, formerly Miss Amelia Duddy of Clearwater, Minn. The bride is a returning old time resident and popular lady, having gained a host of friends wherever she has been located. She is taught in this district the past two years. The young couple will begin housekeeping at once. Mr. Hall having purchased a residence on Water street.—Spectator.

Milk Regularly.

While the utilities of the barn work may be adjusted to your convenience, strict regularity should be observed in milking. Be as certain as possible the pace of the cow's system, secured when she was in full flow. If feeding or milking is delayed, the absorption of milk is interrupted and the flow restrained. So, in order to get a full yield for a long time, everything must be done with the strictest regularity. The milking should be done in such a way that a cow will receive the largest possible satisfaction from the semi-daily event.—Professor T. L. Haecker, Dairy and Animal Husbandman, University Farm, St. Paul.

"Uncetus, no, dear! That's mucilage."

"Oh!" said Freddy. Then, after a pause, "Maybe that's why I gummed my hat off."—Metropolitan Magazine.

SYNOPSIS

Bill Corcoran, the lawyer hired by Mr. Saunders, Rose, who had passed up Mrs. Pendleton Bayne's ball at San Francisco to accompany her father across at Antelope, Nevada, to get a divorce, is shocked to hear a telegram that he is engaged is refused. The determined old lady refuses to recognize her daughter-in-law. Dominick had been trapped into a marriage with Rose by her father, who had threatened several actions his senior. She suspects the money, they have frequent quarrels, and he stays away. Cameron and Rose quarrel, are reconciled at Antelope. Dominick, Rose and Cameron meet at Reno under a strict condition and agreement to keep hotel. Antelope is cut off by storm. Rose Cameron meets Dominick here. Rose and Dominick embrace; father sees them and demands an explanation; Rose and brother flee in their automobile; a gust, Dominick's car overturns. Rose and Cameron, separately, for Dominick. Rose's quarrels in talk with Rose. Dominick and Rose meet at Reno; Rose tells him she has been unfaithful to him. Cameron offers Harry $500, on which she refuses; Harry tells Rose wants Dominick for Rose. Rose wins the divorce.

It was, however, her husband's voice that answered her. He spoke quickly, as if in a hurry, telling her that he would not be home to dinner, as a college friend of his from New York had just arrived and he would like to and go to the theater with him that evening. Harry's car, ready to discover, in the most silken subjects, mattered hearing on her husband's interest in Rose Cannon. listened intently for the man's name. As Dominick did not give it she asked for it, and in her strained and waiting attention it seemed to come with an incredible indistinctness.

"What is his name?" she called again, her voice hard and high. "I didn't catch it."

It was repeated and for the second time she did not hear it. Before she could demand it once more, Dominick's "Goodby" hummed along the wire and the connection was cut.

She did not want any more lunch and went into the parlor, where she found the same subdued whisper sent and looked out on the reposeful transparencies of the fog. She had awaked with the sense of weight and apprehension heavy on her. As she dressed she had thought of the interview of yesterday with anger and also with something so much like fear as she was capable of feeling. She recalled the folly of the rage she had shown, the folly and the futility of it, and she realized the danger of an open declaration of war with the fierce and unscrupulous old man who was her adversary. This, with her customary bold courage, she now tried to push from her mind. After all, he couldn't kill her, and that was about the only way he could get rid of her. Even Bill Cannon would hardly stand, in the present day in San Francisco, cold-bloodedly to murder a woman. The thought caused a slight, sarcastic smile to touch her lips. Fortunately for her, the ladies days of California were passed.

With the curtains caught between her finger-tips, her figure bent forward and motionless, she looked out into the street on the area way something there of absorbing interest. But she saw nothing. All her mental activity was bent on the problem of Dominick's telephone message. She did not believe it. She was in that state where trifles light as air will point one way, and to have Dominick stay out to dinner with a sudden sad unexpected friend from New York" was more than a trifle. She assured herself with slow cold calculation that he was dining with Rose Cannon in the big house on California Street. If they walked about the Sunday morning, why shouldn't they dine together on week day nights? They were careful of appearances and they would never let themselves be seen together in any public place till they were formally escaped. The fog from New York was a fiction. She—that immaculate, perfect girl—had invented him. Dominick could not lower anything. He was not that kind of a man. But Rose had known that all women are not of the occasion demanded, and Rose Cannon could thus supply her lover's decided.

With her blankly staring eyes fixed on the swirling opaque world, her mental vision conjured up a picture of them at dinner that night, sitting opposite each other at a table glistening with the richest of glass and silver, with subdued candles waited on noiselessly upon them. Bill Cannon was not in the picture, and though his sardonic face could be seen, pushing him out of the room, it was not necessary to the uninteresting region where people who were not lovers dined dully by themselves. She could see Virginia Rose and Dominick otherwise than alone, exchanging sentiments over the lowest form of champagne glasses filled with the choicest brand of Champagne.

A sound escaped her, a sound of pain, as if forced from her by the grinding of jealous passions within. She dropped the curtain and rose to her feet. If they married it would be always that way with them. They would have everything in the world, everything that to Berny made life worth while. Rose Paris, with her three hundred thousand dollars to open all the doors would be a sevenfold more precious than the Rose and Dominick were to be left to the enjoyment of all the pleasures and luxuries of life back in California.

Unable to rest, tested by jealousy, tormented by her longing for the offered money, oppressed by uneasiness as to Cannon's next move, the thought of the long afternoon in the house was unendurable to her. She could not remain unemployed and passive while her mind was in this state of distress. Though the day was bad and there was nothing to do down town she determined to go out. She might find some distraction in watching the passers-by and looking at the shop windows.

By the time she was dressed, it was four o'clock. The fog was thicker and more penetrating than in the morning. It was heavy with moisture. The sidewalks were slippery with it, and she realized the danger of an open declaration of war with the fierce and unscrupulous old man who was her adversary. This, with her customary bold courage, she now tried to push from her mind. After all, he slanted to a laval and then climbed a long, dim reach of hill beyond. Its emptiness—a characteristic of San Francisco streets—struck upon her nervousness, with a sense of grim, bleak dreariness. She could look along the two lines of sidewalk till they were lost in the gradual milky thickening of the fog, and at intervals see a figure not more distinct than a ther emerging from space into a shape approach, or melting into it in phantasmal withdrawal.

It was a melancholy, depressing view. She had not reached the top of the long hill before she decided that she would walk no farther. Walking was only bearable when there was something to see. But she did not know what else to do or where to go. Indecision was not usually a feature of her character. To-day, however, the unaccustomed strain of temptation and worry seemed to have weakened her resourcefulness and resolution. The one point on which she felt determined was that she would not go home.

The advancing front of a car, looming suddenly through the mist, decided her. She halted it, climbed on board, and sen- into a seat on the inside. There was no one else there. In front of Sanpone, of wet woolens and rubber overshoes, and its closed windows, dimed with fog, a weak, semicircular streaks across them were clearances had rubbed them clean to look out. The conductor, an unkempt man, with an unshaven chin and dirty collar, slouched in for her fare, extending a grimy paw toward it as he took the money and punched the tag, he hummed a tune to himself, seeming to convey in the harmless act a slighting opinion of his passenger. Berny looked at him severely, which made him hum still louder, and lounge indifferently out to the platform, where he leaned on the brake and spat scornfully into the street.

Berny felt that sitting there was worse than walking. There was no one to look at, there was nothing to be seen from the windows. The car was filling with the odor of an inclosed, old wet an even, skimming swiftness that was not in the least exhilarating. The motion had excluded him, pushing him out of the moment of his decision, and uninteresting region where people who were not lovers dined dully by themselves. She could not imagine Rose and Dominick otherwise than alone, exchanging sentiments over the lowest form of champagne glasses filled with the choicest brand of Champagne.

A sound escaped her, a sound of pain, as if forced from her by the grinding of jealous passions within. She dropped the curtain and rose to her feet. "How About Sunday morning on Telegraph Hill?" she said.

"If did meet him there, that's true," —a memory of the conversation suggested the young girl's sense of guilt. If half the woman said was madness, half was fact. Dominick loved Rose Cannon, not his wife, and to Rose that was the whole tragedy. Meetings, words, reminiscences were nothing. She stammered in her misery.

"Yes—but—but—you must believe me when I tell you that that time was once before—one evening in the moonlight on the steps of our house—it was the only times I've seen your husband since I came back from Antelope."

"Well, I don't," said Berny, "I don't for a moment believe you. You must take me for the easiest fruit that ever grew on a tree if you think I'll swallow a fairy tale like that. If you met once on Telegraph Hill, and once in the moonlight, what's to prevent your meeting at other times, and other places? You haven't mentioned the visits up at your house and the dinner to-night."

Rose drew back, frowning uncomprehendingly.

"What dinner to-night?" she said. "The one you're going to take with my husband?"

For the first time in the interview, the young girl was lifted from the recess of dishonesty that crushed her by a rising flood of angry pride.

"I take dinner with my father to-night at my house on California Street," she said coldly.

"Hoah!" said Berny, giving her head a fellow jerk. "Then I'm mighty wasting time on lies like that to me. I'm not a simp, Rose Cannon."

"Mrs. Ryan," said Rose, "I think you are mad and talk wild. We can't have any rational conversation when you keep telling me what I say is a lie. I've been feel so badly, and I wish I could say something to you that you'd believe. All I can do to ease your mind is to assure you that I have, except on those two occasions, have seen your husband since his return from the country and I certainly never intend to see him again."

She rose from the bench and, as she did so, Berny cried:

"Then how do you account for the answer that was offered me yesterday?"

"Money?" said the young girl, paling as she stood. "What money?"

"I don't believe it. It's not true."

Berny laughed again.

"Well, that's only fair," she said with an air of dramatic large-mindedness. "I've been telling you what you say is lies and now you tell me what I say is lies. It's not, and you know it's not. How would I have found out about all this? Do you think Dominick told me? He's not that sort of when they want to get rid of them. They're stupid, but they're not that stupid."

Rose gave a low exclamation and turned her head away. Berny was waiting for a second denial of her statements, when the young girl rose to her feet, saying in a horrified murmur:

"How awful! How perfectly awful!"

"Of course," Berny continued, addressing her back, "I was to understand you didn't know anything about it. I had my own opinions on that. Fathers don't go around buying husbands for their daughters unless they know their daughters are dead set on having the husbands. Bill Cannon was not trying to get Dominick away from me just because he wanted to be philanthropic. Neither was Mrs. Ryan. You're the kind of wife she wanted for her boy, just as Dominick is the husband you picked out for you. So you stood back and let the old people do the dirty work. You—"

Rose turned quickly, sat down on the edge of the bench, and leaned toward the speaker. Her face was of a quivering pallor, full of concern.

"Oh poor, unfortunate woman!" she said in a shaken voice, and laid her hand on Berny's knee.

Berny was so astonished that for a moment she had no words, but stared speechlessly at this alarmingly solicitous face.

"Oh poor cecil!" Rose went on. "If I'd known or guessed for a moment I'd have spoken differently. I can't say anything. I didn't know. I couldn't have guessed. It's the most horrible thing I ever heard of. It's too—too—"

She stopped, biting her lip. Berny saw that she was trying to recommand her voice, though she had no appearance of tears. Her face looked quite different from what it had at the beginning of the interview. All its arrogance, its self-assurance was gone. The older woman was too astonished to say anything. She felt a feeling that was like an illumination of hatred shining through a mist. She knew it didn't think it necessary to tell me everything that happened up there, Miss Cannon."

Rose turned half from her without answering. It was almost like the air of a child which shrinks from the anger of unjust punishment. Berny leaned forward that at night still see her and want on.

"I couldn't tell me all that happened up at Antelope. There are some things that a man doesn't have done for him to tell me a men doesn't tell his wife about the affairs have other women. But sometimes, Miss Cannon, she finds them out."

Rose turned suddenly upon her.

"Mrs. Ryan," she said in a cold, determined voice, "what do you want to say to me? You stopped me just now to say something. Whatever it is, say it and end it."

Berny's rages inwardly worked themselves up over the same level. With bottle boiling within her, she could preserve on the surface only a specious, outward calm. Then out deals, at some slight provocation, some touch or light as the presence on the electric button that sets off the dynamite explosion, the bonds of her wrath were broken and it burst into expression. Now the control restrained was torn into shreds, and she cried, her voice quavering with passion, shaken with breathlessness:

"What do you suppose I want to say? I want to tell you what right you've got to try to steal my husband?"

"I have no right," said Rose.

Berny was, for the moment, so taken aback, that she said nothing but stared with her whole face set in a rigidity of fierce surprising. After a moment's quivering amaze she burst out:

"Then what are you doing it for?"

"I am not doing it."

"You're a liar," she cried furiously. "You've worse than a liar. You're a thief. You're trying to get him every way you know how. You sit there looking at me with your face a little innocent, and you know there's not a thing you can do to get him away from me you're not doing. If a common gutter girl had acted that way I'd just have seen through dirty names, names that would make you sit up in the trolley car they would use them to you. But I don't see where there's any difference. You think because you're a lady and on top of the heap that you can do anything. I'm not going to tell you, Rose Cannon, you can't steal Dominick Ryan from me. You and his father and his daughter, with all the mines of the Comstock behind you, but you can't buy my husband."

Rose was aghast. The words of Berny's passion, nothing to her in sound and fury, the madness of a jealous woman, flew over her head, leaving wife fighting for the husband whose heart she had lost was all she understood and heard. That was the tragic, the appalling thought. The weight of her own guilty conscience seemed dragging her down into sickening silence. She could find nothing to say. "Mrs. Ryan," she implored, "whatever else you may think, do please understand that I am not trying to take your husband away from you. You're making a mistake. I don't know what you've heard or guessed, but you're distracting yourself without any necessity. How could I ever do that? I never meet him. I never see him."

She leaned forward in her eager need. Berny could a thing, sidelong look at her.

Committee Raising $100,000 for Recitation Hall and Professorship at Schenectady Institution May 17 When He Graduated.

Schenectady, N. Y.—Plans are rapidly being perfected at Union college for the establishment of an elaborate memorial in honor of John Bigelow, the author and diplomat, whose long life of service ended in New York on December 19, 1911. John Bigelow was a Union man of the class of 1838, and was for many years the oldest living alumnus of the college. The memorial is to take the form of a recitation hall which will bear Mr. Bigelow's name and a professorship of political science, and for these two purposes at least $100,000 must be raised. A committee, of which Joseph H. Choate is chairman, has dedicated itself to the raising of the money, and the brochure calling for subscriptions will soon be sent out.

"It is felt," says this committee, "that the most fitting memorial would be a building erected on the campus of his Alma Mater at Schenectady, N. Y., with lecture halls and rooms devoted to the studies he loved, history, political science and law. The establishment there in of a John Bigelow professorship of political science. The building would be named the 'John Bigelow Memorial Hall,' and would stand on the main avenue of the college grounds entered through the gateway erected to the memory of John Howard Payne, author of 'Home, Sweet Home,' also a member of the class of 1810 at Union college.

"The service of John Bigelow to his country and to mankind in the Civil war should always be gratefully remembered. His writings, his self-reliance, his fellow-graduates of Union college, were managing brilliantly the efforts for the enactment of the law of Hon. Bigelow, as minister to France, was successful in the enactment of that enabling law of effort in the service of his fellow-men.

"He held a place in the esteem and affection of his countrymen held by no other man, and when he died at the age of ninety-four his right to the title of 'The First Citizen of New York' was not questioned. We feel confident that this plan will be received by many as a welcome opportunity to serve at once the double purpose of stimulating the spirit of patriotism and of doing honor to the memory of one whose name should be held among us in grateful remembrance. In the last few years of his life Mr. Bigelow was cared with peculiar affection to his old college, and a memorial serving such a useful purpose in the dating of young men citizenship is one which by would warmly approve."

Contributions may be sent to the treasurer of the committee, Gerald Garrison Villard of the New York Evening Post. Other members of the committee are Justice Charles E. Hughes, J. Pierpont Morgan, Henry Fairfield Osborn, George A. Plimpton, Elphalet Nott Potter, Andrew Carnegie, Silha Bigelow, John Calvendaler, Joseph H. Randell, and President Richmond of Union.

FANS

Motto: May the best team win; But ours is the best.

(Copyright, 1914, by W. G. Chapman)

"Wow! Wow!! Great eye, Eddie! Make him put it across! Best o' fences! You can do it! Wow! Wow!! Wow!!! ROBBER! All right. Tough luck, Eddie. Two and two. Make her be over. Home run, Eddie, old scout, break the gate. Wow! Wow!! Wo——"

The redfaced, apoplectic young man in the front row made a trumpet of his hands and yelled until the veins in his neck turned purple. In the middle of the final "Wow" he collapsed, looked disgusted and turning to me said:

"What do they keep that brute of chasers for? He can't hit. Never could. Striking out in a pinch like that!"

The fine, howling encouragement or bawling abuse of the ball players is the spirit of the town. Just how great an influence this spirit exerts upon the players strongly at the team representing the town or city is impossible of calculation, but it is certain that it is part of the national game. He and his fellows exert almost as much influence upon the team as does luck, and this spirit is so inextricably mixed with the element of luck that it is impossible to determine cause and effect. There are fellows in which the loyalty of the fans has waned and turned to gibes, and in these cities no player does well. There are crowds that remain loyal in victory and in defeat. There are spire the players to give their best efforts to win. Ball players will tell you that teams inveriably play better with friendly crowds applaudior. We fan invariably will respond that he would be loyal provided the club would win games enough to justify loyalty. The players accuse the fans, the fans accuse the players, and both are in a measure right. The stability of patrons will "root" when the home team is winning. Any team will play better ball and win oftener if the patrons are loyal. The fan, realizing the spirit of the town, is a power for victory or defeat.

Conditions in different cities comprising the circuits of the major leagues assert a powerful influence over their teams. Players will tell you they would rather play for the Chicago White Sox or for the New York Giants than for any other teams. They will assert that twenty Cubs could not win a pennant for Cincinnati under conditions which the management is now striving to change. The fanatical loyalty of the Chicago White Sox rooter and the Giant patron, the angry abuse of players by the annually disappointed Cincinnati public, the sarcasm and raillery of Washington crowds, trained for years to expect nothing but defeat, have an immense effect upon the players and teams. They make or mar players, and weak men who for one type while brilliant once fail and lose for the other.

The baseball fan is so unique American species and the most rabid of all enthusiasts. Compared with him the golf fan, the bridge fan, even the bowling fan are mild. Baseball is the most serious pleasure ever invented.

Probably the most blindly loyal crowd in the world is that which follows the fortunes of the Chicago National league team, and to one who is disinterested the Chicago attitude is acutely funny. The White Sox park is located on the south side of the city; the Cubs' on the west, and the city is divided into two great armed camps. In 1906 when these two teams, winners of the championships in their own leagues, met to contest for the world's championship, it was the loyalty of the south side crowd beyond doubt that won for the team. The fall the Chicago Tribune's composing room was about equally divided between the followers of the two teams and so bitter was the feeling that its foreman was compelled to separate them and send them to different ends of the room to maintain peace. It was civil war all over Chicago.

It is a magnificent crowd, wonderful in its spirit and in its intense loyalty. There are few things that shake an opponent like the incessant: "Get a hit," "Get a hit," which is the war song of the Sox rooters when they need victory.

One of the most dramatic displays of loyalty I ever saw was in 1907, when the team, beaten and displaced from the championship, came home to close the season. They had gone away to high hopes, and failed. It was Sunday, and as the defeated team marched down the field 17,000 man and women stood silent and uncovered for a moment, then broke into applause that swept the stands. It is small wonder that a team heckled always by such loyalty won even during years when it seemed much the best in baseball.

I have heard opposing players declare they would rather face anything in the game than the grinding "rooting" of the Chicago south side fans. The only duplicate I know is the rasping, nerve-racking, long Yale yell.

Not all players can frank enough to admit that the rooting has any effect. Indeed it is a common pose to pretend that they do not even hear. But they do. Even among themselves they pretend they do not care; but once in a while they tell their inner thoughts. They know that the men who quit the major leagues are those cut by the fans. The men who have seen men break and go all to pieces, rave and swear and abuse everyone after making a boob play by a crowd.

Walter Wilmot, one of Anson's famous old Chicago players, came to a ball game on the south side recently after retiring. He looked across toward the left field and said:

"There's some of them out there now I'd like to choke."

But the roar of the crowd does not break them os quickly as does some sharp thrust of sarcasm or biting invective in individual. Perhaps that shot is only the last straw, but when a player is in a losing streak collapse usually rages at some individual who said something to him. Josh Reiffy, one of the merriest, happiest players ever on the knew, "likes" no one and had to be restrained from assaulting three or four thousand men in the bleachers.

"Did you hear what he said?" demanded Reiffy as the other players tried to restrain him.

"What did he say?" inquired someone.

"He said: 'Reiffy, you're a disgrace to the league,' and then he said it again.

One of the quickest things I ever heard was o remark from o Washington fan which upset Frank Isbell, a veteran, completely. Isbell's head is as bald as a concrete pavement, and usually he kept the cap pulled tightly on his head to shield himself from the glare of the sun. But after he tried to steal second and made a desperate, diving slide around and under the baseman and was safe on it. He was so enraged that he ran after the umpire, assigned him, argued and raved and finally in sheer desperation jerked off his cap, hurled it onto the ground and jumped upon it. His bald head glistened in the sunlight and the crowd roared. Then above the roar came a voice:

"Put on that cap. They pinched Mary Garden here for less than that."

Possibly some trying fans are concerted rooting is the incessant negging to which players on the Polo grounds, New York, are subjected. The one great bit of rejoicing among the National league players last year was when they saw a baseful New York stadium was that the crowd could not utter insulting words on the field as it did in the old stands. The Polo grounds crowd is odd. Somehow those who occupy the seats either are not as rabid as those in the cheaper seats or they are on their good behavior, and a fringe of box seats is often exempt from abuse. The players Strangely enough the crowds on the Polo grounds, the league park, although quite as noisy, are less rabid than the crowds at the Polo grounds.

One would think that visiting players would like to play on grounds where the home team is unpopular through defeat or other causes, but they do not. They rather resent the home crowd abusing the home men. In Cincinnati, Brooklyn and Washington, during most of the season, the crowds are bitterly sarcastic toward the home teams, although the Brooklyn crowds are decent except on Saturdays. St. Louis affords a queer study of the crowds. When the Browns are at home the crowds are ugly and vent their temper upon the players, yet half a dozen blocks away, on the rival park, there assembles a crowd wilder and more frantically in favor of the home team and more unreasoning in partisanship than almost any in the country. Just where this feeling arises is hard to discover. The crowd is violent in temper when the team is winning, worse when it is losing. Perhaps long years of bitter defeat have caused it.

In Boston and Philadelphia, on both major league parks, the home players and visitors are almost upon equal terms, and the spectators applaud good plays irrespective of the players. They see baseball under the best conditions, with both teams encouraged and giving their best efforts to the work. Pittsburgh is bad because of a gambling that has become almost part of the game in the Smoky City. The temper of the crowd is ugly and the losing element is in evidence no matter whether the home club wins or loses. Detroit is a loyal, rabidly violent crowd, tamed now because the fans have learned to endure victory as well as defeat. The crowds were mad with enthusiasm when Cobb and Crawford won and have since tamed down

"They Pinched Mary Garden for Less Than That."

One of the queer things in that city is the halting of George Mullin, the pitching baseman. Mullin is a lefty, quick-witted joker and years ago he began talking back to the bleachers. He was warned that the bleacherites would put him out of the business, but persisted. They effected to do so, would walk down in front of the bleachers and engage in the fiercest skirmish with the crowd, trying to hold its own at rough repartee with hundreds. He shmsed the crowd, laughed at them, accused them of "quitting" and enjoyed it. He did not taken it seriously the result might have been different, but after a time it became part of the game and now quite apparently the bleachers would not be satisfied if Mullin forgot to start a skirmish. Last summer, going out on a car in Detroit, the young fellows were talking.

"Oh, I've got a peach of a pet-bock at him today," said one, and, at the surest request of the others he drew a card and read what he was going to say to Mullin if he came near their seats.

It is not the great crowds that attend the crucial games that exert the strongest influence over players. True there is a natural nervousness among all the players when a tremendous throng gathers to see them, as in world's series games; but the cries that help the home team, or damage it, are the crowd of from six to ten thousand, stirred pp by the "regulars" who, day after day and season after season, locate those around them. There are thousands of these regulars, self-appointed claques or cheer masters, and some of them feel as if they are doing as much to help the team in victory as if they were out there on the mound pitching. The large crowds usually are the fairest and most sportsmanlike, for in these great gatherings the rabid and partisan fan is lost and his utterances are smothered. Those crowds police themselves and the players feel safe and assured of fair play, and, after the first nervousness passes, they play their best.

A baseball crowd is much like a mob. Without a leader it is just noisy and turmoil, but with one recognized leader it can do much. A few years ago a number of Chicago men attempted to carry out a theory that the trained needed leader and the result was one of the most dangerous exhibitions ever attempted. The White Sox rooters organized, a band of men of above average intelligence, who laid daily plans for encouraging and stirring up enthusiasm. The Board of Trade Rooters operated at both Chicago parks, being organized primarily to attack Hickman and the Giants. They wrote and circulated songs, invented ingenious methods of attracting a world's fair, and to force undeserved victory upon the home teams. The idea spread rapidly. "Rooters clubs" were organized in other cities and it was to help the home teams. For a few weeks it looked as if the new movement would seriously endanger the national game. The crowds grew more and more violent. Then, suddenly and without warning almost, the wildest efforts of the chief masters fell flat—in Chicago at least. The harder the leaders of the rooters worked the more apathetic the crowds became. It was an interesting phenomenon and I set out to discover the reason. The first bleacherite I met solved the problem.

"Dum guys ain't on es square," he said. "Uvens out in de bleachers don't want to rob nobody."

There was the solution. No matter how partisan a baseball fan may become, or how his feelings may run, if the home team win, deep down he wants fair play, and, after a time, he will insist upon it. The rooter class died.

There are few of the noted fans now, chiefly because the papers seldom mention them. Perhaps they exist. In the old days almost every club had one or two such followers. Probably the best known was "Pittsburgh Phil." This was Gerorge Dilwell, of Boston, who for many years followed the fortunes of the Jomeus old Boston club. He is wealthy, intellectual and a cultured gentleman who became completely absorbed in baseball. His fellow-fans knew him wherever he went and became a familiar figure all over the country. He occupied a fixed seat in the stands, kept a careful score and studied the game with a concentration that was marvelous. He maintained a deep silence during almost all the game, but when a really great play was made he emitted two sharp staccato barks: "Hit! Hit!" and then dropped to silence again.

HAS STEPLESS CARS

Will Save Gothamites 125,000 Miles a Year in Steps.

Governor of New York Expected to Sign Bill Doing Away With the Ancient Type—Old Horse Cars Are Doomed.

New York.—By the introduction of a new style of street car the New York Railways company is about to save the good people of this city an annual climb from the level of the street of 125,000 miles a year, and a descent to the street of exactly the same length. It has come about through its engineers recognizing that it was ridiculous to make their passengers continue every time they boarded a street car to climb always all the machinery and that a little, ingenuity would enable them to design a car with practically no climbing at all.

Once the figures are given anyone can verify this calculation for himself. In the year ended June 30, 1913, the New York Railways company and its predecessor, the Metropolitan Street Railway company, carried just under $564,000,000 passengers. The average height of the step of the so-called stepless car from the street is ten inches and the height of the elevated car, which it is to replace, is about 40 inches. Consequently there is a saving of 30 inches every time a passenger gets on or off the car, and this works out at 125,000 miles a year for the entire system.

The double-decked, stepless car, which bears so strong a family resemblance to the other new style of car, will continue, however, for some time alone in its glory.

It was only after considering carefully the many different brands of stepless cars in other cities that the New York Railways company evolved the side-door, stepless, prepayment car. Montreal, for example, has a side-door, prepayment car, and Philadelphia another. It is the "narrow car." The latter was inspired by the desire to provide room for more passengers and to allow them to enter and leave at such a point that they would encounter as little as possible of the mud of the street.

While the change in street cars is being installed in New York, the oldest to about to be abandoned. New York has a strong dislike to steps, and the only one of the big cities to retain horse cars. In some instances this was necessary because of congested traffic, but new subways have relieved this to an extent that electric power now is practical.

Governor Sulzer now has under consideration a bill requiring all street railroads to abolish all steps, and ordering horse cars after January 1 next. There seems no reason why the legislature, and if accepted by the governor, will affect also those in Manhattan, but even without this legislation it is probable that in a few years all of the old horse cars will have been driven to the barns never to run again.

When the public service commission took office on July 1, 1907, there were 16 horse-car lines in operation. Of these four have been abandoned and the cars sold for other lines, replaced by storage battery cars. The six cheapest lines in the Avenue A line, from the Desbrosses street ferry to the Ninety-first street ferry; Avenue C line, from the Bleecker street line, from Bleecker street and Broadway to Houston street and Fifth avenue; the Chambers street line, from Chambers street ferry to Grand street ferry; Metropolitan cross-town line, from the Desbrosses street ferry to Fifth street ferry; the Seventeenth, and Eighteenth streets line, from Broadway to Twenty-third street ferry, and the Sixth avenue-Desbrosses street ferry line, from Sixth avenue and Third street to the Desbrosses street ferry.

JUDGE AND JURY IN CLASH

Jurist Orders Verdict of Acquittal, but Jurors Deliberate, and Refuse to Sign.

Memphis, Tenn.—Judge and jury clashed to the second division of the criminal court here, and as a result, a verdict acquitting a man of a murder charge stands as part of the court's record without the signature of the jurors.

C. E. Harrell, railroad fireman, was charged with having murdered Moss Todd. Yesterday Judge Fontaine Maury ruled that the evidence showed self-defense, and directed a verdict of not guilty.

After consultation with members of the jury, Foreman Cooney refused to sign the verdict. Judge Fontaine explained that he could permit no other verdict to stand, and the jurors signed.

"You have a right to your opinion," reiorted Cooney, still obdurate, "but you are not the keeper of my consciences."

Finally, however, the verdict was signed by the jurors under protest, to point to the extent of not affixing their signatures.

BITING FLY PROVES AN ALIBI

California Scientists Exonerate It as Paralytic Carrier After Experimenting.

Sacramento, Cal.—Sufficient evidence to exonerate the stable, or biting fly as a carrier of the infantile paralysis germ has not been established through the experiments which the California board of health has been conducting. Thus far the fly, which, Harvard and Rockefeller Institute scientists declare is an agent in transmitting the disease in human beings, has proved an alibi in the California tests. Two full sets of experiments have been carried out by Professors Hunt and Sawyer of the state university. The flies have been permitted to bite each of 17 monkeys during all stages of the incubation of the disease.

Apropos of the old adage that time is money, there is indeed, similarity between them in that, times flies.

Motorman Fails Downstairs in Hallway "Dressing Room"—Gets Damages of $125.

Chicago.—A new suit of clothes almost led to the death of Martin F. Berry, 707 South Forty-fourth court. Limping and holding the hand to his back, he appeared before Judge Martin.

Wishing to visit his mother in Iowa in the glory ascribed to Solomon, he first joined a "suit club." His drew a suit and went to the tailor shop.

Later he made a second visit to the shop to try on his new suit. The coat and the vest caused no difficulty. But he could see that they had the correct lines without inconvenience. But he wished to try on the trousers. There was not room enough in the executive department for such a performance, and the tailor showed Barry into a dark hallway to disrobe.

Barry had barry thrust his right foot into the right leg of his new trousers than he lost his balance. He fell down headfirst into the executive's and lay a bruised, crumpled heap on a hard cement floor, one foot in his new trousers and one in the old.

Fifty-six days passed before Barry could take to his work as a motorman, and his visit to the mother to Iowa was postponed. He sued the tailor back and his grievance until he appeared in court crawling $1,500 in damages from the tailor.

The jury returned a verdict award for Barry $125.

property as worth $7,195. This year Mr. Rockefeller is poorer by $2,000 than he was a year ago, his return of personal property being $4,245.

The figures show that John D. has nine horses worth $50 each, ten head of cattle worth $40 each, and furniture worth $3,500. His has no automobile here at this time of the year the assessments are made, so none is returned for taxation.

CITY GETS MODEL CHARTER.

Cleveland, O., Is to Abolish All Party Elections and Have Recall System.

Cleveland, O.—Non-partisan elections, with the absolute abolition of political parties, as far as municipal affairs are concerned, is secured to Cleveland in the terms of the new city charter, which has been completed. Experts declare the proposed charter is a model.

Nominations by petition instead of by primaries and the preferential system of voting in two cases are to be leadlor features of the new governmental system of the city.

It is aimed to simplify election machinery and give the greatest possible expression to the will of the voters, who cot only are to have their first choice for each office named, and their second and other choices as well.

The mayor and twenty-six members of the council are the only city officials who are to be elected under the new charter. All the others are appointive. Candidates for the elective positions are to certify their names to the board of elections and the board of elections and be placed upon a non-partisan ballot, carrying no party designations of any kind, and on which the names are to be rotated.

There are to be three columns in which cross marks indicating the will of the voter may be made. These will be headed: "First choice," "Second choice" and "other choices." Each voter may mark his first and second choice for each office, and then write designats as many 'other choices' on he sees fit. If no candidate for office receives a majority of the first choice votes, then the second choice votes are to be counted with the first choices. If he on has a majority of both first and second choices the "other choices" are to be added, and a majority be still reached in determining the victor.

The recall is to apply in all elective officials. The mayor may ha recalled upon the petition of 15,000 voters, and a councilman upon the petition of 500 of his voting constituents.

The mayor and councilman are elected for two-year terms.

The mayor is to have ha veto, but it is to be nullified to a large extent by the provision that any measure may be passed by the council over the veto by a majority vote.

Ordinances may be initiated by petitions which contain the names of 8,000 voters.

Election Loser Is Walking From Portland, Maine, to Portland, Oregon, in Payment.

Newburg, N. Y.—Paying an election bet, Benjamin H. Anderson, formerly general secretary of the chamber of commerce, and now secretary of the Rotlar Ad'men's club of Butler, Pa., is walking from Portland, Me., to Portland, Oregon, leading a donkey. He began his journey today.

Anderson is a strong admirer of Theodore Roosevelt, and was so certain that the colonel would be elected president that he made a wager with James Gillespie, a banker of Pittsburg, that Roosevelt would beat William Taft. The loser must walk from Portland, Ma., to Portland, Oregon, leading behind him the animal emblematic of the democratic party. The wager also includes the stipulation that the journey must be performed without the United States.

Anderson started from Portland, Me., March 4. He does not have to finish until March 4, 1914.

SOMETHING TO CAUSE LAUGH

Typographical Errors, Not Infrequent, Seldom Give Rise to Feeling of Maliciousness.

Typographical errors come only too frequently from even the best conducted newspaper presses. They are always humiliating, often a cause of anger, and occasionally dangerous, but now and then they are distinctly amusing. This latter quality they are most apt to have when they are made in the office of a journalistic neighbor, a fact that probably explains why we can read with smiling composure an elaborate editorial apology which appears in the Hartford Courant.

Its able political commentator tried the other day to say that "unfortunately for Connecticut," Ebenezer J. Hill is no longer a member of congress. Printer and proofreader combined to deprive the adverb of its negative particle. At least the able political commentator so declares, and we wouldn't question his veracity for a long age. A more astonishing error than this one crept into a book review of ours—a very solemn and scientific book. It consisted of the substitution of the word "carbion" for the word "carbon," in a paragraph dealing with the chemical composition of the stars. In that case the writer's fierce self-explanation is at least highly plausible, as it seems hardly possible that he wrote "carbion" when he intended to write "carbon," but even he was cautious enough to make no deep inquiry into the matter.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones, who spent the winter herewith the family of their daughter, Mrs. Carmody, left yesterday to return to their home in Woonsocket, South Dakota.

Joe. Pantier of Minneapolis is spending a vacation with relatives in the city. Mr. Pantier has a good position with the Dayton store, being in charge of the silk department.

Land seekers who have been here from South Dakota this week, state that the Red Lake county corn crop is fully as far advanced, if not farther advanced, than the crop in South Dakota.

The Rt. Rev. Bishop Corbett of Crookston, Rev. Fr. Dufeault of Crookston and Rev. Fr. Thellion of Gentilly were the guests of Rev. Fr. LeFloch at Terrebonne Tuesday.

Cecil Mikkelson, the former Red Lake Falls young man now living in Northfield, is a member of the 1913 class of Carleton college. He received his diploma last week.

Miss Rose Bolton returned Monday from Minneapolis, where she had been visiting with relatives for a month. On the way home she stopped at Fulton for a visit with her brother, Louis Philion.

The Misses Josephine and Margaret Kaus, Gertrude, Etta, Stella and Florence Hemsmuth, Maude Finsaas, Freda Ittner, Vina Fuller and Beatrice Kinard are enjoying a house party at the Hunt cottage at Maple lake this week.

Nap. Varin has now no doubt earned his distinction of being considered the dandiest sleighing man in the city. On a date, he went to the top of the city water works tank and took down the flag that was left there by the iron workers who put up the tank and tower.

Miss Cora Paul, who spent the winter in Big Falls, is at home and will spend the summer here. She was accompanied by her sister, Miss Eva Paul, both of the girls having been at Duluth for a visit with relatives.

The six months old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Moses Emard passed away Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Though thechild was seriously ill only a few days, it had never been very strong. The funeral was held at St. Joseph's church at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Fr. Beyea officiating, and interment was in the church cemetary east of the city.

Ed. Kolfenbain, the crook sheriff of the local bank ball team, has gone to North Dakota to play in two ball games with the Lankin team. The games are to be played at Inkster with the Inkster team. The first game was scheduled for this afternoon and the other for tomorrow afternoon. Kolfenbain played first base this afternoon and will pitch tomorrow.

Two young people from eastern Red Lake county were married in this city yesterday. The parties to the happy event were Miss Rosella Roese and Mr. Henry W. Glawen. The wedding took place at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon, at the court house, in the office of the judge of probate, Judge Joseph Paulault officiating. The young people were attended by Miss Charlotte Rinker and Mr. John Glawen.

HONOR T. A. CROMPE

Elected Delegate From the Ninth District to International C. O. F. Convention.

T. A. Crompe, who was in Winona last week as a delegate to the state convention of the Catholic Order of Foresters representing the local C. O. F. lodge, was honored by being elected delegate from the Ninth congressional district to the international convention to be held in Louisville, Kentucky, in August. There was a close contest between Mr. Crompe and a Morhead man for the honor, Mr. Crampo being elected by a majority of one vote.

The international convention will open in Louisville, August 12, and will continue in session one week. There will be delegates from all over the United States and Canada.

It is probable that an effort will be made to have Grand Forks chosen as the meeting place of the next international convention. It is probable that Canadian delegates and those from the northwest states will favor such action.

TRIMMED 'EM AGAIN

Locals Took Second Game From Crookston by Score of 11 to 4.

The ball game on the local grounde Sunday afteraoon, between the locals and a Crookston team, the second game of the season for the teams, resulted in a decided victory for the locals, though the visitors came with a stronger team than on the previous occasion.

Kolfenbain pitched a great game and had the visitors guessing all the time. Had it not been for some loose work he probably would have pitched a shut-out game Lagouraara had an off day and passed ng several drivea to the plate.

The locals are still playing with a percentage of 1000, not having lost a game this season.

Sisler, who did the throwing for Crookston, was hit quite freely.

Following is the score by innings:

R. L. Falls:	1	2	1	3	0	0	1	2	x	—11
Crookston	0	2	0	0	0	0	2	0	—	4

WHO'S SEEN APACHE?

Brilliant Prison Scribe May (?) Have Seen in Red Lake Falls.

The following from The Mirror, the bright little paper edited by the inmates of the state's prison at Stillwater, will be read with interest:

Are you reading the writings of Jim Blenkhorn in the Mirror? If not, you should start to do so at once. When Four-Double-One started in the place of "Apache," he stated he did not feel equal to the task. Ha is. Although he is in the penitentiary from Indian, ha is just about if not altogether as good. If he and "Apache" (their writings) were put in a sack and shaken up it would be a hard matter to tell which would come out first. It is to be hoped that the Mirror editor will exert his influences to keep the "Bluebird" warbling when it comes to writing from Red Lake Falls (?). Of course we want Apache back too.

HOME WATER SUPPLY.

Healthfulness, Convenience and Cheapness the Essentials.

Usually a plentiful supply of pure water is locating a well are convenience, cheapness of construction, and certainty of striking an abundant water supply. The well is therefore usually located near the house or the barn, and often for a few years subject to seepage or surface drainage from the barnyard or outbuildings, thus contaminating the water and making it dangerous to health. Water thus contaminated may cause typhoid fever or similar diseases, contaminate milk, butter, and vegetables used from the farm, and altogether directly and indirectly, cause great loss and suffering to the farmer and to the country at large.

Often these wells have clear, cold, sparkling water, and it is hard to make their owners believe that it cannot be safely used without first destroying the bacteria and removing the sources of contamination. If this cannot be done, it is necessary to dig a new well in some location free from such danger. This should always be the first consideration in the location of a well.

It my cost a little more to distribute the water, but it is money well spent. A pure water supply is one of the most valuable assets of a farm. The water should always be piped to the house, barn and garden. The saving of labor much more than repays the cost of such distribution.—A. F. Woods, Dean, Department of Agriculture, University Farm, St. Paul.

Closing Out Sale—From now on will sell all my millinery stock at cost and below cost. Hats, shapes, ribbons and all trimming material at cost. Up-to-date hats at from $1.00 to $2.00, "no more." All must be sold in a few weeks. Mrs. Wm. Zaiser.—Adv.

R. O. Kettleson has just completed the construction of a house and barn on his farm, southwest of town. Mr. Kettleson, who is a bachelor, says he is a small house. But it is big enough for one it is surely big enough for two and Mr. Kettleson no longer has any good excuse for continuing in the state of "single cussedness."

Have you ever seen a horse laboring under a load that a team ought to be hauling? You probably have, and you have felt sorry for the horse. A real driver feels just as sorry for a laboring motor.

Over-exertion is wearing.

Horses can't stand up under it. Men break down under it. Machinery goes to pieces.

Conservation means money in your pocket. Conservation in motor cars means power and plenty of it.

Buick Power

Is the boast of every Buick owner. A Buick can go anywhere any other car can and many places where others can't. The famous Buick overhead valve motor is guaranteed to have more power and more speed than any other type of motor on the market.

Buick Reliability

A Buick will always take you anywhere you want to go, and always bring you back.

Buick Durability

You can drive your Buick 150,000 miles and spend less for repairs than you would on some cars that have run less than 10,000 miles.

Buick Economy

You can get more mileage to a gallon of gasoline with a Buick than you can get with any other car ever made.

SCHOOL OFFICERS' MEETING JULY 16

STATE SUPT. C. G. SCHULTZ WILL DELIVER ONE OF THE ADDRESSES.

Wednesday, July 16, is the date definitely decided upon for the meeting of the school officers of Red Lake county. Supt. DePorre received a letter today from C. G. Schultz, state superintendent of public instruction, stating that he will be here to deliver an address at the meeting. There will be addresses by two or three other well-known educators. All school officers in the county should plan to attend this important meeting.

PORTER—SUPERNANT.

Well Known Young People Married Yesterday.

The marriage of Miss Nathalie Porter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Porter, to Mr. Joseph Supernant of Terrebonne, took place at St. Joseph's church in this city Wednesday, June 18. The ceremony was performed at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, in the presence of many relatives and friends, Rev. Fr. Beyea officiating.

The young people were attended by Miss Lillian Porter and Mr. John Supernant, sister of the bride and brother of the groom. After the ceremony the wedding party went to the home of the bride's parents east of the city, where a reception was held and a wedding dinner served.

Mr. and Mrs. Supernant left on the 5 o'clock train for a short wedding trip. They will visit relatives at Devils Lake and Minot in North Dakota. Upon their return they will go to housekeeping on a farm in Terrebonne township.

Explanation Demanded.

"Have you heard about your young Hicks' trouble with his wife?"

"No. I've been out of town for the last month. What is it?"

THE CULTIVATION OF THE CROPS

AN INTERESTING ARTICLE ON WHY GROUND SHOULD BE WELL CULTIVATED.

While the killing of weeds may be the principal object in view in cultivating crops, yet under most conditions the greatest benefit derived is that of saving the water in the soil. Many weeds, in fact, are not very undesirable except that they use up the soil water which should be saved for the crop.

It seems rather strange that stirring up from two to four inches of moist soil with a corn cultivator, which soil immediately dries in the sun, should save in any way the water lying below the surface. However, upon the maintenance of the loose top soil may very easily depend the success of any cultivated crop. It is a common sight, especially in gardens, to see the first crop of weeds cut off just at the surface and the soil left in a very firm condition, even on the surface. Such soil dries out very rapidly, causing the cracks so familiar in a dry season. It is very seldom that a profitable crop of any kind is grown under such conditions.

Soil water moves in accordance with very definite law. It travels from moist to dry soil, regardless of whether the dry soil is above or below the moist soil. Since the dry soil usually is at the surface, soil water in general moves upward. The force which draws the water upward is the same as that which draws up the oil in a lamp; it is the attraction of the soil grains for the water, just as the lamp wick itself draws or attracts the oil.

Soil water moves much more readily thru firm as packed soil than thru loose soil. This is the reason for keeping the top soil loose. One often notices in starting to work in the morning in seeding time that the drill wheel tracks at the day before, and even the foot prints of the man walking behind the drill, appear moist. The moist appearance disappears during the course of the forenoon. In the tracks the soil has been packed and the water easily comes to the surface, where it is seen the next morning later being evaporated. In the rest of the field the water is prevented from appearing on the surface by several inches of loose soil. The loose soil acts exactly as a mulch of straw might in preventing the loss of soil water.

It is in the rather dry season that the so-called dust blanket or dust mulch is especially important. Rains pack the soil, so it is a safe rule to follow to cultivate after every rain as soon as the soil can be worked.

These principles apply not only to the ordinary cultivated crops but to the grain crops as well. While grain can not be cultivated, they may be cultivated when but a few inches high to form the dust mulch.—P. C.

NEW LAW IN EFFECT JULY 1

CHATTEL MORTGAGES, BILLS OF SALE, ETC., MUST NOW BE FILED WITH REGISTER.

A new law passed by the last legislature and which goes into effect the first of July, will relieve town clerks of a part of their duties. Under the new ruling all chattel mortgages, bills of sale, etc., must be filed with the register of deeds instead of the town clerks as has been the case heretofore, and the clerks must deliver all books, files and other papers into the hands of the register before that date.

SUYS NEWSPAPER.

Anton Schusser Purchased the Plummer Pioneer.

Anton Schusser, who has been visiting at his home here for several weeks, went to Plummer on Monday of last week and while there made the deal whereby he became the owner of the Plummer Pioneer, purchasing the same from Ed. A. Fermoceon. "Tony" has been foreman on the Bemidji paper for several years and is thoroughly familiar with newspaper work and will give the people of Plummer and vicinity a good newsy paper. He took immediate possession.

Woodmen, Attention!

THE BROOKS CELEBRATION

TUESDAY WAS QUITE LARGELY ATTENDED AND ENJOYED BY THOSE PRESENT.

The celebration at St. John's Day, which was held at Brooks on Tuesday, was attended by many people and the lobby seemed to be enjoyed by all. In the forenoon addresses were made by several prominent speakers and the afternoon was filled with a good program of sports of all kinds, the big feature being the Red Lake Falls-Mentor ball game which resulted in a victory for Red Lake Falls by a score of 11 to 1. The Red Lake Falls Concert Band had been engaged to furnish music for the occasion and they more than did their share of the day's program. The celebration ended with a dance in the evening, which was attended by a large crowd. Red Lake Falls was well represented at the celebration as many automobiles drove out from here during the day.

Accidentally Shot.

Last Sunday while shooting crows, Gerald Anderson, son of O. A. Anderson, was severely wounded by an accidental discharge from a 25 caliber rifle. The gun, seemingly, had been placed against a barrow, and it when in the act of picking up the rifle the trigger caught in one of barrow teeth causing the discharge. The bullet struck a rib, causing it to deflect upward, passing thru the left lung about an inch above the heart, and lodged in the back just beneath the skin. The boy ran ten rods or more toward the house, and when picked up by his father a short time later he was in an unconscious state. Medical aid was immediately summoned and everything done to relieve his suffering. According to latest reports strong hopes are entertained for his recovery unless blood poisoning sets in.—St. Hilaire Spectator.

Brooks Juniors Defeat Cisco.

The base ball game pulled off at Brooks Sunday between the Brooks Juniors and the Cisco boys was a very interesting affair. Though the Brooks boys won they played for their game. The Cisco boys came with the intention of winning but they were just a little too weak.

Following is the score by innings:

Cisco	0 1 0 0 0 0 2 2 0—6
Brooks	1 0 2 0 3 0 1 1 x—8

The Brooks boys made a trip to Cisco two weeks ago and won from the Cisco team.

TO THIEF RIVER.

The Locals Will Play in that City Next Sunday.

The local ball team will journey to Thief River Falls next Sunday to try conclusions with the team of that place and a good game is expected. The defeat of Mentor Tuesday gave the Red Lake Falls boys their ninth victory for this season and they will do their best to keep the up-river boys from spoiling the record. Quite a number of fans are planning an accompanying the team.

EXHIBIT FOR THE STATE FAIR

PREPARATIONS ALREADY BEING MADE FOR THIS YEAR'S EXHIBIT.

E. G. Buse, who this year will have charge of Red Lake county's exhibit at the state fair, informs the Gazette that he has already commenced the work of preparing the exhibit and wishes us to call the attention of the farmers particularly to this fact.

Anyone having good hosts, onions, radishes or other garden vegetables or June grasses are requested to let him know and he will call for them. All the people of the county should co-operate with Mr. Buse in this work and try this year to make Red Lake county's the best exhibit at the big fair.

A big moriet day will again be held in Red Lake Falls the latter part of August, at which time liberal prizes will be offered for the best samples of the different kinds of grains, grasses and vegetables displayed. The best part of this exhibit will then be used to help out on the state fair exhibit. Everyone should keep his eyes open and be on the lookout for anything that will help the exhibit along.

ONCE MORE WINNERS

Locals Had an Easy Time of it Defeating Mentor Tuesday.

The ball game at the St. John's day celebration at Brooks Tuesday, between the Red Lake Falls and Mentor teams was an easy victory for the locals. They scored almost at will and when the game ended had eleven runs to their credit while the Mentor boys had succeeded in getting one man across the plate. Ketterhein and Guilmette were the locals' battery and as usual the bonders did some work. Stevens was a puzzle to the Mentor boys all thru the game and twelve of them were struck out. Stevens and Faulkenberg were the battery for Mentor. The score by innings is as follows:

BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS, RED LAKE COUNTY.

Red Lake Falls, Minn.
June 14th, 1913.

On the call of the County Auditor, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 220 General Laws of Minnesota, for the year 1905 and acts amendatory thereof, the Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake County, State of Minnesota, met in special session at the Commissioners room in the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, on Saturday the 14th day of June A. D. 1913 at 10 o'clock A. M. for the purpose of hearing and considering the report of the engineer in the matter of the repairing of County Ditches No. 18 and 22, and which repairs being petitioned for by Joh. Kohnen and others.

Meeting called to order by the Chairman at 10 o'clock A. M. Members present: Hugh Fraser, Hansen and Schultz.

Members absent: Cadieux.

The matter of repairing of County Ditches No. 18 and 22 was taken up and the arguments of all parties interested for or against the repairing of said ditches were heard.

On motion made by Commissioner Pigeon duly seconded by Commissioner Schultz, and carried unanimously, the following orders for the repairing of County Ditches No. 18 and 22 were made.

Order For Repair of County Ditch No. 18.

State of Minnesota, County of Red Lake, ss.

In the Matter of the Repair and Extension of County Ditch No. 18 of said County.

The above entitled matter came on duly to be heard by and before the County Board of said County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, at a special meeting of said Board, held on said day and date for the purpose of hearing and considering the petition for the repair of said ditch, on the 14th day of June, A. D. 1913, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., of said day and the Board having duly examined said ditch and the report of the engineer appointed to make and said board having duly considered the said matter and heard all the parties interested for or against the repair of said ditch and all other matters pertaining thereto find as follows, towit,—

First, That the said civil engineer has completed his work and made and filed his report thereon in all respects according to law.

Second, That the estimated benefits to be derived from the construction of said ditch are greater than the total cash of said repairs, including all damages.

Third, That said repairs and extension will be of public utility and promote the public welfare as shown by the report of said engineer is complete and correct.

Fourth, That said ditch was heretofore duly established according to law.

Now, Therefore, As conclusions from the foregoing findings, We, The County Board of the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, at said meeting session of said board, held at the time above specified, being satisfied that the repair of said ditch is necessary, and will be of public utility and conducive to public health and public benefit and convenience, do hereby order and establish said ditch in the engineer's report thereon, and that the contracts for such repairs and work of extension be paid out of the general revenue fund of this County. Treasurer of said county, pursuant to law, and that the amount of all assessments in said proceedings be assigned and charged against all lands originally assessed for the construction of said ditch in proportion, according to the original assessment as provided by law.

Given under our hands this 14th day of June, A. D. 1913.

HUGH FRASER,
Chairman of County Board of Red Lake Co., Minn.

Attest:—GEO. DUPONT,
County Auditor and Ex-Officio Clerk of the Board.

(SEAL)

Order for Repair of County Ditch No. 22.

State of Minnesota, County of Red Lake, SS.

In the Matter of the Repair of County Ditch No. 22 of said County.

The above entitled matter came on duly to be and before the County board of the County of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, at a special meeting of said board, duly called for the purpose of hearing and considering the petition for the repair of said ditch, on the 14th day of June, A. D. 1913, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., of said day and the board having duly examined said ditch and the report of the engineer appointed to make and said board having duly considered the said matter and heard all the parties interested for or against the repair of said ditch and all other matters pertaining thereto find as follows, towit,—

First, That the said civil engineer has completed his work and made and filed his report thereon in all respects according to law.

Second, That the estimated benefits to be derived from the construc-

TEACHERS' TRAINING SCHOOL

FOUR WEEKS SESSION TO BE HELD HERE, COMMENCING NEXT WEDNESDAY.

The teachers' training school for Red Lake and Pennington counties will open next Wednesday, July 2, and will be held in the Washington school on the north side. It is expected that there will be a large attendance and Superintendent De-Farge requests us to announce that all those desiring to take first grade subjects should enroll the first day at school. The faculty assigned to the Red Lake Falls school is an especially strong one, with H. B. White of Nir as conductor and he will be assisted by Mrs. Munch, Chas. Eginton of Staples and Oertrude K. Button of Hibbing.

The Red Lake Falls Concert Band has been engaged to furnish music for the Fourth of July celebration at Crookston and also at Oklee. For this reason the band will be divided on that day and twenty members will go to each place, the junior members going to Oklee. Not many cities the size of this are able to send two bands out on the same day.

TO BE GOOD MATCH

Loran Curtis and Al. Akerman will Wrestle at the Lotus Theatre July 10th.

The best match of the season is billed here far Thursday, July 10, at the Lotus Theatre, when Loran Curtis of Halstad, Minn., and Al. Akerman, the champion of South Dakota, will meet. The management has for the past four months been trying to get this match and was at last able to arrange it. Akerman is an especially strong wrestler and promises to keep Curtis, the local favorite, busy all the time and the wrestling fan is sure of his money's worth at this event. Further particulars of the big match will be announced later.

SECOND TEAM DEFEATED.

Thief River Falls "Cubs" Prove too Strong for Locals.

The Thief River Falls "Cubs", one of the second teams of the up-river city, defeated the "RedKox" on the local grounds Sunday afternoon by a score of 5 to 3. The game was quite exciting most of the time and the winners could not be picked until the finish. The locals showed lack of practice, especially at the bat and were unable to connect with the "sphere" when a hit was needed. Walter Lecourslere, the shortstop for the first team, did the twirling for the locals and would have won his game with good support. Collins and Severson did the battery work for the visitas. Collins striking out 19 of the locals.

The attendance was large enough so that the hays had to dig down into their own pockets to help pay expenses.

COUNTIES PLAN JOINT HOSPITAL

ROSEAU, MARSHALL, PENNINGTON AND KITTSON MAY ESTABLISH SANITARIUM.

Roseau, Minn.—The Roseau county board has appointed O. O. Paulson and Louis Bodurman, two of its members, to confer with commissioners of Marshall, Kittson and Pennington counties in regard to the building of a tuberculosis hospital, jointly. There is a great need of such a hospital for care and treatment of the malady, and it would seem as though if were a wise and economic plan for the counties named to join in building and maintaining such an institution. It is believed that the different county boards interesting themselves in these counties in this humanitarian movement will be able to agree on some workable plan.

Shot By Companion.

A ten year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Durham, residing near Viking, was accidentally shot by his companion while shooting gophers last Sunday. The bullet from a 22 calibre rifle entered the boy's right side, just above the hips, and passed thru his abdomen. The little fellow at the time of this writing is in a precarious condition.—St. Hilaire Spectator.

SOMETHING SPECIAL.

Moving Pictures of U. C. T. Convention at the Lotus.

The moving pictures which were taken at the time of the U. C. T. convention at Crookston will be shown at the Lotus theatre tomorrow (Friday) evening, under the auspices of the Red Lake Falls concert band. These films are very good and will be given along with the regular show. You should not miss these pictures, and you will be helping the band boys at the same time.

GUN CLUB IS HOLDING CONTEST

SIX WEEKS SHOOT BY MEMBERS OF LOCAL CLUB—PRIZES AWARDED.

The members of the Red Lake Falls gun club have decided to have a six weeks shoot at their grounds on the south edge of the city and the first shoot was held Tuesday evening, and in the future regular shoots will be held on Tuesdays at 2:00 and 6:30 p. m. Every member of the club is urgently requested to participate in this event. Each one entering will be required to shoot 150 targets during the contest and the three making the highest scores will be awarded prizes. Members absent at any shoot my make up the following week. Buick

Where There's Life There's a Buick

Do you ever go anywhere in town or country, that you don't see a Buick?

Stop any Buick driver anywhere and ask him how his car runs.

Ask him about Buick power.

Ask him how much mileage he gets to the gallon of gasoline.

Ask him about Buick service, and how his car is standing up.

His answers will back up every claim we make.

The Buick Overhead Valve Motor has more power and more speed than any other type of motor ever built. It will pull stronger on low grade gasoline and the fuel consumption is less.

RAIL RATES UPHELD IN 4 MORE STATES

JUSTICE HUGHES READS DECISIONS FOR MISSOURI, W. VA., ARK. AND ORE.

TWO CENT FARE FOR EACH

Schedules Are Held Confiscatory on Several Roads in Missouri—No Decision in Kentucky State Case.

Washington, June 17. — Maximum rate laws of four states, Missouri, West Virginia, Oregon and Arkansas, were sustained by the supreme court in a sweeping series of unanimous decisions, read by Justice Hughes, except as to several railroads in Missouri alone, the court declared the laws are not confiscatory.

The court did not decide the Kentucky rate cases. All of the opinions reaffirmed the "states' rights" principles laid down in the Minnesota cases. In brief the court held:

The Courts Findings.

Missouri's 2-cent and maximum freight laws valid as to all but a few small railroads.

Oregon's law creating a state commission and reducing passenger and freight rates valid.

Arkansas 2-cent fare and reduced freight rate laws constitutional.

West Virginia's 2-cent fare rate valid.

Court Adjourns.

At 2:14 p. m. yesterday the court adjourned its present term. The tribunal will not meet again until next October.

In the Missouri cases the court held the rates confiscatory on the St. Louis & Hannibal, Kansas City, Clinton & Springfield and Chicago Great Western railroads.

The court held the rates valid as to the St. Louis, Southwestern, the Missouri Pacific, the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern, the Wabash, the Missouri & Chicago & Alton.

The decision holding the rates confiscatory as to the Chicago Great Western was made to apply by virtue of a stipulation between the state and railroads to the Quincy, Omaha & Kansas City railroad and the St. Joseph & Grand Island railway.

Based on 2-Cent Fare.

The decision was based upon the 2-cent passenger law and the maximum freight law.

DANCE CENSORSHIP IS ASKED

Ordinances Against Abuses Also Recommended by Professors at Chicago.

Chicago, June 18.—Public dance halls are not as much in need of censorship as private dancing parties and hops, according to the United Professional Teachers of Dancing in session here. The dancing teachers decided to ask the city council to ask offices represented to pass the one-half foot distance dance ordinance and censor dancing in homes as the law does the moving picture films.

"All dance halls and dances are tamin the private clubs," said W. F. Brown of Pittsburg, a member of the advisory board. "All these are considered the turkey trot and the bunny hug and grizzly as vaudeville."

J. Louis Cyron, president of the association, announced the people who are supposed to be in society dance the objectionable dances, and added: "The dance of the masses is all right."

NINE DEAD; MANY OVERCOME

Philadelphia, June 18.—Six deaths and numerous prostrations occurred here as the result of the excessive heat.

Cincinnati.—Three men were killed and twenty-five prostrated, one seriously, by the heat. The maximum for the government thermometer was 95 degrees. No abatement in the heat is shown.

PUBLIC TO DECIDE QUESTION

REFORM OF CURRENCY LAWS THIS SESSION UP TO PEOPLE

Underwood Believes Bill Will Be Accepted and Then Congress Will Await Developments.

Washington, June 18.—Public opinion, the sovereign voice in law-making, is to decide whether there shall be currency legislation during the present session of congress. This was the view which Representative Oscar Underwood, the Democratic leader in the house took after a conference with President Wilson at the White House.

In the face of conflicting expressions from prominent Democrats in congress as to the necessity for currency reform during the present session, it is the avowed purpose of the administration to launch a currency bill before both houses and senate before Friday of this week, which will be accepted or followed by the president's message describingwhat he believes to be the necessity for banking reform. Then, according to Mr. Underwood, the plan of the house will be to rest on its oars, thoroughly discuss the new banking proposals, and then allow the expression of the sovereigns of the country and the opinion of the business and business men generally as to the merits of the Democratic proposals.

Should the discussion in congress be backed up by an insistent demand from the country at large for an immediate revision of the currency system, it is the belief of the administration that both houses and congressmen will yield their pleas of personal discomfort in the approaching hot weather.

The president believes strongly that the country will back him up in the view that the currency system ought to be revised so as to alleviate any stringency that might follow the passage of the tariff bill.

Secretary McAdoo, Chairmen Owen and Glass of the senate and house banking and currency committees yesterday finished the bill thet represents the administration's views.

The bill, in its present form, embraces a system of regional reserve associations, with local governing boards, all under control of a federal reserve board of nine members at Washington. Elasticity of the currency is to be secured through the issue of United States notes to these reserve associations and by them to the local banks, upon adequate security, including commercial papers of a limited class.

The local banks making up each reserve association will be required to keep a specific amount of their reserve in the association vaults.

No present issues of treasury notes or gold or silver certificates are to be disturbed by the new currency, but the bill would require the gradual retirement of all national bank notes, within a maximum period of two years. The new currency system would become operelive July 1, 1914.

The visitors are charged with no official mission.

$10,000 for Unknown Heirs.

Hutchinson, Kan., June 18.—A bag of gold nuggets and gold dust estimated to be worth $10,000 awaits any heirs who may be found to the estate of Mrs. Ann M. Burnside, who died recently in Davenport, Iowa, according to the announcement of C. M. Duskworth, administrator of the Burnhart properties. Several years ago Mrs. Burnhart was adjudged of unsound mind. The cottage here where she lived alone was closed and she went to an asylum. Upon her death the gold was found.

ALL NECESSITIES LIKELY TO BE FREE

LIVE STOCK AND WHEAT LIKELY TO GO ON FREE LIST UNRESTRICTED.

AGRICULTURAL LIST CHANGED

Graduated Tax on Output of Tobacco Will Not Be Considered—Other Changes That May Be Made in Proposed Tariff Bill.

Washington, June 18.—The agricultural schedule of the Underwood tariff bill was again suddenly upset by the majority members of the senate finance committee, when a motion was made to reconsider action taken earlier in the day approving the free list ling of live stock and wheat subject to a countervailing duty.

The proposed move is to strike out the provision for a countervailing duty and place live stock, fresh meats and wheat on the free list unrestricted. Members of the committee said yesterday that this probably would be done by the majority.

No Reason for Change.

No reason for the change was announced. However, the organization of the agricultural raw products and finished products which were effectuated in the Underwood bill has been a problem for the Democratic senators for which President Wilson has taken an active interest.

The house put meats and flour on the free list, leaving live stock and grain dutiable at 10 per cent ad valorem and 10 cents a bushel respectively. The senate finance sub-committee took up the schedules the schedule agreed to qualifies the rates and established products which are raw materials and the finished products all free. Under this schedule a free list provision been reached than Senator Simmons and other Democratic senators of the finance committee believed that the problem would not be settled right in the senate.

Increased Free List.

They were of the opinion that all products which entered into the cost of living should go to the free list and many finished products with them.

Senator Simmons communicated this information to the sub-committee. It reconsidered its action, placing all products upon the free list.

Later it was announced that the committee would adopt a countervailing duty clause, which would make the products free only from countries which did not impose duties from this country. This would operate against the free entry of live stock from such countries as Canada and the Argentine.

The committee further enlarged the free list by voting to take flax, hemp and manufactures outside like. The Underwood bill rates on flax were 15 per cent ad valorem, on raw hemp and ramie from ¼ to 1 cent per pound, according to grade. It placed 5 cent duties on binding twine, clous with other products of the farm and that by the time the bill was ready of living might be beneficially affected.

Rates on finished products from these materials were materially reduced.

It also was decided not to consider the amendment offered by Senator Hitchcock which would provide a graduated tax on the output of cotton of tobacco. The amendment followed suggestions made by Attorney General Gregory, who said that a manufacturing tax could not see fit to endorse at this time. Senator Hitchcock has not been subject to a tariff tax, were put on the dutiable list by action of the committee. To encourage American growers was given as the reason.

Senator Simmons announced that the outs in the citrus fruit rates, made in the basis bill, the senate committee left the schedule as it was. No change was made in the liquor schedule, but it was said among the members that Senator Pomerene having asked to be heard today on the matter.

IMPORTANT CASES HELD OVER

Supreme Court Adjourns Until October, and Many Cases are Held Up.

Washington, June 18.—When the supreme court adjourned until October some twenty-five important cases were left undecided. Three of these are the cases of Semuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison, the officers of the American Federation of Labor, who are asking for a review of the decision of the district court holding them in contempt for alleged violation of an injunction in the Buck's Stove and Range company case. Execution of sentences thus will be deferred at least until fall. The cases of many other important cases on the docket are also held up.

$100,000 Burglar Pleads Guilty.

San Francisco, Cal., June 18.—Owen D' Conn, known as "the $100,000 burglar" pleaded guilty to the charges of burglary and will be sentenced Saturday. His plea brings to an end a long and sensational criminal career, reaching from Chicago to the Pacific coast and covering a period of two years. During that time D' Conn, according to his confession, looted homes in daylight of over $100,000 worth of valuables. Conn was arrested after a running pistol duel, in which the burglar was shot in the leg.

Mrs. Brenk Drowns.

New Richmond, Wis., June 17.—The unprecedented June drouth was broken by heavy rains here today. Two inches of precipitation fell and was general throughout the north and adjoining counties. Storm damage has been reported from several localities, barns being blown down. The postoffice at Star Prairie was struck by lightning and a Tegalton tank of oil was set on fire, but the flames were quickly extinguished. The rain did not come in time to prevent a heavy shrinkage in the hay crop.

REPORT ON CANADIAN CROPS

MONTH OF MAY DRY, WITH FREQUENT FROSTS.

Total Area Under Cultivation Greater Than in 1912 For All Grains.

Ottawa, Ont., June 16.—A bulletin of the census and statistics office just issued, giving preliminary estimates of the areas sown to the principal grain crops and reporting on their condition at the end of May, shows that the month of May was cold and dry, with frequent night frosts, and that these conditions retarded the growth of the crop and caused to them to be unseasonably backward.

The total area under wheat in Canada is provisionally estimated at 9,-813,900 acres, or 57,000 acres more than in 1912. Oats occupy 9,647,800 acres, compared with 9,256,200 in 1912; barley occupies 1,435,200 acres, an increase of 10,600 acres, and rye 124,-000 acres, a decrease of 9,610 acres. For the three Northwest provinces for Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the wheat area is estimated at 9,013,900 acres; oats at 4,267,700 acres and barley at 852,200 acres, these differences representing increases over last year of 52,000 acres for wheat, 193,500 acres for oats, and 42,800 for barley.

TWENTY-FOUR HURT IN CRASH

Victims of Missouri Street Car Accident Are Mostly Women and Children.

St. Louis, Mo., June 17.—Twenty-four persons, mostly women and children, were injured in a rear-end street car collision on the Creve Coeur Lake line in St. Louis county. Two of them, Mrs. Dora Bingham and Mrs. Nellie Jones, were said to be fatally hurt. A score of others were bruised and cut by flying glass, but refused aid in the confusion.

The accident occurred near Overland Park. Both cars were car cars, running on a four-minute schedule, and crowded with about 100 pleasure seekers each. The trolley of the first car came off just as it rounded a curve, leaving the car in darkness. Before the trolley had been replaced, the second car, running at a speed of 40 miles an hour, crashed into the rear. The cars were interlocked and both telescoped.

SIX HUNDRED WERE KILLED

Insurgents Gain Brilliant Victory Over Federals Troops at Sansillo.

El Paso, Tex., June 17.—Six hundred federals were killed or wounded in a battle in the Sansillo pass according to reports just reaching here from Chihuahua City.

After the victory over 1,200 federals, the insurgents, under Generals Villa, Chao and Hernandez, marched north toward the state capital, whence the Zuloaga garrison had retreated. They are reported as having taken possession of Chihuahua City.

SUFFRAGETTES GET 'HARD LABOR' TERM

SIX MILITANT LEADERS GIVEN FROM EIGHTEEN TO SIX MONTHS EACH.

ONLY MAN GETS 21 MONTHS

Five of Women Say They Will Go on Hunger Strike—Miss Kenney Makes Speech.

London, June 19.—Six of the most prominent leaders of the militant suffragettes' organization and one of their male supporters were found guilty at the central criminal court of conspiracy to commit malicious damage to property. The trial had lasted several days.

Women Were Officials.

The women were officials of the Women's Social and Political unions. They were Miss Harriet Kerr, Miss Agnes Lake, Miss Rachel Barrett, Mrs. Beatrice Saunders, Miss Annie Kenney and Miss Laure Lennox, while the man was Edward Clayton, an analytical chemist.

The jury handed in a recommendation for mercy in the cases of Miss Lake, Miss Lennox and Miss Barrett. Justice Phillimore passed sentence on the suffragettes as follows:

Miss Kenney, 18 months; Mrs. Saunders, 18 months; Miss Kerr, 12 months; Miss Barrett, 9 months; Miss Lake and Miss Lennox, six months each; Mr. Clayton, 21 months.

All Get Hard Labor.

All the prisoners were committed to the third division, which entails hard labor. Each defendant was ordered to pay one-seventh of the cost of the prosecution. The man was bound over to keep the peace for a year after the period of imprisonment.

With the exception of Mrs. Saunders, all the women loudly proclaimed their intention of going on a "hunger strike."

Outrages Are Defended.

An impassioned speech in defense of the outrages committed by militant suffragettes was delivered by Miss Annie Kenney during the trial.

Justice Phillimore ordered her to cease the proceedings and her concluding words drew from the audience cries of:

"If I have got to die to get the vote," she said, "I will die willingly, whatever the verdict of the jury today."

The entrance of the accused, Miss Harriet Kerr, Miss Agnes Lake, Miss Rachel Barrett, Mrs. Beatrice Saunders, Miss Annie Kenney, Miss Laura Lennox and Edwin Clayton, chemical adviser to the suffragettes, found the court crowded.

Women form Audience.

Women formed the majority of the audience, among them being Mrs. Winston Spencer Churchill, wife of the first lord of the admiralty, and Miss Violet Asquith, daughter of the premier.

Miss Annie Kenney, in her speech, asserted that the action of the United Unionists and the speeches of cabinet ministers, she said, had created belief that the unenfranchised were justified in rebelling in order to get their grievances remedied, furnished ample argument for the courses pursued by the militant suffragettes.

"I am a rebel," she said, "and a rebel I shall remain until women receive the vote. If, like Miss Davison, it should be necessary for me to sacrifice my life, then I shall gladly die."

STRONGLY AGAINST FRIEDMAN

Medical Society No Longer Favorable to "Discoverer."

Berlin, June 15.—The last meeting of the Berlin medical society showed that the drift of opinion of Berlin physicians was strongly against Dr. Friedmann, the Berlin physician who claimed he had discovered a cure for consumption.

Prof. Max Westenhofer of the University of Berlin reported that a post-mortem examination of one of Dr. Friedmann's patients who had been dying and whom showed a marked acceleration of the tubercular process, after treatment.

Child Causes Wreck Fatalities.

Buffalo, N. Y., June 19.—A small boy caused the New York Central railroad record rendezvous here and climbed into the cab of an engine. He pulled open the fire door and as the engine neared forward he jumped. The locomotive ran wild through the yards at a speed of 45 miles an hour and crashed headon into a freight train, occupying the opposite direction. Engineer Fred Ludeke was almost instantly killed and Fireman Charles Wolf, who had a leg badly hurt that he died c short time later.

Four-foot Fall Kills Man.

Philadelphia, June 19.—On the anniversary of the fall of 60 feet, by which he escaped injury, Hugh Walter, a painter, 56 years old, was killed by falling only four feet. During the last 16 years he has several times had falls of 16 and 26 feet, each time escaping injury. The only times he was injured was when he fell a few feet from a porch roof and received a fractured skull, and on another occasion when tumbling off a fence, when three of his ribs and his jaw were fractured.

RIVER RHINE AND ROMANCE

Dashed Crag and Rich Cathedral Reward the Traveler Who Takes the Water Route.

Berlin.—History and nature collaborated to make the Rhine from Mayence to Cologne a river of remarkable beauty. Nature has been permitted to sustain its own reputation, and history renders the romantic in crumbling ruins that overspread the crests of craggy heights below which the modern river steamers pass.

From its source in the white-crowned Alps the Rhine runs down to the North see. One takes steamer at Mayence or at Cologne and journeys down France on the other. Castles and cathedrals, the legends and the history that hang their glamour about monted walls and rose-windows, the story of the Lorelei and the sight of the rock that sustains the legend—all enrich the traveler's experience. The former mountain scenery is the best scenery of the Rhine country. There are numerous excursions to be made in the neighborhood, most of them on foot, if carriages are found—as sometimes happens—to be too expensive. Only the Drachenfels and the Petersberg can be ascended by rail.

Not far above Konigswinter, the ancient capital of Andernach, an old Roman colony. There is a cathedral of beauty and o view worth a weary journey to behold. The cathedral stands just half the distance between Cologne and Mayence at the confluence of the Rhine and the Moselle, and from it Cues is but half an hour by rail. Cobalt has magic reminiscences for, especially the magnificent monument to the cardinal Nicholas I and the Castle of Bistenfels. Arenberg, e monastery. The Rhine valley is easily and cheaply reached by an electric railway from Ehrenbreitstein, opposite Coblenz.

FISHES HIT THE LIQUOR LAW

Mackerel Sold in Delaware Carry Bottles Inside of Them for Thirst Quenching.

Wilmington, Del.—A new industry to overcome local option conditions in favor of thirsty citizens has arisen at Lewes, and at the Delaware breakwater. Mackerel fishermen from New England have settled in that quiet seaside section with liquor by selling pints and half-pints concealed in fish.

"Buy a fish and get a big drink," is the slogan of the fishermen, and it is netting them considerable money.

When Governor Miller recently approved the anti-treating bill, a shipment of liquor into Kent and Sussex counties, "dry" sections, by private residents of Lewes and vicinity became necessary. The whole bill had been stopped through interstate shipments.

Ingenious Yankees on a mackerel boat from New England laid in a large supply of liquor before reaching Delaware and opened a large number of pint and quart bottles of liquor inside. The fish and contents were offered for sale.

There was soon a big demand for the fish, and other mackerel fisherman learned of the plan and emulated it.

LOST NEBRASKA CITY FOUND

Ruins of the Ancient Town of Quivera at Tradition Sskirt the Missouri River.

Omaha, Neb.—The ancient city of Quivera, for which the Spaniards, under the command of Francisco Vasquez Coronado searched diligently some four hundred years ago, it is said, has been found on the party of leading western scientists and archaeologists here. Dr. Walter B. Gilder of this city, is already planning to make extensive excavations and explorations next summer. The ruins of this ancient city skirt the river west in Nebraska for several miles. While it had been known for years that Quivera was somewhere in Nebraska, it was not until Doctor Gilder and his associates completed a series of excavations that the exact location of the old Spanish settlement was found.

A farmer near Riverton, Neb., dug up an old stirrup, which looked so strange to him that he sent it to the state historical board of the state archaeological department. Upon both in shape and material it was like the stirrups of bronze used by Moors and Spaniards. It had been made on a blacksmith's anvil, and the blows of the hammer were vet visible.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—"Sweethearts may kiss and hug to their hearts content, but 'smokers' will be sent to jail." These are orders of the superintendent of Police McQuaide, who thinks that legitimate courtship should be encouraged in city parks here.

KRUPP SCANDAL AMAZES GERMANY

MRS. KRUPP - VERY DOCILE, ONE OF THE OWNERS OF KRUPPS

GERMANY'S excitement over the Krupp scandal is not due alone to the rumor of graft cases in that country, or to the fact that it touches her in her most sensitive place—the army. It is due partly to the fact that the Krupp establishment has come to be looked upon as a national institution, and that every German has been immensely proud of it as one of the glories of the Fatherland.

And now to discover that this great industry has stooped to the bribing of officials—a fact admitted by the Krupp firm, after the charge had been made in the reichstag—and that it had been supplying French newspapers with material for war-scare articles, so as to induce the German government to buy more armament from the Krupps, is more to Germany than a scandal. It is a catastrophe.

The charges were made in the reichstag by Dr. Liebknecht, the Socialist deputy, and in the columns of the Vorwaerts, the Socialist newspaper. It is a coincidence that it was that newspaper which ten years ago printed another scandalous story about the Krupps, which caused the death of the then head of the works, Friedrich Alfred Krupp.

It was impossible to refute him, because the minister of war, Gen. von Heeringen, was forced to admit then and there that an inquiry was going on which had already revealed that "one of the Krupp officials" had bribed officers to reveal secret information. The following day the Krupps issued a statement to which they admitted that their representatives in Berlin had maintained "friendly relations" with their former "comrades" of the war department for the purpose of obtaining "business information," and had bestowed small presents "on certain under officials."

It was on Friday that Liebknecht exploded his bomb and forced von Kessinger to reveal the secret inquiry and on Saturday that the Krupps made their admission of bribery. On Sunday the Vorwaerts published the text of the instructions sent by the Deutsche Munitions and Waffenfabrik to its Paris agent to "leave no stone unturned" to persuade some popular French newspaper to publish a statement that Krupps intended to double her orders for machine guns. The object was to get the German government in order machine guns from the Deutsche Munitions und Waffenfabrik.

On Tuesday the popular indignation had risen so high that Gen. von Heeringen's plea for a suspension of judgment until his private inquiry had done its work was forgotten. The budget committee of the reichstag voted to appoint a parliamentary commission of inquiry into the scandal. This commission, however, despite the protests of the Socialists, was not vested with power to send for persons and papers.

Although the Krupp works date from 1810, when Friedrich Krupp established his forge at Essen, it was his son, Alfred Krupp, who was the real founder of the industry. Friedrich died practically bankrupt in 1826, leaving little more than the secret of his cast steel process to his son, and it was 36 years before any striking results were achieved.

It was in 1810 that Friedrich Krupp purchased a small forge in Essen, where he devoted himself to the problem of manufacturing cast steel, but though the article was put on the market by him in 1811 it commanded but little sale, and the firm was anything but prosperous. He employed only three workmen.

Alfred Krupp was born April 26, 1812, and at the time of his father's death was only fourteen years old. His mother carried on the works until Alfred reached his majority, so that twice in the history of the works has there been managed by women. The present head of the industry is Bertha Krupp, the granddaughter of the woman who became its manager in 1826.

The Krupps had so little money that Alfred, on his father's death, was compelled to leave school to assist his mother. He displayed a phenomenon aptitude for the finer business, and the works developed with increasing rapidity after his influence was felt in their management. By 1848 the firm had expanded so that 122 workmen were employed.

As late as 1848, the year in which his mother relinquished the sole management of the works into his hands, he molted the family plate into pig bib workmen. Today the mighty industry furnishes employment in a majority of the businesses of three cities and a dozen coal and iron mining areas. The ships built from it, engines and mills its steel, and armed with its cannon, ore on all the seas, and wherever steel is used the name of Krupp is known. The capital of the concern is about $60,000,000.

It was in 1847 that Krupp scored his first real success, when he made a three-pounder muzzle-loading gun of cast steel. At the great London exhibition of 1851 he exhibited a solid fewless ingot of cast steel weighing two tons, and established the fact that an important firm existed in Germany capable of turning out samples of excellent workmanship. The Essen works were everywhere spoken of, and the output watched with the closest interest. The manufacture of wedless steel tires for railway vehicles was another invention which followed soon after.

The melcig of heavy ordnance, which has made the name of these works famous the world over, was not then a prominent part of the business. One of the first large orders he got for firearms came four years after the London exhibition, when

THE ORIGINAL KRUPP FACTORY

AEROPLANE GUN—RECENT PRODUCT OF THE KRUPPS

Prussia gave him the contract for her new breechloaders. The Khedive of Egypt followed this with a large order for war material, and Russia followed with contracts for large quantities of new weapons.

While the Essen works were designed for general foundry work, the output for many years has consisted almost entirely of heavy guns; but it was not until 1856, 29 years after his father's death and 36 years after the founding of the firm, that Alfred Krupp began gunmaking. His first results were pieces of small caliber. As he became interested in the science, and as his discoveries in steel casting developed, the size and weight of the cannon he was able to construct increased until there was war monsters, which have become world-famous, became common occurrences in the Essen works.

The Krupp field gun is the basis of the mobile artillery of Germany, Austria-Hungary, Italy, Russia, and Turkey. Under the administration of Friedrich A. Krupp, Essen turned out the great piece which gave Germany's fortresses and ers mounted in her coast defenses. Krupp answered Krupp from the emplacements of Port Arthur against the siege batteries of Japan. And side by side with the instruments of war Essen placed a thousand and one steel products, illustrating Alfred Krupp's first and chief maxim: "No good thing without good tools," used in today's locks, machinery, railroads, and ships.

Krupp's ordnance has proved oil over the world. Some of the guns that fired at Dewey's squadron at Manila came from Essen. The siege guns used in the Spanish-American war and in sea at the bombardment of Paris were from this factory, and the barbiturat terror of them was not diminished by the memory of one of the Krupp master pieces which had been exhibited in their city in 1867. It weighed 10,000 kilograms, and made away with 1800 worth of powder and iron every time it was fired. After that the Krupps refused to make cannon for France.

As the business grew collateral industries were developed, and Essen, which bed been a tiny village, expanded to a town of over 100,000 inhabitants, all dependent on the Krupp industries. Coal mines, coke ovens, iron mines, steamships, railroads, and blast furnaces were bought. In 1872 Alfred Krupp owned 414 iron ore diggings, and when his son Friedrich died he owned over 500.

Upon Alfred's death, July 14, 1887, Friedrich A. Krupp became head of the establishment. It has been said of him that he devoted himself to the financial rather than the technical side of the business, but in 1892, at the annual meeting in London of the Iron and Steel Institute, the Bessemer gold medal for scientific research was awarded to him. This is one of the highest honors that can be paid to any man in the iron trade. It was given to him for his discoveries in the manufacture of armor plate. The son was thus following in his father's footsteps.

Both Alfred and Friedrich A. Krupp declined titles. One was offered to the father by King William, afterward Emperor William I., in 1864, but declined. The present emperor, renewed the offer to Krupp's son. Neither would accept.

At the time of his death he was by far the richest man in Germany, and was called "the German Morgan." The imperial income tax returns showed that in the year before his death he had a yearly income of between 20,000,000 marks ($4,760,000) and 21,000,000 marks. The second wealthiest man in the empire had an income of only 5,000,000 marks.

He directed in his will that the firm should be changed into a stock company. This was done, but Bertha Krupp, his daughter, who married Dr. von Bahlen and von Halbach, holds all but four shares of the company. She is not only Germany's wealthiest woman, but its wealthiest subject and greatest taxpayer.

Hence she has been called "the Queen of Essen," and "Our Lady of the Cannon," and other romantic names. At the age of eighteen there descended upon her the greatest industrial inheritance the world has yet known. She was sixteen when her father died, and attended her mother in 1904.

Essen is a city now of 110,000 population, and it owes its existence as a city to the Krupp works. But there is hardly a city in the world which is concerned more in the communistic spirit than this. It is one of the very earliest places in which co-operative stores were established. They have been in existence there for over 50 years. "Berthe Krupp," says one writer, "may be the 'queen' of Essen, but her workmen conduct their own affairs without molestation. She limits her interference to gifts of money, by which institutions of mutual aid to the workmen may be established."

From the three men whom Friedrich Krupp employed, the 122 whom Alfred Krupp had in his employ 30 years after he took charge, the force working for the Krupps had grown to 50,000 at the death of Friedrich A. Krupp in 1902. The establishment now comprises 40,000 workmen and 4,750 engineers and clerks.

The works contain five separate groups, the first of which is the Essen Steel Works, the principal grounds at Meppen, Tangor-Siette, and Essen. This group includes the Hilfsdeser-Siette, with its four blast furnaces; the Herman-Siatte, with three blast furnaces, and the Seyrae-Siatte, with coal and iron mines.

The second group is the Friedrich Alfred Iron works in Rhenhausen; the third, the Annen Steel works; the fourth, the Grusoe Machine works, at Magdeburg-Buckau, and the fifth, the Germania shipyards, at Kiel.

The Essen Steel works alone comprises some sixty-odd departments, covering an area of about 900 acres, and housing 7,300 machines (with 17 roll trains, 187 hammers, 81 hydraulic presses, 297 steam boilers, and 569 steam engines, more than 2,200 electric motors, and 900 cranes.

Almost in the center of the Essen works stands the original Krupp factory and a family house, maintained intact, in accordance with the directions of Alfred Krupp. It bears this inscription:

"Fifty years ago this cottage was the home of my parents. May my children and children's children go through the struggle which the building up of these works has cost us. The success which now so splendidly has rewarded our faith, our anxiety, and our efforts, was doubtful during twenty-five long years.

"Let this example serve as an encouragement to others in difficulties. May it increase the respect for the many small houses and the great sorrows which often dwell in them.

"The object at work must be mutual welfare; the work its means, then work in prayer. May all, from the highest to the lowest amongst us, work with the same earnestness to found and secure his own future success. That's my greatest wish.

"Essen, February, 1872, twenty-five years after my beginning charge. ALFRED KRUPP."

SAVING THE OLD HOME

One of the first things that Mme. Sarah Bernhardt will attend to on landing in France will be the matter of the disposal of her home, Port de Sarah Bernhardt, an island off the coast of Brittany, to the French government. The actress has been much perturbed by reports that it is the intention of the French government to confiscate her island and restore it in its original use as a fortress.

For many years Mme. Bernhardt has lived almost exclusively in her palace on this, the largest of a group of islands near the mainland. She has held her interest in it for years, and it covers over three-quarters of the entire bit of land set down in the sea.

At one time it was a formidable fortification, but the actress has had the place reconstructed and made into a handsome residence, to which she delights to spend her leisure moments. It is here that she entertains her friends.

So wrote Robert Burns, and the young men of Paris have just found that "power" is a Magazine called Paru Taste," which bee recently concluded a vote of its lady readers as to which are the seven worst faults of the young men of today. Egotism, it is interesting to learn, takes first place easily with 10,014 votes. Laziness and self-sufficiency run a dead-heat for second place with 7,491 votes, and fast living, gambling, intemperance, and abuse of sport come next with from 6,400 to 6,000 votes. Foolishness is last in the list.

THRUST IN THE DARK

Servian Soldier Tells Story of Experiences in War.

Encounter Between Sentry and Albanian in Blackness of Night and Storm —Waiting in Filthy Darkness for Unseen Enemy.

Salonika, Macedonia.—A Servian soldier just returned from Albania related the following episode as his worst experience in the war:

"I was on night duty as a sentry on the Albanian hills, where rain and dark overcloot us. All this region was unknown to us, but the trifles were Moslem, and supposed to be hostile. I knew that thousands of lives depended on me; I stood motionless, weary, stone cold, and unable to see anything, glad to rest my back sometimes behind me, I got to thinking of home in spite of myself, till I was startled by a rustle some paces off. We were warned not to make any noise, so I did not touch my gun, but got my sword ready.

"There was no other sound for a long time, except the pouring of the rain. I do not know how many hours it was till a stone from above rattled past me and fell to the precipice below. I tried to persuade myself the rain had dislodged it, but the rustle began again, and I knew something living was near. I made the sign of the cross and held my sword straight in front of me. I strained my ears, but could not see a move or a gleam in the black night.

"The muffled sound continued, over a slightly, but distinguishable, and I had the horrid sensation of being seen by what I could not see. I made no move, but suddenly the sword encountered something, and I pressed hard, just taking one step forward. There was a strange gurgle. I was thrown and drenched, but some hot drops now fell on my hand. I pulled back my sword, and heard some heavy object tumble down the slope, wondering whether it was a dog or a wolf or a strayed mule—or a man. I felt the blade and found it wet with something thicker than rain. I held it near my eyes, in vain. I wiped it on the damp earth at my feet, and waited for another sound, but there was none. Further sound till dawn approached and the cocks began to crow in some villages far away.

"I watched in agony for the coming of the round ball in the heavens that would bring relief, and I longed to lie down and sleep against the wall, but, however, our commander gave orders to march, as by bad intelligence we were surrounded by danger. We went down the same rugged road and climbed the night before, and at the bottom of a ravine right beneath my post in the rock lay the body of an Albanian, fully armed, in a pool of blood, with a hole in his breast and a long two-edged knife in his closed fist. Four horses later we descried his tribe and burned their village."

ORGANIZE FIGHT ON CANCER

Representatives of Medical Bodies Meet in New York City for That Purpose.

New York.—Permanent organization of American physicians and others engaged in a nation-wide fight against cancer was effected at a gathering at this city recently attended by many of the medical bodies identified with the concerns of American physicians and surgeons.

A campaign of education against the disease will be undertaken through written and spoken word in magazine articles, before schools, women's clubs and in other ways. Special attention will be given to teaching women the early symptoms of cancer.

The members who attended the medical committees appointed at the recent congress of American physicians and surgeons in Washington. The selection of a name for the new body was left to the executive committee.

THINKS BODY BAG OF GOODS

Wife Finds Missing Man Dead in the Basement—Shrieks Brings Neighbors.

New York.—Mistaking the body of her husband, hanging from the ceiling of their small store, for a bag of merchandise, Mrs. Herman Kramer of East Rutherford, N. J., searched for him until she bumped into the body.

Mrs. Kramer was awakened just as her husband left their apartments over the store. He had been ill, and fearing he might harm himself, she followed him downstairs. She heard him go into the basement, and when she found the door locked she forced an entrance through a window.

Getting no response to calls, she searched among boxes and barrels. Finally, in attempting to reach behind a shelf, she touched the body. Her screams brought aid from neighbors.

HE KISSES GIRL ON POSTER

California Man Makes Ardent Love to Picture of Lass on Bill Board.

Oakland. —A monomania for pretty poster girls caused the arrest of Frank Castelin by Patrolman Bernard Curran at Sixteenth and Cypress streets.

Castelin was observed by Curran to stop ardent love in a bright-eyed young woman posted on a board. The man stooped and kissed the lithograph on the lips and as Curran approached kissed it again.

Curran grasped Castelin by the shoulder. He broke away and began tearing the poster from the board.

"What are you doing?" the policeman asked. "Come along with me."

"But let me take her along!" Castelin pleaded. "I love her and I want her."

Castelin is said to have appropriated many posters of beautiful women in the past. The board complained he had been complaining to the police that their advertisements were being torn down and a watch was set for the vandal.

YOUTH WINS RICH POSITION

Foster Son of Irvin G. Hooper Succeeds to His Business—Was Kind to Mother.

New York.—George Wallace Hooper, for years a member of the household of Irvin G. Hooper, a Newark architect, having won the regard of Mr. Hooper by courteous treatment of Mrs. Hooper and kindness in his mother, has become head of the firm of Hooper & Co., architects.

Young Mr. Hooper, who was named for Irvin Gouverneur Hooper, was taken into the home of the Hoopers, changed his name by act of legislature. He married Miss Cora Adelaide Ashcroft. He and his wife moved to the residence of Mrs. Anna V. Hooper, widow of Irvin G., and will reside there. The widow has inherited all her husband's estate, but has put it in charge of the young man, to whom was bequeathed $1 in the will.

O. K. SHIPS 'RIGHT' AND 'LEFT'

has announced that the change which he recently ordered would stand.

Admiral Winslow based his protest upon the simplicity of sounds of the words "right" and "left" when given as orders in a strong breeze. The general board, in which Secretary Daniels sits as president, did not agree with the admiral, however, and recommended that the change stand.

RIPLEY SEES CRISIS AHEAD

President of Santa Fe Railroad Declares That Congress is Dangerously Radical.

Chicago.—E. P. Ripley, president of the Santa Fe railroad, is distrustful of the country's political future. He has no downright fear that the United States is heading for disaster; the tendency may be checked in time to prevent a catastrophe. There are certain signs which make him hopeful that the bedding course will be stopped, but he is far from sure.

The house and the senate, in his view, are dangerously radical. The one compensating factor in Washington is that which is relative to the railroads. He believes that the Interstate Railroad Commission is less perilous than it was, say, a year ago.

Mr. Ripley returned from California yesterday and went direct to his home in Riverside. The president of the Santa Fe is gradually recovering from an acute attack of indigestion, which occurred seven weeks ago in California.

"I suppose I have unwittingly acquired the reputation of being a pessimist," said Mr. Ripley. "I am perfectly conscious of not agreeing with the majority of people who elect legislators, but long experience as a railroad man and as an observer of political tendencies impels me to say that the United States of today, in its general political aspect, that is to say, in its political trend, is not at all what the founders of this country intended."

PRINCE GETS OLO CASTLE

As Duke of Cornwall, He Comes Into Possession of Famous Maldun Castle.

London—One of the most interesting relics of prehistoric times has just come into the possession of the Prince of Wales as Duke of Cornwall in the shape of Maldun castle, the famous prehistoric encampment near Dorchester.

The encampment was offered for sale by auction, and has been bought by the Duchy of Cornwall at the instigation of the king. It first came into the market in July last, when it was offered by auction in Dorchester. The bidding started at $5,000 and the property was withdrawn at $7,125.

Meldun castle, according to Sydney Heath, the great authority on the Prince of Wales.

South Devon and Dorset coast, is "a memorial that has remained in almost perfect preservation to the not only of pre-Roman dan, but that it was occupied and strengthened by the Danes, the Dunotriges, the race of immigrant Belgae who wrested it from older Celts, who named it Mai Dun. It was certainly used by the Romans, who strengthened it with Parkers Arms, and for whom it provided something in the nature of a summer camp."

JOSEPH BROIDE STIRS THINGS

Three-Year-Old Boy Wins Crowd's Plaudits as Star in Acts of Near Tragedy.

Chicago.—Joseph Broide, three years old, crowded five thrilling adventures into the space of a few minutes when he sauntered forth from his home, 1140 West Medlock street, all alone. Here is what happened before Joseph was yanked across the parental threshold by a frightened mother:

Express wagon wrecked by driver he save Joseph from serious injury or death; driver badly bruised.

Boat-bound car stopped by motorman with violent shaking-up of passengers; car is all it was on top of Joseph, who grinned at the crowd.

West-bound car, ditto, with the additional fact that Joseph was scooped up by the fender. Great experience—he's fresh.

Automobile, in front of which Joseph was dropped from car fender, swerves sharply and misses Joseph by an inch. Joseph's somewhat peeved at not hitting the speeder.

Team of big horses knocks Joseph down as he starts to toddle at street viewing the lines of stalled cars in the east and west—all 'dine in Joseph's adventures—and finishes in his feet smiling and walks out from under the horses.

Several hundred men and women cheer Joseph as he mounts the curb and takes him into the house. Joseph not pleased at finale.

RED LAKE FALLS GAZETTE

OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE COUNTY
OFFICIAL PAPER RED LAKE FALLS CITY

$1.50 Per Year in Advance

The Gazette suggests that its readers do not take the St. Paul letter too seriously. The County Chairman is not a prophet; he is just a gasser who hits the mark occasionally and frequently misses it by more than a mile.

It is natural that the retired man of the navy should decide that his try at the full length of the Mississippi from the source to the mouth of the river. If he were really in the field, instead of barely completed his fighting, he would prefer to tackle the up stream job.

Colonel Schunk, who investigated the log jam of local historical note, has been investigating the Ohio flood. We may be advised that there was no flood or if there was none that it was due to the fact that the river banks would not contain all the water that sought to get between them.

About the surest guess on the next division is that the "seven sentences commitment" will be adopted. And it is to receive favorable consideration not because it is an attempt to "carry the country against the city"; but because the people seem beginning to understand what the proposition means and to know that it is right.

There is no doubt of the constitutionality of the Cashman distance tariff law and nothing could be gained to an attempt to "knock out" the law. The state supreme court has recently ruled that under the common law, the railroads cannot lawfully discriminate in the matter of freight rates. So the principal act of the Cashman law has always been the law, though that was unknown, and the railroads have acted on the presumption that in all things not prohibited by legislative enactment the license was theirs to do as they might choose.

CO-AUTHORS' REMARKS.

A pamphlet of questions and answers has been issued to behalf of the railroad companies which carry a more clear understanding of the matter on the part of the public to the end that a deal of advertising space in the newspaper press, to bring the facts home to the people of the country.—Whechosk's Weekly.

A convention has been called in Dalton July first to consider the proposition of clearing land. There are millions of acres of land in Northern Minnesota that would be in great demand if the small buyer were assured that part of the land they settled on would be cleared so that they could make a living from the time they came to it. If proper methods and necessary financial aid for clearing land can be devised and applied in connection will be a source of much good to Northern Minnesota.—Roseau Region.

Because of the recent rate decision it is said Jim Hill has ordered all construction to be stopped that is not absolutely necessary, several pieces of construction to Montana were called off. There is no appetite for good reason why we of Minnesota should pay a high passenger and freight rate to fill the coffers of the Northern so Montana and the other western states as well as Canada may be built up. We would not object to paying high rates if the money was spent here. It costs many thousands of dollars more to build and maintain roads in portions of the west than it does here, yet we must pay practically the same proportionate rate as they charge the west. In other words we are taxed to help defray the heavy expense of building and maintaining western roads.—Greenbush Tribune.

The time is now at hand for road work and already work has started in some parts of Renville county. The entire Northwest will use, wisely or not, some millions of dollars for road construction of which, according to past experience, ninety cents out of each dollar will be wasted. It is certainly money wasted when work on the roads is done by men who know nothing about building roads. Dumping dirt or great pieces of sod in the road does more harm then good. Some roads north of Hector have been made unusable instead of improved just because the men at work know nothing about how good roads should be built. It takes a man educated in the line of work to supervise the building of roads and those in charge of laying out the different roads to be improved should see that capable men be placed in charge of the work.—Hector Mirror.

Conquers Most all Diseases Without Drugs.

This Most Remarkable Evidence of Most Astonding cures of Disease, Wrought by the Renowned Dr. J. McDONALD, Doctor of Chiropractic without medicine operation, electricity, apparatus, appliance or artificial means of any sort.

THE MONSTROUS MEDICINE EVIL

Since the beginning of mankind no other agency has been responsible for such frightful destruction to life and health as—the Drug Delusion.

Many people cannot imagine it possible for them to be cured of disease unless they "take something." This belief is due partly to the fact that those who take medicine often are cured in spite of the medicine—they would be cured without it. This is due to the fact that drugs often change the symptoms—perhaps "cure" one disease to bring another. Drugs may produce deceptive results and be "killing the patient" by deadening the nerves for a time —though they do not remove that which caused the pain; the pain is liable to come back worse than before, when the effect of the opiate has worn off. Other poisons are used by producing artificial stimulation for a time—though there is bound to be a depressing after-result.

Why Take Poison?

You know the evil of poisoning by headache powders, soothing syrups, etc. And the time is not far distant when you and people generally will recognize the danger of taking any drugs for any purpose. Drugs make the condition so much worse, not only because of the actual harm they do, but because they lower the vitality and lessen the bodys' power to resist disease.

Famous Physicians Condemn Drugs.

"Thousands are annually slaughtered in the sick room."—Dr. Marshall Hall.

"The death rate among doctors is thicker than among any of the other professions. If medicine is a science, why is this so?"—Dr. Hufeland.

"The science of drug-medication is founded on conjecture and improved by murder."—Sir Astley Cooper.

"If the whole materia medica, as now used, could be sunk to the bottom of the sea, it would be better for mankind and all the worse for the fishes."—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

"What do persons who call themselves reasonable do in the midst of a hundred doctors, with their hundred different medicines, each affirming that his own is good and all the rest are bad? Do they reject them all? Not a bit of it—they swallow them all."—Dr. Trall.

LET THE SICK REJOICE.

To you who are sick and ailing, weak and weary, discouraged and depressed, this should prove a welcome message. Thousands of cases of bitter disgust because of the serious-ness of your condition—even though doctors have condemned you to die—let this give you hope.

Read what I have accomplished—without medicine—after physicians and specialists failed, with medicine. Read how I have saved men and women from the surgeon's knife, from chronic invalidism, from lives of misery and uselessness. Read of those considered hopelessly incurable whom I have restored to perfect health and strength and vigor.

If you are at all fair-minded, though you do not understand my methods—even though you have little faith—Dr. Douglas Healing—you will at least agree that "there must be something in it," for you cannot question the marvelous results of my treatment. You will at least believe that my system of healing is worthy of further investigation.

Amazing Evidences.

If you will call I will show you many more astounding testimonials—the original letters—which will cause you to open your eyes in astonishment. Cases that you would believe no one under treatment. You can call at my rooms and meet people as well as wish. I'll give you their names and addresses. Listen to their wonderful stories from their own lips. Hear them with your own ears. See with your own eyes.

Then you will be absolutely convinced beyond doubt that in the hands of these seemingly miraculous cures—even where all else fails—that I do effect these cures without drugs, operations, massage, manipulation, electricity, apparatus, appliance, or any other artificial means whatever.

AILMENTS WHICH I SUCCESS-FULLY REMOVE THE CAUSE

Are you, or any of your loved ones suffering from any of the following: Asthma, Catarrh, Hay Fever, Grippe, Bronchitis, Tonsilitis, Any Throat or Lung Trouble, Nervousness, Neuralgia, Hysteria, Sleeplessness, Chronic Headache, Neuritis, Nervous Prostration, Epilepsy (Fits), St. Vitus' Dance, Paralysis, Locomotor Ataxia, Sciatica, Rheumatism in any form; Lumbago, Gout, Obesity, Liver Affection, Indigestion or Dyspepsia, Catarrah of the Stomach, Weak or Flabby Heart, Constipation, Diarrhoea, Intestinal Trouble, Piles, Various Veins, Ulcers, Abscess, Goitre, Diabetes, Dropsy, Bright's Disease, any Kidney or Bladder Trouble, Anemia, Blood or Skin Disease, Deafness, Deformity, General Debility, Disease or Weakness Peculiar to the sex, or any other physical or mental ailment?

Do you consider yourself free from any particular ailment but are at the same time weak and nervous, depressed, "blue", melancholy, lacking in vitality, energy and ambition?

Costs You Nothing To Consult Me.

No matter what your affliction—nor how severely, nor how long you have suffered—no matter how many kinds of treatment you have taken without securing satisfactory relief, you owe it to come and see me at the earliest possible moment. Don't wait till your condition becomes any worse, or until complications set in.

I won't charge you a cent for examination, consultation or advice. Tell me all about your trouble—and what I can do for you—what I have done for others, perhaps afflicted just as you are. Then after all that you see, hear, and after having my opinion of your case, you decide not to place your case in my hands, you will not be under any obligations to me whatever.

But I am sure you will be positively astounded at the remarkable proofs I submit on what I do—be entirely convinced that all you have heard about me and my work is absolutely true.

Valuable Book Free.

If unable to call at once send for my vluable book. This will be sent free. It contains wonderful truths and facts that no one can deny. Write for it at once.

Or, if you treat my patients by correspondence. It will be necessary for you to see me in person. My new methods are quick-acting. Regardless of your condition, I urge you to never regret coming to me for advice and treatment.

My fees are very reasonable, and, in most cases, there is no medicine or anything else to buy.

Don't Put it Off.

Make up your mind to come without delay. Make up your mind to shake off the shackles of that disease which is making life miserable for you and for those around you—become a new man or woman—learn to feel new life and vigor pulsating in every organ and part of your body —to enjoy the fullest measure of health, strength and happiness and a greater degree of success in all your undertakings!

Don't forget that it costs nothing to talk it over with me. Don't wait! If you live out of town take the first train for Crookston—you'll be thankful ever afterward for having done so.

THE SPICE OF LIFE.

A Catch.

Father (angrily entering parlor at twelve-thirty), "Look here, young man! Do you stay as late as this when you call on the other girls?"

Jack (trembling with fear) "No-no sir!"

Father (appeased, as he leaves the room) "That's all right then! (aside) Thank Heavas! Mary has caught on at last."—Puck.

Happens Frequently.

We don't see anything in the punch in punctuation, but we do know a lot of punctuation is put into punk.—Berkshire Eagle.

Yarnitha.

"Daughter and her mom must have had a terrible quorrel."

"Why so, ma?"

"Five pounds of candy, a bunch of roses, and two motioce tickets have just arrived."—Judge.

Revenge.

Father: You have no sense; I'm going to cut you off with a million.

The Son: If you do I'll integrate the family by riding around in a second-hand auto.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

How It is Done.

Owner: What'll it cost to repair this car of mine?

Garage Proprietor: What alls it?

Owner: I don't know.

Gergse Proprietor: Thirty-four dollars and sixty-five cents.—Puck.

Polite Retort.

"You are gotting very bold, sir," said the barber.

"You, sir!" retorted the customer, "are not free from a number of defects I could mention if I cared to become personal."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Choice of Words.

"What's that men's occupation?"

"Well," replied Senator Sorghum, "it depends on the point of view whether you say he is conducting a campaign of education or is just plain lobbyist."—Washington Star.

Encouraging News.

Berlin is getting a new golf course. This is good news, for it is hoped that, in course of time, the Germans will follow our example by paying more attention to golf than to national defense, and then we shall not be so unfairly handicapped.—Punch.

Stump in Sight.

"Yessir," said the big man, "I'm opposed to the election of United States Senators by popular vote."

"My, I'm surprised to hear you say that," said the little man. "What are your reasons?"

"I manufacture fliotographs," replied the big man."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Feared the Other.

The men of great financial prominence had met with an accident.

"They have a doctor in each car," said the doctor.

Just at that moment the moo recovered consciousness and exclaimed

"If its a surgical operation go ahead, but if its another investigation, give me an anesthetic."—Washington Star.

Lucky Clancy.

Hogan—But Clancy's wife got sweepstakes?

Grogan—She did. Four cops torsher off him.—Brooklyn Life.

A Clean Mop.

He—If I call pa "pop," why can't I call ma "mop?"

She—If you do she'll wipe the floor with you.—Judge.

Obeying Orders.

Aunt—Willie, why didn't you wash your face this morning?

Willie—The doctor said to be careful and not get my feet wet, and I guess my face is just as good as dry-feet.

Wrong Diagnosis.

"So you're going to marry again! I thought you said your heart was broken!" "I guess it was just a mistake."

COMMISSIONER'S PROCEEDINGS.

tion of said repairs are greater than the total costs of said repairs, including damages.

Third, That said repairs will be of public utility and promote the public health and that the report of said engineer is complete and correct.

Fourth, That said ditch was heretofore duly established according to law.

Now Therefore, As conclusions from the foregoing findings, we, the county board of county of Red Lake, State of Minnesota, at the special session of said board, held at the time above specified, being satisfied that the repair of the said ditch is necessary, and will be of public utility and conducive to public health, and public benefit and convenience to hereby order and require that the said ditch be repaired as set forth in the engineer's report thereon, and that the contracts for such repairs be let forthwith duly let and, sold by the county auditor, as required by law.

It is further ordered, that the expenses of such repairs be paid out of the general revenue fund of the county treasury of said county, portioned to and that the amount of all expenses in said proceedings be assessed and charged against all lands originally assessed for the construction of said ditch in proportion, according to the original assessment, as provided by law.

The BANK of PERSONAL SERVICE

BIGGER BANK ACCOUNTS

With hardly an exception, depositors in the savings department of this bank are possessed of bigger bank balances than ever before.

Naturally, all these savings customers started in a small way, some with ten dollars, many with a single dollar, yet all intent upon building up a bank account a dollar at a time.

They are succeeding and succeeding well. It seemed slow the first few months. Now they advance more rapidly for their semi-annual 5 per cent interest is big help.

What they have done, you can do—and this bank invites you to open your account at once and begin saving for the future.

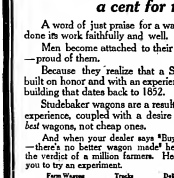
Studebaker



"I've had my Studebaker 15 years—and not a cent for repairs"

A word of just praise for a wagon that has done its work faithfully and well.

Men become attached to their Studebakers—proud of them.

Because they realize that a Studebaker is built on honor and with an experience in wagon building that dates back to 1852.

Studebaker wagons are a result of that long experience, coupled with a desire to build the best wagons, not cheap ones.

And when your dealer says "Buy a Studebaker—there's no better wagon made" he's giving you the verdict of a million farmers. He is not asking you to try an experiment.

Mass Meeting In Equality Twp.

The residents of the Southwest quarter of the town of Equality met in a mass indignation meeting at the Havlek school house last week to protest against the organization of Oklee. This district has built one of the best school houses with all outhouses, ventilation, heating and equipment required by the state for state aid during the last 3 years, and the people feel that if Oklee wants a good school they can go and do likewise. A collection was taken up and Henry Compton was sent down to present the case of the people to County Attorney Boughton. The feeling runs high and the farmers feel that, the Oklee people should consider the wishes of the victims in this case and consider also the outlay to this district within the last three years.

A Stowaway Deserter

By ALBERT T. KENYON

The second officer of the ship Athena steaming between New York and Havana one morning walked aft where the captain was standing talking with a passenger. The mate was conducting a stowaway who had just been found concealed in the hold. The latter was a man about 25 years old and appeared to be healthy and strong. He was partly dressed in the uniform of a United States soldier. On his face was a bitter, rebellious look.

"Who are you?" asked the captain sternly.

"A deserter."

"You don't seem ashamed of being one."

"Nor should I, seeing that I had a tyrant for a captain."

"Well, you'll have to work your way." The deserter answered that he was down among the coal bunkers, where, equipped with a shovel, he could feed into the furnace. The ship was off Cape Hatteras when her rudder post broke and left her at the mercy of wind and waves, the former blowing directly on shore. To put in a new post at sea in rough weather was not to be thought of. Some expedient must be made for gaining steerage way temporarily; then the ship must be taken into port for repairs. The captain planned to fix a chain to each side of the rudder, lead it out of each chain sip on to the deck, attach both to a capstan and thus steer the ship.

There was a heavy iron ring on each side of the rudder, and the intention was to pass a rope through the ring and secure an attachment for the chain to the ring by means of the rope. But how get the rope through the rings? When the ship was out of sight of land the rings were five feet under water. Until the sea was smooth enough to permit a boat to be lowered to the rudder, a wave the size was lifted and the rings exposed. The problem was to get the ropes through the rings when they were thus raised above the surface. The only way was for a man to be lowered on to the rudder, go down with it and up again, putting the rope through the rings when they were at the highest point. To succeed a man for the purpose would not avail. He would likely be dashed against the stern. To do his work he must cling to the rudder.

The captain ordered the ship's crew lined up on deck and called for volunteers to do the work. Only one man was to work at a time. The reason for calling for a number was that it was supposed several would be disabled before one succeeded.

And so it proved. The first man was lost by losing his grip. The second was hauled up unconscious. The third was disabled, and the fourth was killed by being dashed against the ship's stern. That ended the volunteering, so far as the crew was concerned, and the work had not been done.

Then the stowaway, who had come on deck to see what was going on, stepped forward and offered himself for the next victim. The crowd was approaching the coast, and death was staring all on board in the face. The offer was accepted as a last hope. The man had on only trousers and woolen shirt, and his strength was apparent. A rope was looped under his shoulders, the one to be attached was given him, and when the ship was about to plunge he was quickly lowered.

Clinging to the rings, knowing that he would not have time to do his work before the stern would go down, he waited to be submerged and rise again. As he disappeared there was silence on the stern to watch him wonderer if when the rudder came up he would be there. Few expected that he would. It was a good minute before the rise came, but the stowaway came with it. While the rudder was exposed he run the end of the rope through the ring.

Down again he went, was gone another minute, came up and this time passed the rope through the other ring. A third time he sank and rose, and before the stern went down again he had the rope looped around him. He was pulled in and laid unconscious on the deck.

The one rope passed through the two rings enabled the crew to get the chains through and thus secure control of the rudder not ten minutes before the ship would have been bumping on the sands. The lives of all being in danger, no one paid any attention to the stowaway till the rudder was raised by hand port and starboard, making a curve, stood out to sea. Then the captain hurried to the side of the man who had saved him. His crew and his passengers and, lifting him up, embraced him. The stowaway opened his eyes; the captain called for some liquor and forced it down his throat.

He revived in, but the stowaway did not lack for attention and recovered soon. When he was able to leave his cabin the captain asked him what he could do for him, offering to go to Washington. Into his service and see if a commission in the army could not be secured for him. But the deserter said that he would rather be under the orders of one he could depend upon than a stranger, and begged to be promoted as fast as there were vacancies, studying navigation the while under the captain's tuition.

OLD LOVER SHOOTS GIRL; KILLS SELF

REMI DE ROSIE ALSO SHOOTS AT RIVAL WHO FLEES IN A PANIC.

CLERK AT CORCORAN, MINN.

Hennepin County Village is Shaken by Tragedy—Girl In a Serious Condition and May Die.

Minneapolis—Remi De Rosie, clerk of the town of Corcoran, Hennepin County, shot and killed himself after he had tried to kill Miss Hattie Weler, who lives on a farm one and a half miles from Corcoran, and Rudolph Bahler, when the latter two returned from an automobile ride.

Miss Weler was shot in the left side near the heart. Her condition is serious. The last seen of Bahler he was fleeing for a strip of woods near the Weler farmstead with De Rosie in pursuit, firing his revolver.

Commits Suicide Finally.

De Rosie then returned to his aged mother's home, hid her goodbye, and, getting another revolver, went into the garden and shot himself through the head.

The shooting was the climax of a love affair that began two years ago. De Rosie was 36 and Miss Weler 22. Six months ago Miss Weler's parents are said to have ended and Rudolph Bahler was seen calling at the farmstead. De Rosie, who had lead a sober, industrious life, seemed to be brooding over something, say the villagers, but he took no one into his confidence.

When news of the shooting spread about the countryside, the residents of the little town of Corcoran hurried to the Weler farmstead, and when it was discovered that Bahler was missing, searching parties spread out for nearly a mile, beating the woods and brush into which Bahler and De Rosie disappeared.

Seemed Depressed Tuesday.

On Tuesday night De Rosie visited the Weler home. He seemed much depressed and while talking about Miss Weler he tried to take a drink from a bottle that bore a poison label. Mrs. Weler grabbed the vial from his hand and tried to calm him. In a few minutes he drew another vial from his pocket. For a second time Mrs. Weler thwarted his efforts to take his life by taking the bottle from him. She has given both bottles to deputy sheriffs, who were sent to the scene of the shooting.

Early Wednesday evening Bahler, who had lived an auto at Rogers, called for Miss Weler. They had been gone several hours when De Rosie reached the home. When told that they had left, Rosie was out De Rosie left at once, but a few minutes later was seen loitering to the road in front of the house. Two minutes later an auto chugged up to the front door. Miss Hattie stepped out and tripped lightly up the steps. Suddenly a cry was heard. Miss Hattie turned and saw De Rosie running down the porch toward her. She turned to run and De Rosie shot.

Bahler leaped out of the auto after De Rosie and the girl. No sooner had De Rosie shot at the girl than he turned on Bahler and fired. Bahler whirled and began racing the other way with De Rosie in close pursuit and firing as he ran.

The shooting occurred about 7 o'clock. About a half hour later De Rosie walked into the farmhouse of Aaron Krueger, who lives on the outskirts of the town. "Well, I just did it. I put away both of them," he said to told Krueger. Krueger had not heard of the shooting and could not understand De Rosie's incoherent talk. In a few minutes De Rosie left for his home.

Tells His Mother Goodbye.

Old Mrs. De Rosie, his widowed mother, was waiting or her son to return. Entering the little living room of the cottage, De Rosie bent over and kissed his mother. "Goodbye, mother, I am going to kill myself," he said in a calm voice. Mrs. De Rosie made no move to stop him as he left the room. Going to his own room first for a second revolver he went outside, placed the gun against his head and pulled the trigger.

De Rosie, who had lived all his life in Corcoran, had held the offices of town clerk for several years, having been twice re-elected.

Eagles Choose Minneapolis.

Fergus Falls.—The Eagles' state convention elected George Krueger, Brainerd, president, and chose Minneapolis as their next meeting place.

Parade Featured by Floats.

Austin.—Over 3,000 persons participated in a grand celebration in La Fayette park on Wednesday. There were many beautiful symbolic floats in a parade which preceded the picnic spread. N. F. Hall, state grange secretary, said: "I have lectured from the Atlantic to the Pacific and have seen many grange parades, but this is by far the finest I have ever witnessed. About 2,000 grangers participated in making the event an unqualified success.

Burned Plant to be Rebuilt.

Mankato, Minn.—H. E. Carney states that the Mankato Cement works, which was practically destroyed by fire Monday night, will immediately be rebuilt, or an entirely new plant be put up.

Rose Creek.—Ole Asiackson, a prominent and well-to-do farmer of Nevada township, was killed here. He was leaving town when his team ran away, throwing him to the ground. Death resulted from a broken neck. He leaves a wife and large family.

CAPTAIN WHITNEY DEAD.

End Come to Well-known Veteran and Former Editor at Daughter's Home.

St. Paul.—Captain Charles C. Whitney, veteran of the Civil war, and for many years a resident of Minnesota, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Fred H. Hills, 1172 Laurel avenue. For some time Captain Whitney suffered from an acute attack of stomach trouble.

As editor of the Marshall, Minn., News-Messenger, Captain Whitney was a prominent Minnesota newspaper man, and at one time was state printer. He was interested in matters pertaining to the Grand Army of the Republic, and was a member of the board of trustees of the Old Soldiers' home. He was a Mason, and belong to the Elks and Knights of Columbus.

Mr. Whitney was born in Massachusetts, March 20, 1846, and came to Minnesota in 1879. Except during the time he was engaged as state printer, he resided at Marshall, Minn. Six months ago he came to St. Paul. Mrs. Whitney was his wife. Besides the widow he is survived by the following children: Mrs. Hills of St. Paul, Joseph, who is identified with the News-Messenger at Marshall; Jack and Richard of Marshall, and Frank of New York city.

The body was taken to Marshall for burial. Funeral services were held Monday.

Luverne—Over 100 bankers, representing nearly every town in the second congressional district, gathered in Luverne last week to attend the eleventh annual meeting of the district group. The address of welcome was delivered by C. H. Christopherson, of this city, who called attention to the fact that those present virtually represented a banking capitalization approximately five and three-quarter millions.

While there are no large cities in this district, he said, the district has 100 banks, having total deposits of $25,000,000, and resources approximating $44,000,000.

The following officers were elected: Emil G. Hage, New Ulm, president; A. E. Sadlow, Rushford, vice president; G. W. Supjen, Mankato, secretary-treasurer. Wells, Fairmont, and M. O. Pace, Beaver Creek, executive committee.

OVER TWENTY GIRLS MISSING

St. Paul Police Find Themselves Baffled by Problem of Disappearances.

St. Paul.—According to Lieutenant Thomas Delaney, chief of detectives, at the St. Paul police have received reports that more than twenty 15 or 16-year old girls have disappeared under strange circumstances during the past ten days.

Though many have been located and returned home, new cases come to light each day. The police say that the situation is a serious one.

Duluth Strike is Ended.

Duluth.—Duluth's several strikes, which threatened to spread to the mills at Cloquet and Virginia and tie up the lumber industry of northern Minnesota, is broken. Early Monday all of the Duluth mills resumed work with crews running from 50 to 75 per cent of normal. The union leaders tried desperately to keep the men from returning to work, but their efforts were unavailing. The union men represented but a small percentage of the employes of the mills and many of the men were eager to return to work.

St. Paul, June 17—This city experienced the hottest day of the year Sunday when the thermometer jumped to 94.2 degrees and hovered about that point during the afternoon. The heat was the most intense since the 25th of 1912. Thousands of sweltering people sought relief in parks on lakes, rivers and creeks. Bathing beaches were jammed and the call on the street car company was so great that much difficulty ensued in caring for patrons. At the Wells theater a long line of would-be bathers, blocking long.

Finds Watch After Years.

Blue Earth.—While working in a field, the son of John Franke, living near here, plowed up a gold watch that he lost while at work in the same field seven years ago. The watch was all right.

Moose Lake.—Moose Lake will celebrate July 4 in elaborate style. The program will start with a parade at 10.30 a. m. A ball game between Barnum and Moose Lake has been arranged for the afternoon, and fireworks at night.

HOG MARKET FOR STATE FAIR

Plans Discussed on Northern Pacific "Livestock Special"—Train Attracts Crowds.

Ulen.—The Minnesota state fair is to become a great hog market for the farmers of the state. This fact was brought to light in a talk with W. M. Hagerman, the hog specialist on board the Northern Pacific-College of Agriculture "Livestock Special" train. Mr. Hagerman said that at the fair last year something like two hundred hogs changed hands, and that this year the number would be even greater with favorable conditions. The reason for the plan lies in the fact that many farmers like to buy at the fair because there they have the pick of a large number of herds, whereas when they go to buy from an individual breeder they have the pick of only one herd. The success of last year's trading, therefore, has led to the decision to try to increase the interest for the venture by fall. To make the trading easy and expeditious a set of scales will be put in near the swine building.

DOCTORS IN ANNUAL SESSION

American Medical Association Meets in Minneapolis—Large Increase in the Membership.

Minneapolis, June 16. — The sixty-fourth annual session of the American Medical association opened this morning with the first meeting of the house of delegates at 10 o'clock in the library of the anatomical building of the University of Minnesota. Dr. Alexander Brodie, New York, president of the association, called the delegates to order. After the report of the committee on credentials and the organization of the house, the reports of officers of the house were presented.

The report of the secretary, Dr. Alex. R. Craig, Chicago, showed that the membership had increased during the past year from 84,283 to 87,012, while the membership of the fifty-two constituent state associations had increased from 70,021 last year to 70, 536. There are 2,061 component county societies and in 2,061 counties in the United States.

Begins Trip to New Orleans.

Park Rapids.—Quartermaster Andrew Koehn of the United States battleship Colorado left Itasca at 8 a. m. Monday to run down the Mississippi river. He was accompanied by a delegation from the Park Rapids commercial club through the chain of lakes, recently made navigable by a system of locks and dams to a point in the extreme end of Hubbard lake, where he was met by another delegation in autos and taken to the tiny source of the Mississippi. Mayor Tabor of Park Rapids wired greetings to the mayor of New Orleans. Ole Koehns arrival in Minneapolis about 2 o'clock he will call on the governor for a letter to the governor of Louisiana. He expects to complete the trip to New Orleans in ninety days.

"Montana Jack," Bitten by a Rattler

Minneapolis, June 17. — "Montana Jack," bitten by a rattlesnake at the Shubert-Lyceum theater festival, won't know until next Friday whether the reptile's venom will be fatal to him, according to the show entertainer, and "Montana Jack," who is a half-breed Indian, says that he knows as much about rattlesnakes as any man in the country. He has been in bed since he was bitten, May 30, while the snake, which he coaxes to a curious crowd at one of the Lake street shows, is the same one the snake slipped from his grasp and bit him on the thumb.

School Officers Meet at Sandstone.

Sandstone.—Five county school officers held their fifth annual meeting here and there were over 300 visitors from neighboring towns. Assistant State Superintendent Tonning was the speaker in the evening. A basket picnic supper were served by the Presbyterian church women and the crowd was entertained with moving pictures until train time.

Dollar Verdict in Libel Suit.

Brainerd.—The jury in the case of Mons Mahlum vs. Hugo Schwartzkopf, wherein Mahlum sued for damages because of the publication of certain alleged libelous statements in a pamphlet issued by the latter, returned a verdict of one dollar damages in favor of Mahlum's attorney, M. S. Ryan, says "Mr. Mahlum never wasted money, but he did get what he deserved, and the people of this community that the pamphlet contained untruths."

Convention At Owatonna.

Owatonna.—The Mankato district Epworth convention held a three-day session in this city last week. The convention speakers were Bishop Quayle, who lectured on Emerson and preached the convention sermon, and Dr. I. B. Wood of Rochester, who spoke on "Shame and Shrines in the Holy Land," and Mrs. B. M. Longly of St. Paul. Rev. Wilbur Keeney of Mankato preached the closing sermon. In the absence of the district president, the convention was presided over by Dr. G. A. Cahoa of Mankato.

Editors Meet in St. Paul.

St. Paul.—Newspaper editors and publishers from all parts of America were in St. Paul Friday to attend the meeting of the managing editors of the associated newspapers Friday and Saturday.

Luverne.—The District Federation of Women's clubs met here, with delegates present from all parts of the district. Several interesting papers were presented. A reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. La Dun.

PROPER COLORS FOR WALLS

Always a Few Rules That Are Well to Keep in Mind When Decorating.

If we redecorate in a thorough way our first puzzle is the choice of a color or. A few rules are useful. Blue, green, brown, and gray are excellent colors for sunny, well-lighted rooms. If the room is on the north side of the house or in ill-lighted we may need to use yellow or yellow tint on the walls in order to produce the sunny appearance the room otherwise lacks. Tan is a good all-around color and is useable in well-lighted or poorly lighted rooms.

All these colors are best if soft. For example, a sage green wall is much more pleasing than a bright green or a leaf green wall; a copenhagen blue is better than a vivid blue; the most agreeable gray for walls is brownish gray in tone. Tan is a great variety of shades is always a favorite.

Bright red should never be chosen. It is crude in color and tiresome to live with. A soft mulberry red is sometimes a desirable color, and a brownish or Indian red is also in good taste.

As a wallpaper always looks darker when hung on the wall than it does in the sample, we must take care to select medium or light shades, if we want cheerful rooms.

EXQUISITE BRIDAL COSTUME

Model of white liberty satin with draped and slashed skirt and pointed train. Deep square decollete corsage with drapery of rhinestones.

Fevered Colors.

The premiaisse color of the season is unquestionably yellow in all shades, called color by the knowing ones, and commencing with this delicate tint the big gamut of yellows is run, to the deepest russet orange.

Yellow reds are also very much the fashion, also shades of terra cotta and mahogany, together with Persian reds. Generally speaking, there is a tendency to get away from navy blue and black, in favor of reds.

As a matter of fact, the showings have included almost all colors, but there is a feeling that shades of tan, both medium and strong, and shades of gray will be popular.

Moires, Brocades and Chiffons.

Moires silks are one of the accepted novelties for wraps, combination purposes and for garnitures. Brocades and matelasses, in variety, are being largely used for outer garments, combinations, trimmings, and confidence is expressed in an increased distribution during the forthcoming fall season. Plain and printed chiffons are staples.

SAVES TIME AND TROUBLE

Case for Delicate Centerpiece Not Hard to Make, and Is Especially Valuable.

It is sometimes a difficult matter to keep centerpieces from becoming crushed after laundering, so many women make a case in which to roll them. Purchase a piece of cretonne two and a quarter yards long and at one end turn up a box wide enough to cover a pote an inch in diameter and in length a little shorter than the width of the cretonne. When choosing the material select a dainty design showing alternate stripes of flowers and a delicate color.

Bind the three sides with half-inch washable ribbon, stitching it neatly either by hand or on the machine. Attach three pieces of ribbon to the end. These are used to tie the case when the centerpieces are rolled in place.

This is an especially useful article, and should be added to the linen chest, and there will never be any need of pressing a centerpiece before it is to place on the dining table. It requires only a short time to make an attractive case of this variety, and one will never cease to sing its praises when it has saved you much unnecessaryness.

Now that you have supplied a case for the centerpieces, provide like articles for the doilies of your luncheon set. From cardboard cut two circular pieces an inch wider than the plate doilies and two others an inch wider than the diameter of the tumbler doilies. Cover these with cotton wadding and sprinkle with lavender.

Using Cretonne to match the centerpiece case, cut circular pieces enough to cover the top and bottom of the disks, allow for a half inch for turning in all around, and neatly whipstitch the two together on three sides only and bind with the half-inch ribbon. At three places attach pieces of ribbon with which to tie the doilies when the doilies are placed between the two cretonne. A set of cases for a luncheon set would make a most acceptable gift to a gentlemen friend or to the systematic housewife who likes a place for everything.

Dainty Garments for the Newcomer.

All the best layette models of simple garments made entirely by hand. The expectant mother who knows how to do neat sewing may prepare for her baby a layette good enough for a prince, and of the same materials as would be used for any little royal highness. The fabrics chosen for little slips and dresses are fine, sheer linen or cotton weave. Where considerable dainty hand embroidery is to be used, linen would best be chosen, as it is durable enough to make the work worth while. It has the advantage also of keeping perfectly white after much laundering, and irons smooth without starch. Lawn, sheer linen or cotton, in fine qualities, sheer nainsook and French batiste are preferred for making the baby's dresses and petticoats.

Japanese Crepe for Children.

Among the newest dresses for children are those of Japanese crepe. The use of Japanese crepe is directly in accord with the current fashion for materials of a crepy character. Moreover, the Japanese variety is decidedly appropriate for a dainty effect and in quality, to any other crepe, because it is woven by hand and the crepe feature is produced in the weaving, making to other instances it is brought about by a process of shrinkage.

From an Old Raincoat.

An apron with a bib can be made for wash day, or when you give the baby a bath. A bathing cap, and bag to carry your bathing suit, and that utility cause dear to the suitcase of travelers, may be made from a discarded raincoat.

Starch for Laces and Muslins.

Mix a small quantity of corn flour smoothly with cold water. This will be found excellent for lightly stiffening all delicate and fancy fabrics, including veils and neckwear of sheer materials.

ADVANTAGES IN KEEPING FARM ACCOUNTS

Young Money Makers.

(BY MRS. A. J. WILDER.)

The accounts are balanced for the past year and the books closed. It is too late now to make any difference in the showing and we can only prove our advance in knowledge by doing better this year.

Here is where the farmer who keeps his accounts in shape and also keeps a record of the work done on the farm, has the advantage of the one who thinks it is too much trouble to keep books. The farmer who does not keep the farm accounts has a small chance of profiting by either his mistakes or his successes to the full extent. Although the part of the farm business may be making him a good profit, and another is running him behind he is nearly as apt to increase the losing branch as the paying one.

Of course a man can keep a good deal of his business in his head, but if you have never made the trial you will be surprised at how different the idea you have in your head may be from what the books will show.

Perhaps the past year has not been as successful as you had hoped it would be. You may be just a little discouraged over the balance in your favor at the bank, but if you have increased the fertility of an acre of your land, there is a balance in another kind of bank, and one in which there is no danger of the cashier absconding with the funds.

The increased productiveness of the soil is a balance in his favor that very few farmers take into account and it is just as real and tangible an asset to the farmer as the bank book.

Talking of accounts—there have been some articles going the rounds lately, telling the farmer that in order to ascertain if he is making any profit from his farming operation he must add to his list of expenses each year interest on the value of his farm and all his farm equipment, considering it as much money invested, which of course it is. The income from the farm must pay this interest as well as all running expenses and what is left after this is profit.

This is all very well and good business, provided the other side of the account is kept with equal care.

Don't forget to give the farm credit for the living of the family. If the farmer and his wife succeed in be figured at city interest rates, they sell yourself all those fresh eggs, frying, roasting and broiling chickens and fresh fruits and vegetables at city prices and give the farm credit. If every bushel of grain or ball of hay that old Dobbin eats is charged to the running expenses of the farm, that hire old Dobbin if livery makes whenever you or the family take a Sunday drive, or drive to visit each of the neighbors. What about the automobile? When you get to that stage you are probably not counting expenses.

There is also the question of fuel. What farmer who has his own wood growing on the place ever makes any account of what it is worth. While we are setting down the debits and credits let's give the farm credit for the wood at market prices. It will help toward balancing the wages of the hired man, which have already been put down on the debit side, and will be no more than fair.

Then there is the item of house rent. If we make the farm pay interest on the money invested in the houses and barns we have no right to live there without allowing a fair rent. To do so would be making the farm pay twice. Really we ought also to allow rent on the land to the credit of the farm. It will help it, you know, to pay its interest money when due.

There are, you see, two sides to this question of accounts as well as to many other questions.

While every farmer should keep accounts with and of the farm, he should not be satisfied with merely doing them. If these items on the credit side are omitted or forgotten, while all the debits are carefully put down, there is apt to be a feeling of dissatisfaction with the year's work, which is unnecessary.

IMPROVEMENT OF CHICKEN FLOCK

Strong, Rugged Health and Early Maturity Two Great Points to Consider.

(BY PROF JOHN WILLARD MOLYNEUX)

An old saying with breeders of farm stock is that the best cross is with the best of the breed. The best of the only cross that should ever be made with chickens.

History fails to show a single instance where any man gained in his stock improvement through crossing two distinct breeds. It is perfectly true that the resulting offspring are frequently sturdier and grow faster than either of the parent breeds. They may even lay more eggs, but if they are almost certain to fail totally to reproduce themselves. Consequently the third generation will be far inferior to the original breeds used in the cross. Crossing breaks up all the rules of breedity and is of value only in producing new breeds, and very rarely then.

Don't try to get better chickens by crossing two established breeds, because you will surely fail, and instead waste your time trying to grade up a scrub flock by using pure-bred males because its is a waste. Start with pure birds and bring up the health and prolificacy of your flock by careful weeding out the non-producers and selecting the young breeders with great care. Pick out next year's breeders while they are small and watch them carefully as they develop.

Strong, rugged health and early maturity are the two great points to consider for the poultryman who wants to get the most profit from his stock.

Separate the pullets from the cockerels as soon as you place the young birds in their permanent quarters. Both sexes will develop better from then on if separated and fed on special pullets. Have birds of the same size together to avoid crowding and stunting the smaller ones.

Remember that the pullet which shows a red comb and wattles early in life, and the one that lays first apart indicate a large chest and body cavity. A well developed body, long lean, rangy bird with a hawk beak, narrow head, sunken eye and knock-kneed shanks, are the ones that useless, regardless of the excellency of their breeding.

Sort them out while they are young, before their presence becomes covers up the most glaring defects.

Planting Carnations.

Set carnation slips in the garden, cause they will bear well September, cutting off any buds, and the last of September pot, setting in a sheltered, give plenty of air and sunshine. Water sparingly, only with weak tobacco water to prevent green fly.

Pea-sh Tree Borer.

Mr. Peach Tree Borer is busy these days. Get after him with a piece of sharp wire.

Vanilla for Peas.

If you want a long season of peas plant from the earliest dwarf to the latest tall growing sort. The latter must have some support, and three-foot poultry netting is ideal for the purpose. Late peas should be planted deep if the soil is loose and mellow, and when the plants are beginning to vine, mulch heavily, and they will bear much stronger. Peas are cool weather plants, and like a cool, moist soil, which condition can be secured by mulching.

Docking Lambs.

Lambs should be docked before they are three days old. The nervous system has not developed, they do not feel the operation, and are more easily cared for in case of scours. Using a hot knife has shown no advantage, in fact, has caused more trouble. With older lambs I doubt if a razor-sharp knife is an advantage. I used to use one, but found there was a great deal more bleeding than with an ordinary knife that seemed to bruise the vein lightly.

ADD ANOTHER ROOM.

And Will Try and Get Into the Semi-Graded Class.

The school board of Dist. No. 9 Ducktown, at a meeting held recently decided to add another room to their school house. The people of that district are very progressive and hope by this means and some other minor improvements to get their school into the semi-graded class.

Presbyterian Church.

At the morning service we will observe the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. All Christians are welcome to observe with us this feast.

The subject for the evening service will be, "I Am Not Ashamed of the Gospel."

All should be present because of some business that must be attended to.

David V. Richardson, Minister.

The New Jury Law.

A new law governing jury verdicts in civil cases will go into effect in Minnesota July 1, which will make it impossible for one or two jurymen to "hang" a jury and the conditions which produced the story of a foreman ordering 11 dinners and a hair of hay for the jury will become a thing of the past. After the law becomes effective it will no longer be possible for one or two jurors to hold out against the other 10 or 11 for more than 12 hours as the statute provides that after 12 hours' deliberation a five-sixth vote of the jury will be sufficient to render a verdict.

It is believed that the new law will expedite the trial of civil cases. Under the law 10 jurymen can decide the case after 12 hours have passed.

The new law does not change the situation as to verdict in criminal cases. A unanimous vote of the entire jury is required as under the old law.

Bids Wanted.

Notice is hereby given that oral or written bids will be received by the school board of Dist. No. 9, Ducktown, on Saturday, July 12, 1913 for the erection of an addition to the school house, bidder to furnish material. Plans and specifications may be seen at the home of the clerk. The board reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

MINNESOTA EXPERIMENT STATIONS

AN INTERESTING ARTICLE ON THE VALUE OF THESE INSTITUTIONS.

At St. Paul is maintained at considerable expense to the state of Minnesota the main experimental station. It has been doing active work for about thirty years and has developed into an institution using some five hundred acres of land and employing a staff of operators numbering more than one hundred.

This institution is the property of the state and is maintained mostly by the state tax, in other words, the people pay the bill. Every state tax payer in Minnesota contributes to its support. Federal aid is received each year to the extent of fifteen thousand dollars.

While no experiment station is expected to be self-supporting, on account of the employment of large numbers of highly salaried men, to experiments that make no direct returns, to the use of very valuable land, etc., the Minnesota Station very nearly pays its way. The expense to the state is not heavy.

In spite of the fact that this institution has been in operation for so long a time and is located so conveniently mid-way between St. Paul and Minneapolis, it and its work are known to but a slight extent to many parts of the state.

One of the principal items of work is the development of improved varieties of corn, grains and fruits. Among the plants developed that have increased the profits of Minnesota farmers millions of dollars annually are: No. 13 and No. 23 Corn, No. 163 Fife Wheat, No. 169 Bluestem Wheat, and No. 25 Flax. Many other improved varieties have been developed and introduced throughout the state.

This station is the center of livestock development in Minnesota. Most of the best beef feeders in the state have received their training about fifty mitch cows, every single milking from each cow has been weighed and tested for twenty-three years. This work has built up the most complete, useful and valuable set of dairy records in the world. These records form the basis for the principles of dairy feeding that have been worked out during the last twenty years. Work at this station has made it practicable actually to prescribe the cheapest and most economical daily feed for a dairy cow when are known her weight and the weight and test of the milk produced each day; a daily feed upon which the cow will do her best work and yet there will be little or no waste of feed. The principles of feeding now are being worked out for beef animals as well.

Among the newer departments is that dealing with the diseases of plants. Much valuable work has been and is being done on the diseases of fruits and potatoes, and upon the smuts and rusts of grains.

The above mentioned activities are but a few of the many lines of work being carried on, but they represent very well what is being done.

A large number of bulletins dealing with results of station work have been issued. Those available at the present time are listed below. Any or all of them may be secured by addressing The University Farm, St. Paul.

DON'T MISS THIS

Curtis and Akerman Will Wrestle at the Grand Theatre Next Thursday Night.

The wrestling fan is promised a big evening of sport next Thursday, July 10, when Loran Curtis of Halstad and Al Akerman of Plaindrea, S. D., meet on the mat. Curtis has wrestled here several times in the past and has many admirers on the local who will emot to see him win. Akerman is not so well known here but he is conceded to be a clever man on the mat and at the present time is champion of North Dakota. This promises to be the best match of the season and those interested in the wrestling game will miss something if they do not go.

FARLEY WINS OUT

Supreme Court Reverses Decision Handed Down in District Court.

In the case of Frank Finley vs. Nels Erickson involving the title to a half section of land, which was tried in the district court at Thief River Falls about a year ago, Judge Grindeland rendered a decision in favor of the defendant. Not satisfied with the decision the case was appealed by the plaintiff and last week the supreme court reversed the decision. Atty Fred L. Farley of this city was the attorney for the plaintiff and Attys. Grady of Crookston and Mahey of Thief River Falls for the defendant.

AGRICULTURAL AGENTS.

Twenty-One Counties Have Taken Advantage of New Law.

Twenty-one counties have already taken advantage of the law enacted by the last legislature, appropriating $1,000 to twenty-five counties as state aid for the payment of county agricultural agents. This leaves only four vacancies, and as there's a movement on in a number of counties to take advantage of this opportunity, some of them are bound to be disappointed.

The following counties have already qualified, according to Professor A. D. Wilson, who is superintendent of the agricultural extension and farmers institutes for the university: Big Stone, Stevens, Chippewa, Lac qui Parle, Traverse, Pope, Grant, Clay, Wilkin, Norman, Renville, Todd, Pat Bault, St. Louis, Lac qui Parle, Otter Tail, Washington, Carlton, Scott, Ramsey and Mower.

Sids Wanted.

Notice is hereby given that oral or written bids will be received by the school board of Dist. No. 8 Rocktown, on Saturday, July 12, 1913 for the erection of an addition to the school house, bidder to furnish material. Plans and specifications may be seen at the home of the clerk. The board reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

Bids will be opened and heard at 1 o'clock p. m. of that day.

SUFFRAGE WILL COME UP AGAIN

WOMEN TO RENEW FIGHT AT EXTRA SESSION—GOVERNOR FOR IT.

(Special Correspondence.)

St. Paul, June 29.—Put it down that women suffrage is going to have a place in the deliberations of the coming special session of the legislature which Governor Eberhart has promised he will call and paste this in your hat at the ohne time. "Votes for Women" will prevail. Miss Mary McPadden, the irrepressible, is on the job, and you know what that means. If anything else was wanting, its ex-celleency, Governor Eberhart, has endorsed the movement, and he adds that he will gladly sign any suffrage act presented to him. The governor took the plunge when, addressing a Scandinavian resolen at Chicago, he said, "Votes for women are coming and nothing can stop it." Perhaps his surroundings compelled it, as the Illinois legislature had just extended the franchise to women in a limited way, but the same his excellency is on record. Explaining his utter ance on his return from the Windy City Governor Eberhart said that his stand was nothing new; he had always been for woman suffrage and he still was with the fair sex. In Minnesota, however, a woman suffrage act requires an amendment to the constitution and it mettore little matter with the governor is for it or not. The action of the legislature is final and it goes on the ballot without further consideration. As an example take the seven senatore amendment. Governor Eberhart would like to have voted it, but he could not. Perhaps here is centered in his madness. Whichever way it goes he wins; if the women's way it is another oyster for the Governor and if it fails those opposed have no kick coming.

At the late session of the legislature votes for women passed the house with votes to spare, but it went down to defeat in the senate. There was a majority of three against the sex as the as of things. Men who claimed to know said the house simply passed it to let the people vote on the question that it would be killed there, but there are several ladies who had they realized how close the vote was going to be would never have let it get that far. Miss Mary McFadden who, it is reported, will attempt to pilot the ladies to success this time, was not on the job then and this probably explains the defeat. The State Woman's Suffrage association, it was said, is coming jealous of her success in advancing the movement at a previous session, ruled her out of the game at the last minute and they lost as a result. Miss McFadden, however, is not going to ask the association for help this time and for that reason I gather she is going to sit on some pretty near it. Mary McFadden—pardon my dropping the prefix Miss—is known to every newspaper man in the North Star state and a few adjoining states. She has done work on bill for the newspapers in the Twin Cities and Duluth. In the days of the political convention no gathering of that kind was complete without her, and her acquaintances with the king makers extended to their innermost political secrets. Her writings were always Mary—again pardon my familiarity—began the suffrage move ment six years ago and it has to be said for her that the movement has progressed. There were lots of votes for it when the issue was considered a dead one simply for Mary's sake, and now with a special session promised many of the members, sore at being pulled from their work for something they bothers could just as well be handled two years hence, and others out to get his excellency's goat ni any cost—well, I say, just look out Mary may win.

The last legislature appropriated $60,000 for the widening and deepening of the Roseau river. In the county of that name, but there is a possibility that owners of land abutting the river, who have suffered a loss by overflowage, will not realize. The work represents internal improvements and the constitution does not permit the same under a general appropriation. The deepening of the river is made necessary by extensive drainage ditch operations. The drainage commission visited the scene of the improvement last week, saw its necessity and has put the matter up to the attorney general for an opinion as to the legality of the appropriation.

CROPS LOOK GOOD

Small Grains of all Kinds Looking Good—Corn Crop Will be Short.

There have been several light showers the past few weeks and as a result all kinds of small grains have picked up and are looking first-class. With another good rain for five soon a bumper crop will be assured for the farmers of this county. As to the lack of rain this spring the hay crop will likely be short, unless the fall crop turns out better.

A heavy rain fell Wednesday evening, coming into the county in time to help things out considerably. Corn and potatoes were looking fine before the rain and will come along very fast, and the prospects never were better.

AUTO ACCIDENT MAY PROVE FATAL

MIRACULOUS THAT SIX OCCUPANTS ESCAPED ALL INSTANTLY KILLED.

Last evening, while coming from Fisher in the C. E. Gildersleeve car driven by Harry Hitchcock, the machine was overturned on the road seven miles straight west of the Gildersleeve farm, and the six occupants injured one fatally. Mrs. Harry Berg, of Sebeka, Minn., is now hovering between life and death at St. Vincent's hospital, another, Mrs. Gilderson of Thief River Falls, is also in the hospital, badly cut about the face and limbs, while Master Dwight Gunno in the hospital, painfuyy bruised and scratched up, neither of the latter being dangerously hurt. All other occupants of the car, Arthur Bolasker, a nephew of Mrs. Gildersleeve, and Harry Hitchcock, escaping with but a few bumps.

The accident occurred on an almoot perfect road, with a fairly loose dirt. Messrs. Hitchcock and Bolasker claim the rate of speed was not excessive. Hitchcock says he left one corner of the car sag and could not keep it on the road. At the crash coming a minute later, The car turned over at least once, as the windshield frame is in a tangle, the steering wheel broken, the mudguards and foot boards bent out of shape, and are generally mangled to a splinter. W. H. Olds took a new wheel out this afternoon and expects to run the machine home. Mrs. Baker in with its own power, as the power plant seemed to be unharmed.

The occupants of the car are going at a terrific speed, is a mystery.—Crookston Times, Friday.

At the recent Tri-State Postmasters' convention, comprising Minnesota, North and South Dakota, which was held in St. Paul, the following executive committee was appointed: E. Yanish, St. Paul, Chairman; G. B. Metzger, Wilkston, N. D.; Philip Lesch, New Ulm, Minn.; E. H. Myhre, Wahpeton, N. D.; Emma F. Marshall, Red Lake Falls, Minn.; H. E. Richardson, Osakis, Minn.; D. J. THE TWO-CENT FARE

WILL GO INTO EFFECT ABOUT JULY 10—REBATES TO BE MADE.

Eight railroads operating in Minnesota have agreed to abide by the terms of the recent decion of the United States Supreme Court in the Minnesota rate cases, and announcement has been made that the new rates probably will be placed in effect by July 10, and that refunds of overcharges will be made in all cases where proper proofs of such overcharges are produced.

The decision affects freight rates as well as passenger rates and will mean a reduction on most all classes of freight. Banks have been sent out on which all claims for rebates are to be made and these may be presented to the railway companies or filed with the railway and warehouse commission. These claims will be taken up and decided as soon as possible and the commission suggested that some time may be saved by presenting them direct to the companies. Claims for rebate in passenger charges should be made direct to railroad companies.

Cordell—Nash.

On Monday at St. Joseph's church, Nov. A. Nash, occurred the marriage of Wm. Nash of Brooks and Miss Cordula Cordell, who has been employed in the home with her sister in this city. The wedding was a very quiet affair, only the witnesses, Miss Vick Champagne and Harry Connors, of Brooks, being present. The young couple have gone to housekeeping near Brooks where Mr. Nash is employed.

SWANSON-STROM.

Popular Young People Married Last Wednesday.

On Wednesday, June 25th, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Swanson, near Wylie, occurred the marriage of their daughter, Miss Lillian, to Mr. O. F. Strom of Hiwatha, Sec. 26, E. Gervais office. The wedding was a rather quiet affair, only relatives and a few close friends being present. The bridesmaids were Misses Lilly Hallstrom and Myrtle Palmer and the groomsmen were Messrs. Alfred Hallstrom and Chas. O. Swanson. After the ceremony an elaborate wedding dinner was served. Mr. Strom is employed on the Duluth & Iron Range railroad out of Hiwatha and the happy couple will make their home at that place.

SEVERAL NEW LAWS.

Passed by the Last Legislature Favor Creameries.

Last legislature passed some very good laws in the interest of creameries and this dairy. One very good law is one providing a color distinction between oleomargarine and pure butter. Another bill provides that this dairy and food commissioners and his assistants rigidly enforce the anti discrimination law. This is one of the best laws passed. The anti-discrimination law provides that creameries cannot pay a price and a half in towns where there are local creameries and half price where there is no competition.—Heron Lake News.

STILL REMAIN THE UNDEFEATED

THIEF RIVER FALLS "INDIANS" EASY FOR LOCALS—BALLOON GOES UP.

The local ball team journeyed to Thief River Falls last Friday and took on the "Indians" of that place —a team representing that city, but the usual "dragged up" with a few hired men. In the preliminary practice the teams appeared to be pretty evenly matched but in the game the locals proved to be the better workers in the rain and mud and administered an awful drubbing to the upriver boys. The "Indians" gave their war dance before the opening of the game but kept pretty quiet after the game commenced and in the fourth inning the scalp dance was started by the locals and the "Indians" certainly "got theirs". It was a hit and run ball inning and when the "dust" had cleared away it was found that eleven runs had been scored.

It was a bad day for the game as it rained the first two innings and the third and fourth were pipe dreams quite a heavy rain. The game was called off at the end of the fourth as it was almost impossible to continue longer.

Kelleher, the locals' star pitcher, did the throwing and with the exception of the third inning, when the ball was a trifle wild it was impossible to do anything with it, proved as much of a puzzle to the up-river batters, as the other teams have found him. He got eight strike-outs in the four innings and three hits were made off his delivery. Ryan started the game for the "Indians" and threw until relieved in the fourth. In this inning their whole pitching staff was used in an endeavor to stop the locals, but they all proved easy. Seven hits were made by the Lake boys in the four innings and five or three struck out. Errors were rather numerous owing to the condition of the grounds. A return game will be played in Red Lake Falls the latter part of this month.

Red Lake Falls	1	0	0	11	—12
Thief River Falls	0	0	0	4	1— 5

GETTYSBURG HILLS TENTED ONCE MORE

PENNSYLVANIA BATTLEFIELD IS BEING TRANSFORMED FOR BIG CELEBRATION.

40,000 VETERANS TO ATTEND

Jubilee Reunion Marks the Fiftieth Anniversary of Famous Battle.

—Program for July One to Four.

Gettysburg, Pa., June 24.—The hills of Gettysburg, where the armies of Meade and Lee pitched their tents 60 years ago, are flecked today with canvas, harbingers of the tented city which will soon arise on the battlefield. The Army of Civil war veterans from north and the south—40,000 of them— are coming, some few in threed worn uniforms and all with out their muskets, to hold a jubilee reunion on the fiftieth anniversary of the battle. Some of the scouts are already here; the advance guard will arrive on the field within a week; the rank and file will follow them not more than 48 hours later.

Every State Represented.

Every star of the 48 in the American flag is expected to have here its own quota of veterans. They will come as the guests of the national government, and of their respective states and territories, which jointly will spend more than a million dollars for their entertainment and comfort. The relics from the government and the state of Pennsylvania have already gathered here. One detail alone provides for furnishing the veterans more than 800,000 meals.

Pennsylvania has been planning for the celebration of the battle for more than four years. The appropriated $415,000 as her share of the expenses. Congress has appropriated $150,000 to defray the expenses of the government's participation, and named a commission to help carry out the plans. Every state and territory also accepted the general invitation to participate and nearly all of them appropriated money to transport veterans and commissions.

Many Tents Erected.

The big camp is pitched on the east peer of the battlefield which the southwest of Gettysburg. On nearly 300 acres of ground is erected 7,000 tents and the more are going up under the supervision of the war department. The camp lies partly on the scene of the first day's fighting and is not far from High Water mark, where Pickett's famous charge shattered against the union lines.

Five thousand tents have been erected for the exclusive use of the veterans. The camp has been laid out in streets, each street and each tent bea a number, so it will be easy for any veteran to look up a former comrade or foe. In the center of the camp will be the headquarters of the chief quartermaster. The camp itself will be encamped according to states in the order from the four big days is briefly as follows:

The Program.

July 1—Veterans' day. Appropriate exercises under the joint direction of the Pennsylvania commission and the commanders-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic and the United Confederate Veterans.

July 2—Military day. Under the direction of the chief of staff of the United States army.

July 3—Citizens' day. Under the direction of the governor of Pennsylvania, the governors of the states, if they so desire. Addresses and music.

July 4—National day. Patriotic exercises, orations, with fireworks in the evening.

No veteran will be permitted to bring a knife into camp.

The principal events of the celebration will be held on June 30 and July 1, 2, 3 and 4, but in order to avoid confusion of traffic on the railroads and confusion in Gettysburg, the camp will be opened on Sunday evening, June 29, and will be kept open for a week after that time, 30 meals will be served to each veteran during the week if he is in camp that long and the camp will come to an end after breakfast on Sunday, July 8.

Although each tent is designed to accommodate 12 men, it has been planned to assign only eight veterans to each, so as to make them as comfortable as possible. Each veteran will have a separate cot, blankets and a canvas kit, which will contain a plate, cup, knife, fork and spoon, and because his personal property when he breaks camp.

Only Veterans Entertained.

"Only veterans of the Civil war may be provided food, shelter and entertainment within the great camp around the battlefield," reads the announcement of the commission.

NINE U. S. ENGINEERS DROWN

SCOUT CAPSIZES AND BUT FIVE ESCAPE.

Storm Breaks Out Without Warning Overturning Small Craft.

New Madrid, Mo., June 24.—Nine members of a party of 14 United States engineers and other government employees were drowned near New Madrid, Mo., when the United State survey boat, Beaver, which the party was aboard, was capsized in a wind storm.

Those drowned are C. S. Williams, chief engineer, Mason, Ohio; J. M. McConnell, of Memphis, a recent graduate of the law department of Cornell university; Captain Lamb, pilot; A. D. Coston, engineer; Harry Shortell, mate, Cottonwood, Tenn.; Phil Wery, Jackson, Tenn.; ——Freeman, deck hand; two rodmen,' names not known.

None of the bodies has been recovered.

Those saved are J. H. Miller, of Millerburg, Ky., engineer; Roy Thompson, of South Point, Tenn., deck band; Mike Morris, of Cotten Point, deck hand; Curtis Bennet, a deck hand, and Paul Heppy, night watchman.

Mr. Williams had been stationed at Memphis for several years.

The Beaver, a small craft of the canal boat type, left Memphis last Friday for Scaloo Bend, in the Mississippi river about seven miles north of New Madrid, where a survey was to be made preliminary to the construction of revetments. The boat had proceeded but a short four miles above this city and was near midnight when the storm broke with but little warning.

Before the craft could be made ready to face the wind it was overturned and sank. The men drowned probably were caught in the wreckage and drawn down with the boat. Those saved clung to the hull or surface within an hour.

When the storm broke the Beaver was making a hurried run back to New Madrid to secure medical attendance for Richmond who had been taken suddenly ill and was within 24 hours of a quarter boat anchored at the city, when the wind tipped the boat over. Skiffs which put out from the quarter boat rescued Miller and the four deck hands.

DEMOCRATIC HEAD ELECTED.

Congressional and National Democratic Bodies Will Work Together.

Washington, June 25.—The Democratic congressional committee has elected Representative Dawson of Michigan chairman and agreed to cooperate with the Democratic national committee in the coming congressional campaign. Mr. Dawson is understood to have been President Wilson's choice to head the party's congressional campaign organization.

Besides the chairman, the other officers elected follow:

Vice chairman, Representative Cline, Indiana; Secretar Chamberlin, Oregon; Director Hollis, New Hampshire; Representative Goldfogle, New York; Representative Igoe, California; Representative Peppe, Iowa; Representative Lever, South Carolina; assistant secretary, Representative Morray, Massachusetts; sergeant-at-arms, Joseph J. CRITICISES CURRENCY BILL

CONTROL OF BANK AFFAIRS BY POLITICIANS IS PREDICTED.

Chicagoan Says Passage of Bill Means Banks Must Become State Institutions.

Chicago, June 25.—James B. Forgan, chairman of the Chicago Clearing House association, director of the First National bank of Chicago and one of the bankers appointed to answer questions propounded by committees with reference to national monetary matters has attacked the administration's currency reform bill. In a statement, Mr. Forgan declared that the proposed bill would turn over the bank's affairs to politicians.

"I cannot conceive of such a ecstatic measure being enacted into law by congress," he said.

"If the national banks should have such a law forced upon them they would have to give up their charters and become state institutions or suffer confiscation."

Mr. Forgan's chief objection is to the federal reserve clause in which the banks, he said, have no say in the appointment of the reserve board members.

"There is consternation among bankers over the bill," declared Mr. Forgan. "The sensation, as it first appeared, was not alarming, but the changes that since have been made in it alter the complexion of the entire situation."

POINT GUNS-AT AMERICAN

Mexicans Give Salesman Third Degree and Then Release Him After Search.

Eagle Pass, Texas, June 26. A third degree with loaded rifles was given C. H. Rippetoes, an American salesman of Dallas, Texas, who was released by the Constitutionalists at Piedras Negras, Mexico, and escorted safely to this city. Rippetoes had been held five several days, charged with carrying federal messages. Thursday night at Colombia, Mexico, he said, officers came to his hotel to confess that he had been laying Columbia under "some Carranza. Mexico, the scene of recent fighting. He denied the charges.

At 3 a. m., he said, he was aroused from sleep and questioned again about the dynamite. A firing squad then escorted, him several hundred yards from the camp where he was a prisoner and told him he would be shot immediately unless the secret money were taken from him and he was asked to give the name of some one to whom he had given it. Then the scared leveled their rifles at his breast, keeping him standing, he said, for what seemed to him several minutes.

Special Irrigation Considerations.

Washington, June 25.—Special consideration for farmers, who actually commence land on government reclamation projects, as against speculators, is announced as an interior department rule by Secretary Lane. In a line with this the secretary ordered a temporary suspension of one-fifth of the amount due from present settlers on their building charges installments, provided no payment is less than 50 cents an acre. The unpaid extended equally within the 10 annual installments for water right applications.

New York, June 24.—Here to sound sentiment in the East and Middle West on the question of land ownership of Japanese in California, he said, K. Okazaki, member of the Japanese parliament arrived from Boston on the Carmania. "We know that the attitude of the West is mostly against us," said Mr. Okazaki, "but the eastern people and those of the Middle West seem to be neutral. I am here to find out exactly what their sentiments are."

M'REYNOLDS HELD TO BE BLAMELESS

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S COURSE IN CALIFORNIA CASES INDORSED BY WILSON.

PROSECUTIONS WILL GO ON

Government Will Hire Special Prosecutors to Clean Up the Cases—Letter of President.

Washington, June 26.—President Wilson has telegraphed United States District Attorney John L. McNab of San Francisco, Cal., acceptance of the latter's resignation, the form of which the president characterized "as inexcusable intimation of injustice and wrong doing" on the part of Attorney General McReynolds.

Holds McReynolds Blameless.

In a letter to the attorney general the president exonerated him from blame and adopted Mr. McReynolds' suggestion that the Camden-Diggs and the Western Fuel company cases be prosecuted, immediately by special counsel for the government.

White House officials announced that the president would confer with the attorney general about the appointment of special prosecutors and that the president had in mind Francis J. Heney, Progressive Republican, who prosecuted the famous San Francisco graft cases, Matt J. Sullivan, Democrat, who assisted Mr. Heney in the San Francisco cases, and Thomas Hayden, Democrat, a former assistant city attorney in San Francisco.

Attorney General McReynolds' statement that he had ordered a postponement of the cases as an ordinary procedure in criminal trials without attributing the day "any fair-minded man would attribute a "malign motive" to him was acknowledged by the president in his letter.

Wilson's Letter.

"My Dear Attorney General:

"Allow me to acknowledge with sincere appreciation your letter of today, giving me a full statement of the case the department of justice has dealt with in the Diggs-Camdett and the Western Fuel company cases in California and transmitting the documents connected with the two cases necessary for their elucidation.

"I am entirely satisfied that the course you took in both cases was proper, both sound and wonderful judgment and a clear instinct for what was fair and right. I am glad of your course very heartily and with most unstinting

"But I agree with you that what we may think of what has been done does not relieve us of the obligation to press these cases with the utmost diligence and energy. I approve very heartily of your suggestion that it be immediately pressed, special counsel be employed, the shirk that we can do talk. I will be very glad to confer with you about the selection. I hope that you will do this without delay. I am very glad indeed that you are giving your personal attention to the immediate and diligent prosecution of these cases in which it agrees with you regardless their serious importance from every point of view.

"Sincerely yours,

"WOODROW WILSON."

Three Wisconsin Boys Drown.

Durand, Wis., June 25.—Three boys, members of a camping party of Chippewa Falls, were drowned in Red Cedar Lake, about seven miles below Durand. The dead are: Joseph Durth, aged 14 years; Frank Wiegand, aged 18 years, and Leo Demmer, aged 19 years. The camping party arrived at their camp Monday morning, and Durth got into deep water and two went down with him, their bodies rising again.

$50,000 Storm in Saskatchewan.

Estevan, Sask., June 25.— As the result of a wind storm which swept here buildings were demolished and damage totaling sixty thousand dollars done in the town alone. No lives were lost, although a number received more or less injury from flying timbers. The gale followed the Souris valley toward the international boundary, leaving in its wake a trail of demolished barns and farm buildings. A heavy storm of rain and hail accompanied the wind.

FOUR KNOWN DEAD; SIXTY MORE HURT

EXPLOSION IN ELEVATOR AND GRAIN STOREHOUSE DISASTROUS TO EMPLOYEES.

HALF OF MAIMED MAY DIE

Property Loss Expected to Reach Total of Half-Million Dollars—Fire Burns the Wrecked Building, Adding to Horror.

Buffalo, N. Y., June 26.—Four men are known to be dead, sixty were injured, some fatally, and four are unaccounted for as the result of an explosion in the elevator and grain storehouse of the Husted Milling company. Fire followed the explosion and destroyed the wooden section of the elevator.

The Dead and Injured.

The known dead are: Michael King, 41 years old; Henry Vetter, 45 years old; John Cooney, Nickel Plate engineer, and an unidentified man.

There are 60 injured in the hospitals of the city, half of them, according to hospital physicians, so badly burned that they have but slight chance of recovery.

John Cooney, a Nickel Plate engineer, was blown out of his cab and died as a consequence of the bourse later.

Find Body in Ruins.

Firemen in searching the ruins found the body of a man. It was burned so badly that identification is not considered probable.

The finding of this body led to the belief that a number of men failed to escape and that their bodies are still in the debris.

The explosion was caused by dust accumulations in the feed house and was of tremendous force, tearing out one wall of the wooden structure and hurling fragments for a quarter of a mile around.

Several windows in cars of a passing Nickel Plate passenger train were broken and one of the passengers was injured.

Boy is Killed, Also.

The body of Henry Vetter was blown 50 feet and was found under a box car, badly burned. A boy, while running to the fire, was run down by a gas automobile and killed.

The elevator company employed 150 men and, according to Vice President Husted, all have been accounted for except four. Employee who escaped declared, however, that many of their fellow workers were cut off by the flames and perished.

A dozen box cars of grain indoo were destroyed. The elevator had a capacity of 500,000 bushels. Hair was of wooden construction and with its contents was destroyed. Officials of the company estimated their loss at $500,000, covered by insurance.

Queen Alexandra took a keen personal interest in the preparations for the event and selected the wild rose as the official emblem of, the day. Women of the nobility are selling flowers on the streets for charity.

WILSON ASKS NEW CURRENCY SYSTEM

President Wilson Reads Message to Joint Session of Congress.

NEW SYSTEM IS DEMANDED

Revision of the Banking and Currency Laws Must Go Hand In Hand With Revision of the Tariff.

Washington, June 23.—President Wilson today read his special message on the subject of banking and currency reform to the joint session of congress. The message follows:

Mr. Speaker, Mr. President, Gentlemen of the Congress: It is under the compulsion of what seems to me a clear and unescapable duty that I have a second time this session sought the privilege of addressing you in person. I know, of course, that the hested season of the year is upon us, that work in these chambers and in the committee rooms is likely to become a burden as the season lengthens, and that every consideration of personal comfort, perhaps, is in the case of some of us, considerations of personal health even, dictate an early conclusion of the deliberations of the session; but there are occasions of public duty when such things which touch us privately seem very small; when the work to be done is so pressing and so freight with big consequences that we know that we are not at liberty to weigh against it any point of personal sacrifice. It is absolutely imperative that we should give the business men of this country a banking and currency system which will relieve them of the can make use of the freedom of enterprise and of individual initiative which are our best safeguard against the privilege of liberty and maturity are to ensue.

It is not enough to strike the shackles from business. The duty of statesmanship is not negative merely. It is constructive. It must see to it that we understand what business needs and that we know how to supply it. We must have practical and superficial his observation of the conditions now prevailing in the country, can fail to see that one of the chief things business needs now, and will need increasingly as it gains in scope and vigor in the years immediately ahead of it, is the proper means by which readily to vitalize its credit, command its resources and its productive brains. What will it profit us to be free if we are not free to use the best and most accessible instrumentalities of commerce and enterprise?

The principles upon which a world act are also clear. The country has already set them forth in part in the matter within the last few years—see it more clearly now than it ever saw it before—much more clearly than when the original legislative proposals on the subject were under discussion. Our currency, not rigid as now, but readily, elastic, promptly adjusted to credit, the expanding and contracting credits of everyday business; our banking system and flow of personal and corporate dealings—the banking laws must mobilize reserves; must operate to prevent concentration anywhere in a few hands of the monopolistic control of the country or their use for speculative purposes in times of business ease and unchecked in the way of other legislation, more truthful uses. And the control of the system of banking and of issue which our new laws are to set up must be public, not private, must be vested in the government itself, so that the banks may be the instruments, not the masters, of business and of individual enterprise and initiative.

The committee of the congress to which legislation of this character is referred have devoted careful and discriminating study to the means of so accomplishing these objects. They have sought counsel in every quarter. They are ready to suggest action. I am come to you, as the head of the government responsible for initiative of the party in power, to urge action now, while there is time to consider it maturely deliberately and as we should, in a clear air of common counsel.

Music Napoleon's Solace.

A curious foot note to history is found in G. L. de M. Waterloo, recently published book, "A Polish Bridge." It is to the effect that one of the emperor's evenings at St. Helena were solaced by a visit from a pianoforte which was imported from Paris at a cost to Napoleon himself of £122 ($595). The maestro was perhaps Mme. Bertrand; at any rate, the piano was purchased by her and was removed by her from the island after Napoleon's death.

Sure Thing.

"That young fellow is going to the dogs."

"He does not look in the least like it. What makes you think so?"

"Because I happen to know he is a bulldog."

Enough Said.

"In making this proposal, young man, can you come to me with clean hands?"

"I hope so, sir. I've just washed 'em with the soap you are advertising at the last every."

LIBERTY BELL IN DANGER

INCE sepulchres have already been opened by the Government of the Panama exposition and other sovereign of California with the city of Whitehall. It was to obviate the danger of the exhibits for that occasion, and since it seems that the crack in the bell is extending, a definite settlement of the question as to whether the relic should be permitted to travel any more appears to be about due, and just now, when the anniversary of the nation's Independence is upon us, is a reasonable time for discussion of the matter.

Wilfred Jordan, curator of the Independence Hall Museum, measured the second crack before the bell's last journey and then measured it again after its return. He found that it had increased in length to a slight degree.

No one knows just when this second crack occurred, and opinions differ; but compared to the old crack it is of recent origin and is distinctly visible. Mr. Jordan, however, was the first to call attention to a long and almost invisible attenuation of the second crack and finds that it now reaches one-third way around the bell, from the end of the old original fracture, which was chiseled out in 1846 in an attempt to make the bell sound properly.

Putting an end to the bell's pilgrimages would in no sense or oil be due to a disinclination of the people or councils of Philadelphia to allow the west to view and possess the sacred relic even for a short time. Indeed Philadelphia would be only too glad to send it, for since the bell has already helped by its travels to lessen the sectional feelings between the north and south, so it would help unite the citizens of our republic who live on the Atlantic seaboard with those who live on the Pacific.

Little do either sections realize how intimately the bell is connected with the consummation of our nation, early political ideals and with the freedom of its inquiries in Colonial days. The old bronze relic not only helped to proclaim independence, but for years before 1776 rang loud to celebrate the hopes of the people and rang low to intone their woes!

Upon its sides is this inscription:

"And proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof."—Lev. xxv, 10. A strange Providence indeed wrote that inscription on its crown many years before its throbbing clangors and melodious eloquence had aught at all to do with liberty!

Announcing proclamations of war and treaties of peace; welcoming the arrival and bidding Godspeed to departing notables; proclaiming some occasion of the English royal family to the throne and the accession therefrom of the American colonies! Its more customary use, however, was to call the members of the assembly of Pennsylvania together at the morning and afternoon sessions and to announce the opening of the courts.

Despite the fact that the Liberty Bell is one of the most treasured of souls and relics, it is not universally an American product, but a foreign importation, and imported from England, too, where it was first cast according to the order given in October, 1751, by the superintendents of the state house of the Province of Pennsylvania—now Independence Hall.

Thomas Lester of White Chapel, London, cast the bell, and by August, 1752, it arrived in Philadelphia and was erected on trusses in the state house yard. While being tried and tested early in September of the same year it was cracked by the clapper, though by no unusually powerful stroke. Concerning this accident, Isaac Norris wrote, March 19, 1753:

"Though the news of our new bell cracking is not very agreeable to us, we concluded to send it back by Captain Budden, who had brought it from London last August, but he could not take it on board, upon which two ingenious workmen undertook to cast it here, and I am just now informed they have this day opened the mould and have got a good bell, which, I confess, pleases me very much, that we should first venture upon and succeed in the greatest bell cast, for aught I know, in English America. The mould was finished in a very masterly manner, and the lettern, I am told, are better than (on) the old one. When we broke up the metal our judges here generally agreed it was too high and brittle, and cast several little bells out of it to try the sound and strength, and fixed upon a mixture of an ounce and a half of copper to the pound of the old bell, and in this proportion we now have it."

Herman Pass, from the island of Malta, and Jacob Stow, a son of Charles Stow, the doorkeeper of the assembly, were the two ingenious workmen referred to in the above letter. After the second casting of the bell it was again hung and tested in the spring of 1753. More defects were soon found, however. The American casters, Pass and Stow, who were not bell founders by trade at all, had put too much copper in the metal so that its sound was impaired. Disappointed with that failure and also nettled at the gibes of their townsmen concerning it, they asked permission to cast the bell a second time. Thomas Lester, the original maker of it, also offered his services, but the authorities decided to allow Pass and Stow to proceed again, and thus the third and present casting was made, and again the bell was raised; this time in the state house steeple itself. That operation was completed by the end of August, 1753, when the American casters were paid £60 13s. 5d. for their labors.

Then began its chimes, August 27, 1753, when it called the assembly together, ringing out the old, ringing in the new, sounding its melodies for lamentable public and private events during more than three-score of years.

The first individual for whom it rang was Franklin; sent "home to England" to ask redress for the grievances of the colonies in February, 1757. The bell echoed the hopes of the people's hearts as its notes rang "Cod Voyage" some four years later as he sailed away.

When the pinking and splitting mills were closed and the manufacture of iron and steel products was prohibited by acts of parliament in Pennsylvania and the king's arrow was affixed upon the trees and the trade of the colonies in all parts of the world restrained, the bell was again tolled to assemble the people in the state house yard to protest against such outrages.

Thus did the bell, long before the Revolution, become the beloved symbol of truth and freedom, reinforcing with pugnacious and violent peals, the cry of determined citizens, in the largest political meeting held up to that time in the state house yard, that none of the ship "Polly's detestable tea," that had just been brought into the port, should be funneled down their throats with parliament duty mixed with it."

When the port of Boston was closed in May, 1774, and the heart of the country was growing heavier with its affliction, the bell was once more carefully muffled and tolled in a solemn and prophetic manner, both to announce the closing of the port and, a little later, to call a meeting to relieve suffering in Boston on account of the restriction of its trade.

As the conflict with England approached the bell was rung more and more; its use became a matter of course, and then, on April 16, 1775, just after the reports came to Philadelphia of the Battle of Lexington, it rang wildly to assemble 8,000 people in the state house yard and to inspire their souls to a resolution pledging their all to the cause of liberty.

It rang also to assemble the Continental congress to its daily sessions, both at Carpenter's Hall and Independence hall, and, finally, its crowning achievement, the one wild, defiant and joyful ringing that, more than all the previous reverberations it made, gave it the sacred name of "The Liberty Bell," occurred on July 8 (and not the 4th, as is generally believed), after the Declaration of Independence had been adopted.

The account of its jubilee called the citizens together in the yard to hear read in the stentorian tones of John Nixon the first public proclamation of the Declaration, and never did the old wooden belfry of the state house steeple rock and reel and vibrate with more sympathetic vibration then at this time.

When returned to the old state house steeple again one of its first uses was to ring upon the announcement of the surrender of Lord Cornwallis, in October, 1781, and in the following month to toll in welcoming Washington to the city. A year and a half later it helped to proclaim the treaty of peace with Great Britain, and in December, 1789, it was muffled for the first time in many years, though not to mourn for lost liberty or over tyrannical deeds, but to lend its almost hushed music to the funeral solemnities of Washington himself.

NO DIFFICULT FEAT AT ALL

Lawyer's Explanation Will Appeal to Many As Containing Noticeable Grains of Truth.

In the lobby of a Washington hotel the other evening they were talking about big legal fees, when Representative Koenig cited a case.

Some time since, according to the Representative, a man fell into an open coal hole, sued for damages and was awarded a substantial amount. When he received a bill from his lawyer, however, he was stunned again, and as soon as he could get into breathing shape he hastened to see him.

"Your bill is outrageous!" exclaimed the client to the legal one. "It is more than three-fourths of the amount that I recovered."

"Quite true," was the calm response of the lawyer, "but you mustn't forget that I furnished the skill and legal learning for the case."

"Yes," excitedly cried the client, "but I furnished the case."

"Oh, as far as that goes," was the scornful reply of the lawyer, "anybody can fall down a coal hole!"—Philadelphia Times.

Domestic Sullies.

A case was being heard in the Shoreditch County Court, when Mr. Proedy, barrister, asked a witness whether on a certain occasion he was angry with his wife.

"I have never been angry with my wife in my life," witness replied.

Judge Lumley—You say so; but I could not honestly do so.

Mr. Proedy—Did you bully her?

Witness—Certainly not. Is that a usual thing to do?

Judge Clare—He not-tells such nonsense. Lots of men bully their wives, and lots of wives bully their husbands. (Laughter.) There is a little of each.—London Chronicle.

TALENT DEMOCRATIC

Find Tenors in Blacksmith's Shops—Sopranos in Street.

Half a Dozen British Guardians of the Peace the Producers of Meritorious Talent—London Postman Becomes an Artist.

London.—Genius is no respecter of persons. Indeed, it knocks more often at the door of the poor man's cottage than at the entrance of the rich man's mansion.

Our every generation is just as fruitful as any that are gone in examples of genius in humble life. Of our great, set living poets, William Watson first saw the light in a Wardsdale farmhouse; and John Masefield, the latest star in the poetical firmament, found his first inspiration while working in the fields. J. M. Barrie was born in a Kirriemuir cottage, at least as humble as the roof under which Thomas Carlyle, stonemason's son, entered the world—and H. G. Wells, one of a professional cricketer, served behind a draper's counter before he discovered the gold in his pen.

It would be an easy matter to name at least a score of living authors of repute for whom life has opened at least as humbly, without taking into account such poets of undoubted, if obscure, genius as A. G. Webster, hammerman; Joseph Skipsey, the pitman-poet," and others, equally gifted, who have earned their daily bread by navvy work and farm labor.

It is, however, among musicians that we find the most remarkable examples of talent in unexpected places. Alessandro Bonci, the world famous singer, was working as a boatbuilder's apprentice less than thirty years ago, and when he abandoned the art to seek a fortune by his glorious voice, he was supported by friends, poor like himself, who subscribed a few francs each per month; and was so poor that he was compelled to tramp eighteen miles a day, to Pesaro and back, for his lessons.

Caruso, at the same time, was wielding a blacksmith's hammer; and was serving as a private soldier when a passing officer discovered the wonder of his voice. Miss Stella Carol, when she was similarly discovered, was singing on a Hempstead pavement in the chilly dusk of a winter evening. M. Giorgini, the famous Italian singer, was also busking in the streets of Naples, and Herr Rentmar, when, as a hackster, he was taking around vegetables on a wheelbarrow.

M. Housseliers, the king of French operatic singers, won, not so many years ago working as a blacksmith, "passing rich" on three francs a day. Mlle. Cavalieri was found by a musical fama as the prettiest flower seller in Rome, and her wonderful voice was first heard in Paris cafes, where she toward was a few coppers a night—just as, long years earlier, the great Christine Nilsson, "Queen of Song," sang coppers from the pocketpieces of Swedish fairs by her nightingale voice, and Miss Ilva Gwyn's voice was "discovered" when she was "pouring out beer sold in Hibbaume, song in a baker's shop at Pwllheli.

And similar romantic stories are told of many a musician whose name today is famous—from Herr Fielder, the Polish violinist, who was discovered by a wealthy Welsh lady in a Tyrolese schoolroom, to Miss Harris Hall, who but a few years ago, was reaping a scanty harvest of pence by playing in the streets.

Art, like music, calls her clever children from the most unlikely places. There are half a dozen living policemen who have proved that they can ply a skilful brush, from Mr. Jones of Leeds, whose work has been honored by the Royal academy, to Mr. Rushen of the city of London force, one of whose clever canvases may be seen in the museum of the Guildhall. Nor must we forget Samuel Hancock, the London postman, who some time ago gave an exhibition of his pictures at the Dore gallery; or Mr. Hiscock, a Somerset house porter, whose clever painting has won much admiration.

DEAD COMRADES CALL HIM

Paterson Police Find Aged Veteran Asleep in Cemetery—Fought in Civil War.

Paterson, N. J.—After having tramped from Middletown, N. Y., a distance of 40 miles, Samuel Wilson, a Civil war veteran, visited the graves of his comrades in arms in the Cedar lawn cemetery. Finally he became weary and lay down to sleep just at the entrance to the cemetery.

A telephone message told the police a dead man was at the cemetery entrance.

The officers found the veteran asleep. He was brought to headquarters, where, after relating his story, he received lodging for the night. He said he was born in Jersey City, 74 years ago, and had served throughout the Civil war with the First New Jersey cavalry, under the command of Capt. Charles Winton. He had fought in the battles of Fredericksburg, the Wilderness and Gettysburg.

ORLANDO DAMMITT IS PEAVED

North Carolina Man Wants Name Changed—Has Caused Him Much Worry.

Ellenford, N. C.—Orlando Dammitt of this village wishes to change his name and has started proceedings to that end. Dammitt says that his name has caused him a great deal of worry. For instance, it is a common thing to hear some friend shout: "Dammitt! Come here a second, will you?"

Then again, Dammitt says that it is rather awkward for him when his name is being called at lodge meetings. The secretary goes down the list of names and when he comes to his, says:

"O, Dammitt!"

Half the time, Dammitt says, he doesn't know whether his name is being called or whether the secretary has made a blot on the books and is merely giving vent to his feelings.

"I'm getting sick of it," says Dammitt. "Good Heavens, it was bad enough when I went to school. I played on the football team and whenever I made a good play the fellows used to give me a long cheer. It went something like this: 'Rah, rah, rah, boo-ray. Dammitt! Dammitt! O Dammitt!'"

PINEAPPLE WOUND IS FATAL

Woman's Thumb Scratched as She Cleans Fruit and Her Death Soon Follows.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Mrs. Catherine Whittaker died from blood poisoning resulting from her thumb being scratched by a piece of pineapple which she was peeling.

Twelve hours after the incident the hand began to swell, and the swelling extended gradually through the arm. Mrs. Tourtellot was taken to a hospital, but the poison had permeated through her system and the physicians could not save her life.

PUBLIC MEN ARE HONEST

Speaker Clark Tells Women's Democratic League Everything in Politics Is Not Corrupt.

"I know the 434 other representatives in congress like a book," declared the speaker. "I don't believe that there is a single man in the house whose vote can be changed or influenced by the use of money—not one."

He added that American politics had improved very much in the last 20 years, and attributed it to the fact that the people are taking more interest than ever before. The speaker predicted that if the Democratic party carried out its promises made at the Baltimore convention it would have another lease of power.

Mrs. William Cullop, wife of the representative from Indiana, presided at the meeting. All of the speakers, who included Senator Vardaman of Mississippi, congratulated the league on the work it had accomplished. Many prominent figures in official circles were present.

CARUSO REBUKED AS OGLER

American Threatens Tenor for Attention Directed at Woman in London Hotel.

London.—Enrico Caruso was one of the actors in a "row" in the Savoy hotel here. It appears that he annoyed an American resident of London by acting, and by calling the attention of his own secretary to a woman the American was entering. The American took umbrage, and told the tenor in a voice heard all over the foyer that he should be ashamed of himself so to direct attention to any gentlewoman.

"I am Caruso," replied the tenor, "I do what I like."

The American advanced on Caruso threateningly, but the tenor took refuge in an elevator.

"On one occasion he accused me of cheating. He was apparently so serious that I became infuriated and unmindful of his high estate and my duty as hostess. I slapped his hand across the table and bored his ears. His sense of humor and satisfaction in having so successfully worked upon my feelings amazed the attendants. Ever afterwards, when he met, he used to cry: 'I know a lady who cheats at checkers.'"

The railroads are to have a "come back". When they have refunded the amounts they have collected in excess charges for freight and passenger service, they will ask that the state refund them a fair share of the taxes that have been paid on the gross earnings. Though the state treasurer is not authorized to refund such a claim, it is probable that the legislature will recognize the justness of the demand and make provision for the refund.

The publisher of Jim Jam Jems and its editor, Sam Clark, the former well known "chief" River Falls newspaper man, have at last come to feel the grip of the strong arm of the law. Clark and his "co-workers" have each drawn a fine of $2000 and a federal prison term of four years. The punishment is severe, but probably not undeserved. They went into a "racy" game, bluffed it to the limit and lost. There are no extenuating circumstances that would seem to entitle them to clemency and sympathy. They got out a dirty little magazine that said "libelous" because it said the truth and surrounded the curiosity of many people and drew the support of the many scheme-after that class of "literature". Though the makers of the nuisance made pretense of being in the cause of good morals, they no doubt recognized the character of their own product, for instead of attempting to use the mails they shipped by express and defied the authorities. But they subject their North Dakota to other states and the authorities "got" them on the ground that their obscene literature had become interstate commerce.

CO-AOJUTORS' REMARKS.

People should begin to study the initiative and referendum. It will be before them for decision in less than a year and a half, and it will take that time and more for the voters to familiarize themselves with the idea, and with its usefulness as a working tool of self-government. Its submission to the voters was the best act of the late legislature. —Wadena's Pantagraph.

We are in receipt of a speech delivered by Congressman Steenerson relative to the creation of a commission to be known as the Country Life Institute. Roosevelt's white president suggested such a commission but it did not meet with encouragement at that time. The duty of the commission would be to gather facts relative to agriculture, horticulture, and the relation between city and country. The commission would study conditions and suggest plans for the betterment of the agricultural population of the country.—Greenbush Tribune.

President Wilson's address before congress last Monday should be carefully read and digested by every member of the nation. The address was made in the assembly room of the House and every inch of room was occupied by those anxious to hear what the President's views were on the most impressive and far reaching question of the present age. The note with approval one sentence of the address which sums up the whole issue, we quote: "And the control of the system of banking and the issue which our new laws are to set up must be public, not private; must be vested in the government itself, so that the banks may be the instruments not the masters of business and of individual enterprise and initiative." The text of the new currency bill has been approved by the President and his approval will subject the public and the message will benefit the country.—Case Lake Tribune.

At a meeting of the county commissioners of Norman County, the board took action which means that Norman county will have a county agricultural agent for two years at least. One of the requirements for the securing of such an agent is that the county or local citizens guarantee $1,500 a year for two years, and the state appropriates an equal sum. Monday the board passed a resolution to appropriate $500 and the business men of the county have subscribed a similar sum. The plan was to raise another $500 from the farmers. This part of the subscription is still short o nquil amount, but a guarantee has been given that all the money will be raised and in the meantime the work of soliciting among the farmers will be continued and there should be no trouble in raising that sum among the farmers. Prof. Wootsert of the agricultural department of the Ada High School has been doing the soliciting among the farmers tributary to Ada, and the sixty-three farmers he called on, only one refused to subscribe, and the remainer subscribed from two to five dollars each. Nearly every county in the state is making arrangements to engage a county agent.—Exchange.

THE NOSE IN MINNESOTA.

How the U. S. Came to Get a Small Northern Chunk.

How did the United States come to get that small corner of land which juts out from the extreme northern boundary of Minnesota. History of that "little nose" which sticks out into Canada from Minnesota and which constitutes the northernmost point of the United States, is very interesting. Under the treaty of Utrecht between the United States and British possessions was fixed.

A certain point on the Lake of the Woods was mutually agreed to as on starting point, this being considered the headwaters of the Lawrence river and Great Lakes system. At that time it was not known whether this point was north or south of the forty-ninth parallel, but it was known to be close to it. The understanding was that if the point on the boundary should go north or south to the forty-ninth parallel as the case might be, the boundary must curote surveys showed that point was about 25 miles north of the forty-ninth parallel. Lake of the Woods is the boundary makes a jog above that line. Uncle Sam thus got what was north

BETTER THAN EVER BEFORE

UNUSUAL PLANS BEING MADE FOR WORLD'S GREATEST STATE FAIR.

"Bigger and better than ever" is a hackneyed phrase, but it seems to be the one that can be most appropriately applied to the Minnesota State Fair and Exposition of 1913. Large plans have surely been laid to bring this about and the managers of the world's biggest state fair insist that nothing but bad weather during the week of Sept. 1 to 6 can prevent this year's show from surpassing, in every department, its predecessors and other such expositions in the United States. Even bad weather will not prevent the exhibition of educational features of Homline from being better than ever before, and with the exception of some of the amusement features everything will go on just the same, no matter what the performances of the weather man may be.

The Minnesota State Fair last year offered more money in premiums than any other fair in the United States, and this year the managers are hoping increased these offerings, making a grand total of $93,888.00. These liberal prizes, hung up in fifteen departments, insure the appearance at the fair this year of championship exhibits in every line of work and play.

In addition to the regular exhibits, there will be scores of practical working exhibits, from which the visitors can learn the operation of the latest inventions, the most scientific methods of raising and handling live stock, poultry, bees, etc., and can gain instructions in all the matters that make farming profitable. The managers are adding everything possible to make the State Fair what it should be—"the people's school for a week."

The Second Annual State Fair Farm Boys' Encampment will be a big feature of the 1913 exposition. The managers will pay the expenses of 104 farm boys. One will be selected by a board committee in each county of the state and two have been chosen by the managers from each congressional district. These young agriculturists will be entertained and instructed during the entire week and will go home with new information and inspiration.

As in all live schools, amusements have a big share in the Minnesota State Fair's curriculum. Contracts are being made for the greatest list of entertainment features ever seen at any fair in America. Without exaggeration, it can be said that the fair-goer this year will get five times the amount of amusement for the money that he can get anywhere else.

DROWNED IN RED LAKE RIVER

RALPH SELSTAD, A NINETEEN YEAR OLD LAD DROWNED WHILE IN SWIMMING.

Ralph Selstad, the nineteen year old son of Mrs. Anna Selstad, a widow living at 104 Fourth St. West, was drowned Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Red Lake river below the Squaw Point bridge. Ralph with a number of other boys was in swimming. He was not a very good swimmer but tried to follow the other boys out to the boom at the pier in the middle of the river. When he had nearly reached the boom he became exhausted and seemed about played out. One of the boys standing on the boom log asked him if he could "make it" and he said "no". With that he clutched at a dead-head and the boys that were near him tried to push him toward the boom but his and the dead-head came together. He must have held to the lower end of the log with a death grip for he did not come to the surface again. Some of the boys who were in swimming at the time dived into the water to try and bring the body up. While they managed to touch the bottom several times the water was too deep for them to be able to get hold of the unfortunate lad. Quite a crowd gathered on the bank and looked on while the lad's friends tried to get him out with a fish line. In the middle of the excitement Willie Fasel, a son of the County Auditor, had the presence of mind to run to a neighboring house and telephone for the doctor who arrived just in time to see the body of the lad brought to the surface. The water was about eighteen feet deep where the drowning occurred and some difficulty was experienced in recovering the body which was in the water twenty-five minutes and was finally brought up by the use of a garden rake attached to a pole.

The deeper water the boys were trying to reinstate the lifeless form but without avail. When it was found that life was extinct the body was taken to Halvorsen's Undertaking Rooms where it was laid out to await the funeral which will take place on Wednesday from Zion Lutheran church. Rev. A. L. Larson will conduct the services.

The boy leaves to mourn his loss his mother, Anna Selstad, Elmar, an older brother, Harold and a younger brother, and Louise a younger sister. —Thief River Falls Times.

Keep Your Cows.

The demand for dairy products of all kinds is increasing faster than the supply and is bringing high prices for the raw material. This ought to be an incentive to every farmer who is situated so that he can produce more good cream to keep more cows and better ones. Don't be afraid of overdoing the business. The good cow is the best investment on the farm. Why not have more of a good thing?

In a recent address at Grand Forks at the North Dakota Corn and Clover Convention, a leading dairy expert said:

"Thousands of dairyman have owned and handled cows all their lives and yet are poor judges of cows. The reason for this is that the knowledge which they have gained from their experience is superficial. They have never compared their judgment or experience with actual records or tests. They have a vague conception of the type of the good dairy cow, but it is based more upon their personal opinion than upon evidence or fact. Dairymen are coming to the better realization of the fact that milk producing qualities in a cow are accompanied by a general conformation that is quite characteristic. Dairymen who make a success profit from the business familiarize themselves with the general characteristics of a good dairy cow, and make a close study of the relation they bear to economical production."

COW POX.

Treatment in Light Cases Usually Necessary.

Cow pox is distinctly infectious. It appears on the teats or sometimes on the udder, and is most commonly acquired from one cow to another by the milker's hands. Infected cows should always be milked last and the milker's hands thoroughly washed with soap and warm water, and then die infected.

After infection there is a variable integral of from two to perhaps seven days before any symptoms appear, then there is heat, hardness, with a trifling disturbance of the general health and decrease in the quantity and quality of milk. The affected teats become a little swollen, and tender, particularly near the top. Small pimples appear, varying in size up to that of a garden pea. The color varies considerably with the color and condition of the skin—bluish white, reddish, or even dull cream color being common. The small swellings dip somewhat in the center. They mature about the tenth day. The contents of the pimples or vesicle gradually become thicker and the little lump dries up into a dark crust which falls off in four or five days and leaves a little scar. Most cases of cow pox recover promptly in about twenty days.

Treatment in mild cases is usually unnecessary. In other cases it may be advisable to apply carbolized vaseline to the sores twice a day. Never use a milk tube if it can be avoided.—M. H. Reynolds, Veterinarian, University Farm, St. Paul.

TO ERADICATE THE BURDOCK.

The burdock disappears as deeper tillage and grain crops put under cultivation. Continued cutting will exhaust the plants and, in time, exterminate the weed. The process may be hastened by cutting off deeply below the surface and applying a handful of salt or a few drops of gasoline or kerosene to the root of each plant. Where the trees are not too thick the burr roots are badly infected, it will be best to plow the land and grow a crop of corn or potatoes before reseeding. Cutting off the tops three times with a "scuffle" is the best treatment where only a few scattering plants exist.

On the Rural Delivery

By OLIVE EDNA MAY

Edward Bartlett, on route No. 4, free rural delivery, was driving his rattle-trap buggy along the road looking over the letters to be put in the next mail box, when he encountered George Irwin walking.

"Anything for me, Ed?" asked Irwin.

"If there is you'll get it in your box," replied the postman.

"No answer back of town; on my way to the station now. It would be an accommodation if you would give it to me now if there's anything for me. Otherwise it'll have to be forwarded."

Bartlett handed the letters over to him, and while the former looked over a handful of letters the latter tossed forward to one of the addresses himself.

"There it is!" he exclaimed, making a grab for one of the letters, and his interference resulted in the spilling of some twenty of them on the ground, while a dozen more fell within the buggy. Irwin apologized, and, picking up the letters scattered over the road, he handed them to Bartlett.

"Did you find the letter addressed to you?" asked the latter.

"No. It wasn't for me. I thought it was, but I was mistaken."

"Now, see here, George Irwin, hereafter when I'm handling my mail you keep your hands off it. The next time you do a thing like that I'll have you arrested for interfering with a government officer in the discharge of his duties."

"Sorry, Ed. I didn't intend to interfere."

Bartlett drove on without making a reply. At Deacon Warder's box he found Sadie Warder, the deacon's daughter, aged eighteen, waiting for him. There was an intensity in her face that indicated anxious expectation. Bartlett had often delivered letters to her addressed in a masculine hand, and by the way she hugged them to her heart and ran into the house with them he had surmised that they came from a lover. Instead of putting the mail in the box he handed it to her. She looked over it and her face fell.

"Nothing more?" she asked, looking up at the postman despairingly.

"That's all, Sorry I haven't one for you today, Miss Warder. Perhaps I'll bring you one tomorrow."

"No, you won't," replied the girl, tears starting to her eyes. "If it was to come at all it would have come today."

Bartlett sighed sympathetically. During the rest of his trip over his route his mind was more on Sadie Warder than on the mail. Her words "if it was to come at all it would have come today", remained with him, and he couldn't banish them. What did they mean? That the expected letter, was to have been from the lover he could not declare?

Our minds now roll speedily from one train of thought to another, and Bartlett found his mind in motion again jump from Miss Warder to George Irwin. And yet there is sometimes a connection between two sides of the gap too subtle for us to distinguish. Bartlett's mind turned from Sadie's disappointment to George Irwin's grabbing at the letters. Then he made a mental jump, for there was no connection between his two thoughts. Sadie's letter didn't come, and perhaps George Irwin when he picked up those that fell on the ground obtained one from a lover. Instead of putting the mail in the box he handed it to her. She looked over it and her face fell.

"Nothing more?" she asked, looking up at the postman despairingly.

"That's all, Sorry I haven't one for you today, Miss Warder. Perhaps I'll bring you one tomorrow."

"No, you won't," replied the girl, tears starting to her eyes. "If it was to come at all it would have come today."

COURT TELLS JURY TO PROBE RATES

JUDGE JOHNSON IS PUSHING RAILROAD FARE CASES.

LIKELY RETURN INDICTMENTS

Special Attorneys Appointed to Press Hearing in Goodhue County—Final Instructions Disregarded.

Red Wing.—The grand jury for Goodhue county, which has been in recess two weeks or more, at once its failure to return indictments against railway companies operating in the county and charged to be violating the state law of 1907, providing that no more than 2 cents a mile shall be charged passengers, reassembled shortly before noon here Monday. Judge Albert Johnson again instructed the jurymen to return indictments provided the evidence placed before them warranted.

Representing the State.

To represent the interests of the state before the jury the court appointed Senator Rockne of Zumbrota and Senator Schaller of Hastings. This action was taken to preclude any danger of complications should the county attorney appear for the state, county attorneys as well as other officials having been enjoined by the federal court pending the consideration of the case by the United States supreme court.

Judge Johnson, in charging the jurymen, repeated in part the instructions he gave them at their original session and in addition said:

The Instructions.

"The findings of any other court outside of this state have no bearing on this case. The matter has never been before the state courts at all. On the contrary, an effort has been made to keep it out of such courts. If you find that the law has been violated in this county, it is your duty to return indictments. It is the duty of this court to bring before you not only the minor violations of law, but the larger violations as well, on the theory that we should not simply punish the small criminals and let the big case go free."

The Original Charge.

In his original charge to the jury Judge Johnson said: "It is unlawful for railroad companies to charge more than 2 cents a mile in this state. A violation of this act means a felony has been committed. There are two violations daily and right under the noses of the officials of the county and state. If a law is worth committing, it is worth enforcing. The statutes are as clear as sunshine. If the railway companies here violated the law, it is your duty to return an indictment."

Among officials and attorneys around the court house, there is the impression that the jury will hardly fail to indict this time.

RAILROADS AGREE TO TERMS

Long War is Ended and 2-Cent Fare Will Come Soon.

St. Paul.—At a meeting with the State Railroad and Warehouse commission railroad presidents and attorneys agreed to establish, as soon as possible, the state rates held valid by the Supreme Court of the United States, thus ending all talk of further litigation on the part of the roads.

The rates include the two-cent passenger fare law and the commodity and freight schedules. President Carl R. Gray of the Great Northern says that the state officials there will be no further delay.

Railroads agree to pay refunds due shippers for overcharges during the long period in which the state rates were enjoined. The total will amount to approximately $3,000,000.

Lakefield Has Building Boom.

Lakefield.—Lakefield is having a building boom this year. Over $75,000 for new business blocks is being expended, which makes the main streets look like a new village. In the residence section many new dwellings and improvements are also being made.

Leap Out of Window in Relief.

Minneapolis, June 22.—Mrs. John Kurtz of Hutchinson, who jumped from a window in her room in Ebel hospital died a few hours later.

Clue to St. Paul Murder.

St. Paul.—Discovery by the police of a bundle of blood-stained handkerchiefs and towels and a pail of water stained with blood are the most promising clues developed in the investigation of the murder of Mrs. Joseph Garment, 35 years old, Monday night. The cloths were found under a pile of clothing in a basket, and the police believe they were hidden there by the slayer after the crime had been committed. The water looked as if it had been used to wash away blood stains.

Farmer Found Dead in a Field.

Clements.—Fritz Plotz, a well-to-do farmer living three miles southwest of here, was found dead in his wheat field with his shotgun beside him, and one barrel discharged. The charge of shot entered the abdomen.

Revival Begins at Luverne.

Luverne.—Misses Evelyn A. Camp and Sarah Shufelt of Minneapolis, recent graduates of the state university, have begun a series of revival meetings of the Baptist church in this city. Miss Camp is the speaker.

MINNESOTA ROADS ACCEDE TO DECISION.

RAIL HEADS DECIDE TO ABIDE BY DECISION.

Refund of Excess Charges Is Promised Without Litigation Where Receipts Are Shown.

St. Paul, June 22.—Unless the unexpected happens the two-cent passenger fare and the commodity and merchandise freight rates protested by the Great Northern and other roads and which resulted in a sweeping victory for the state, will be in effect within the next 20 days. Practically all the roads operating in the state have agreed to accept the findings of the United States supreme court.

Following a conference participated in by Carl R. Gray, president of the Great Northern; J. M. Hansford, of the Northern Pacific and attorneys representing the Great Northern, Northern Pacific, Omaha and Northwestern, the state railroad and warehouse commission and Attorney General Smith were assured that there would be no further litigation.

This means that as soon as the decision of the United States supreme court is filed in the office of the circuit court of appeals in St. Paul that the new rates will go into effect. This will probably be about July 3.

At the same time, Mr. Smith will appear before the federal court and ask that the state injunctions obtained by those roads which did not participate in the test case be vacated. Mr. Smith has been given to understand that his motion will not be opposed. He is now preparing his appeal to the federal court. The six roads are the Northwestern, Minneapolis, Great Western, Rock Island, Minnesota & International and the Omaha.

What the railroad commission and Mr. Smith were most interested in than anything else was the return to shippers of the millions of dollars in the shape of excess charges. This excess also takes in the passenger rates. The commission was assured by the railroad officials that wherever receipts could be produced by shippers cess would be paid back without litigation or trouble.

Since 1911 the railroads have been filing monthly with the commission reports of all freight receipts, together with the name of the shipper, the consignee, the amount paid and the amount of the excess charge. This probably $3,000,000, but it is only a part of the excess that has been paid by shippers and the traveling public since the rate litigation started.

LEGISLATORS APPEALED TO

League Asks Additional Funds to Push Better Farming Work.

Austin.—The final session of the midsummer meeting of the Southern Minnesota Better Development league was marked by the adoption of resolutions asking the legislature at its special session to make provision for aiding at least fifteen more counties of the state, to the extent of $1,000 each, in maintaining county agricultural agents. The league also went on record as favoring employment of a paid secretary to devote all of his time to the work of organization and necessary publicity.

The boards of commissioners in the several counties of the league were called upon to appropriate at least $200 for the maintenance of the work for the present year, and as much more as may be needed hereafter. The resolutions was asked to enact legislation whereby it would be legal for it to aid the counties on a plan similar to that recommended by former Secretary Morris of Oregon in his report to post roads, or to loan the revenue derived from school taxes to the counties at a low interest rate.

Life Term For Boy Murderer.

Rochester.—Life imprisonment in the St. Cloud reformatory, the only sentence imposed by Judge Snow upon Sidney Schmidt, 16 years old, found guilty of murder in the second degree for shooting and killing his cousin, Lester Snow, a neighbor boy, was granted that the evidence did not sustain the verdict was denied.

Weed Poison Fatal to Stock.

Hutchinson.—The county fair association used a weed-killing mixture on the race track, and as a result will probably have to settle for five valuable cows which were pastured on the grounds, as they died shortly after the poison was sprinkled on the weeds.

Taft to Be At University.

Minneapolis. — Professor William Howard Taft of Yale university will conduct a lecture course in the law school of the University of Minnesota next June. The invitation to the former president of the United States to come to Minnesota and give a course of lectures was extended some time ago by Dean William R. Vance, who before he came to Minnesota was a member of the Yale law school faculty. The details have not been arranged, but it is probably that they will take at least one week.

Perham Papers Consolidated.

Fergus Falls.—H. L. Gregory, who conducts the Perham Enterprise, has purchased the Perham Bulletin and consolidated the two papers. L. E. Devereaux, who was editor of the Bulletin, died recently.

Church Cornerstones Laid.

Paynesville.—The German Evangelical camp meeting opened last week under the leadership of Rev. A. H. Unfuger, presiding elder. Sunday the cornerstone of the new church was laid.

NEEDLESS AND MISERABLY EXECUTED OPERATIONS SCORED.

Physician Pleads for Higher Training as Requisite for Work of Profession.

Minneapolis. — Famous surgeons from every part of the United States, crowding the university chapel, were told that "ill-advised, miserably executed and unnecessary operations" were "the crying shame" of present day surgery.

The speaker declared it a question with the avaricious practitioner of the commercial value of the patient, not the patient's welfare, and said the time had come when stringent restrictions should be placed on the class to be permitted to do surgery, with a systematic education and long training under competent directors.

Dr. William D. Haggard of Nashville, Tenn., was the speaker. He addressed the section on surgery of the American Medical association on "The Requirements of the Surgeon."

Dr. Haggard deplored the fact that a pilot of a lumber scow must first serve as an apprentice while apprenticeship was not compulsory in the case of a surgeon. The great middle class is the chief sufferer from the "license to do surgery" and the ordinary practitioner is the principal offender, according to Dr. Haggard, who deprecated the "commercial spirit that has raised its hydra-head in all its monstrousness across the land."

The speaker outlined a movement the ultimate purpose of which may be a more restrictive standard applied to those who, measured by the highest standards, are qualified not only by education and experience, but morally to perform the work of surgery.

A national organization of surgery, representing and covering the entire continent, devoted to the betterment of the profession, was outlined.

Before being licensed, Dr. Haggard would require a surgeon to spend four years in a medical school, one or two years as hospital interne, post-graduate work in surgical colleges, a given number of years general medical practice, apprenticeship under a skilled surgeon and, finally, examination and licensure under legal requirements.

MINNESOTA LABOR MEN ELECT

Officers Chosen and Duluth Selected as City for the Next Convention.

St. Cloud, Minn.—E. O. Hall of Minneapolis was re-elected president of the Minnesota Federation of Labor at the annual convention here. Other officers were elected as follows:

Vice presidents—Fred Herbst, H. W. Libby, Winona; third district, Louis Hollenberger, Red Wing; fourth district, W. C. Deidre and John Boyle, St. Paul; fifth district, N. C. O'Connor and C. O. Mulholland, Minneapolis; sixth district, P. T. Brown, Brainerd; seventh district, H. Scherer, St. Cloud; eighth district, S. S. McDonald, Duluth; ninth district, Albert Hurst, Point Grand Forks. W. E. Morgan of Duluth was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Duluth was awarded the convention for 1914. The Minnesota Union Advocate published in St. Paul, was designated as the official paper of the federation.

Redwood Falls Builds Roadway.

Redwood Falls.—"Good roads day" proved a red letter day in Redwood Falls. The contractors who bore the new concrete bridge in process of construction across the gorge on Lower River pulled out the old bridge and practically shut off all persons from getting west from entering the city. But the business interests arose to the occasion. Under the auspices of the Automobile club nearly a hundred men, including bankers, lawyers and merchants clad in overalls, with pick, spade and dynamite, went to work to construct a new road through forest, field and across ledges. The chairman of the ledges became the signal for a crowd to rush in and clear away the debris. At nightfall three steep ledges had been cleared to a width of twenty feet, and the entire roadway made passable for both teams and automobiles.

Lake City Wife Deserter.

Lake City.—Charles Andrews, a blacksmith, was arrested Wednesday evening, charged with wife desertion. The charges were preferred by E. B. Nelson, sheriff of Webster City, Ia. Andrews is being held by the Wabasha authorities pending the securing of extradition papers from Governor Eberhart. He is said to have a wife and child at Webster City.

Foot Catches; Is Killed.

Winona, Minn., June 21.—Charles Perkins, 63 years old, was killed, and four companions were in peril when, in going to safety from a bridge below Trempealeau village while on their way to work, when a Burlington southbound passenger train, traveling at a high speed, bore them down from behind. The men were bridge carpenters. Perkins was slightly dead and when the train rounded a curve several rods behind them one of the men shouted and the four leaped. A second later Perkins jumped, but his foot caught.

1,500 Acres Sold at Brainerd.

Brainerd.—The land sale at Brainerd, conducted by Theodore Nelson of the state auditor's office, was very successful. Some 1,600 acres brought from $5 to $10 an acre. There were purchasers from other cities.

Faribault.

Faribault. — The large sorghum plant at the Minnesota school for the feeble minded was destroyed by fire. This was one of the largest mills in southern Minnesota. The cause of the fire is supposed to have been spontaneous combustion.

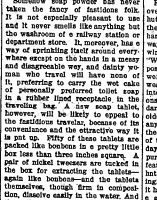
SOAP TABLETS FOR TOURISTS

New Preparation That Is Likely to Appeal to Traveler of Fastidious Tastes.

Somehow soap powder has never taken the fancy of fastidious folk. It is not especially pleasant to use and it never smells like anything but the washroom of a railway station or department store. It, moreover, has a way of sprinkling itself around everywhere except on the hands in a messy and disagreeable way, and darkly wise men who travel will have none of it, preferring to carry the wet cake so generally preferred today and in a rubber lined receptacle in the traveling bag. A new soap tablet, however, will be likely to appeal to the fastidious traveler, because of its convenience and the attractive way it is put up. Fifty of these tablets are packed like bonbons in a pretty little box less than three inches square. A pair of nickel tweezers are tucked in the box for extracting the tablets—again like bonbons—and the tablets themselves, though firm in composition, dissolve easily in the water. And the entire package costs no more than the ordinary cake of good toilet soap.



NEW PARIS MODEL.

CLOTHES FOR RAINY DAYS

Fashions and Customs Have Undergone Remarkable Change in the Past Ten Years.

Fashions and customs have changed overwhelmingly in the past ten years, but in no other respect more than in the rainy day garb. Everyone remembers with many a hearty laugh the way people would look out of the window and say, in a resigned way: "Well, it's raining." That meant very positively that good looking clothes were not to be donned under such weather, and one must wear a mackintosh—was there ever a more hideous garment made?—boiled rubber, dark clothes, shabby shoes and one's oldest hat. And she never did enjoy anything in her oldest hat! Nowadays the girl who looks on the cheerful side of things and rather enjoys the rainy day for a change has a bright red or purple hat that, of course, has no feathers, but is plain and serviceable, but which she knows is most becoming. She wears her tailored suit, but it has a short skirt and is protected by a good looking rain coat. Her shoes are high and thick, but they are just as good looking as those she keeps for sunny days, and often, to add another bit of color, she carries a red or purple silk umbrella. It keeps the rain off just as well as a black one and it just makes you feel better. It was cheerful what a becoming hat and gay umbrella can do toward dissolving away the blues on a stormy day.

HAIR A LA POMPADOUR AGAIN

French Expert Says Style of Hairdressing for This Season Will Be Simple.

An indication of the fashions in hairdressing for the coming season was given at a meeting of more than 400 hairdressers from Londo, Brussels and Berlin in London recently.

"The tendency is," said a famous Paris hairdresser, "for the hair to be dressed upwards, and, in fact, to show a return to the pompadour style. The hands of the new fashion are simplicity. There will be practically no chignon, and the hair will not, as formerly, be dressed with many combs. The new style should be especially suitable for the English woman."

Blue and White China.

Blue and white German china, decorated with Delft designs, is good china for the luncheon table. It is made on good lines, is thin enough to be delicate and thick enough to be durable. A coffee cup and saucer in this china is priced 50 cents. The luncheon plate of blue and white fluted Copenhagen tableware is a square and thin earthenware cup with a dainty egg cup held by the stem in each of the eight scallops.

One set is in embroidered black net, with a straight hem embroidered in many colored silks in drawn thread stitch. Another set is of very finely tucked lawn, the tucks running across and across. The edges are finished off with an almost invisible ruche of the lawn.

A Flexible Bracelet.

A flexible bracelet watch of dainty workmanship is composed of sterling silver, decorated with French enamel in turquoise blue and white, and can be adjusted to fit the wearer's arm. These watches are chiefly to be recommended for their lightness, durability and general attractiveness.

New Tailored Waist.

A new washable shirtwaist is made up in the lines of a man's shirt, with pleated bosom front, dickey collar and black cravat. It may also be had in white crepe de china.

A gown of blue and silver brocade trimmed with lace and pink mallins, the latter forming the short corsage.

Bridesmaid Dresses.

Bridesmaids should be dressed in harmony with the bridal frock, yet nothing more elaborate or expensive. All gowns should form a setting for the one gown of importance. A bride should always wear gloves, as wears her bridesmaids, and this may occur when there is a home wedding without his being worn. The bridesmaids may wear hats if they choose, but not unless the bride is veiled.

HOW MONEY CAN BE MADE WITH POULTRY

A String of White Wyandottes.

(By KATHERINE ATHERTON DUNCE.)

People who go to the market to buy eggs or poultry always want the best they can get. And the only way they can tell is by the looks. So if you want to get good prices for your poultry products, you must make them look nice.

At this time of year your most important product will be your eggs. The boy with only a few hens will hardly be able to do any shipping on his own account, but must depend on his home market. There are, however, several ways in which he can get a little more for his surplus fresh eggs.

One way is to arrange with your home dealer to furnish him strictly fresh eggs, graded and guaranteed, for his finest class of trade. Any grocer likes to get eggs that he knows he can recommend, and is willing to pay a good price for the same. As many local customers buy their eggs just a dozen at a time, it adds to the attractiveness and salability of your goods if they are put up in neat cartons holding just that number.

Before your eggs can be clean. If your hens are of several kinds, you are likely to get eggs that are not uniform in color. Sort them so as to put each color by itself. If you have never tried this plan, you have no idea how much nicer your eggs will look, and how much more quick to their appearance helps your price.

Not long ago the following little every day occurrence was noted in a grocery where many eggs were being brought in. A neat basketful had been offered for sale, and the clerk was busy counting them out. They were like hundreds of "store eggs" are, but it is to be hoped his case is not like those of the quite stained and dirty.

"Anything with a shell or feathers for an egg with some folks," grumbled the disgusted clerk, as he gingerly fished out two or three specimens that were most indisputably 'old,' and laid them carefully in one side. "If these old things didn't come out of a last year's hen's nest I'll mine my guess." At last the basket was counted, and returned to the counter to settle with their owner.

"Twelve cents is the best we can do on that grade of eggs." he said. "We're overloaded with them now."

"I thought you were paying more than that," protested the woman, who had brought them in.

"I had to buy out over two dozen that were cracked, or otherwise unsalable," replied the grocer. "If you had sorted your eggs I might have done better for you."

Of course she did not like it, but whose fault was it if she could not get the highest market price?

A little later another basket was brought in. There were two boxes of them, in each of which were twelve cartons, holding a dozen eggs each. One box was full of white-shelled eggs, clean as pearls, uniform in size, and packed with the small end down. The other held brown-shelled eggs, some cartons being light brown, and others dark brown. The clerk smiled as he lifted them out.

"Eighteen cents a dozen, and glad to get them. Orders waiting for them right now. Jim, go send 'phone to Mrs. Grant and Mrs. East that we've got those eggs they want."

A Dual-Purpose Hen.

And that is the difference. When the grocer knows what he can depend on, he is willing to pay for it. He does not have to be a master for his best eggs, any more than you do.

Another good way is to sell your eggs directly to individual customers, thus making the middleman's profit, too. There are many people who are willing to pay from five to ten cents a dozen more than the regular market price for eggs that they know will be fresh and good. A very good plan is to mark each carton with your name, the date the eggs were gathered, and the words "Guaranteed fresh." It does not take long to work up a fancy trade in this way, but of course it takes a little more time than to sell direct to the grocery.

ESSENTIAL PART IN TOMATO CARE

Pruning Vines Is Most Convenient Way to Secure Stronger Vine and Stalk.

(By J. J. CASEY.)

The tomato is raised in this country principally for the fruit which it yields. They are dedicated as a food for all classes of people, the laboring classes especially, being large users of the tomatoes.

I find the tomato easily grown, but I also find they must be cared for in the proper way to secure the fruit in the most essential parts in the culture and production of the tomato is the branches of the new fashion is now. Brussels and Berlin in London recently.

PREDICTIONS OF RAINY WEATHER

Horses Neigh, Cattle Low, Peacocks Scream, and Ducks and Geese Are Noisy.

(By A. V. MEERSCH.)

It is well known that animals and fowls give notice of the approach of rainy weather by their peculiar actions. Dogs and cats are less energetic and show an unusual disposition to sleep. Sheep crowd together in a close mass. Horses neigh, cattle low, peacocks scream, guinea fowls squeal, and ducks and geese are more than usually noisy.

All this is due to the decreased supply of oxygen in the air and to the depressing effect of damp air on their nerves. It is then some difficulty in breathing and makes them listless and uneasy.

Another sign of rain is seen when a cat rubs her ears and sometimes every part of her head that she can reach. This is due in part to the dampness of the air, which penetrates the hair and makes the skin itch, but is chiefly due, perhaps, to the slight electricity charged with electricity. The hair of the cat becomes heavily charged, and she rubs it to make it smooth, and to brush away the peculiar sensation electricity causes.

Perhaps you have noticed that the leaves of the dandelion and clover fold up as the rain is about to spread, when the rain is near. As these plants stick their leaves out about the stimulating influence of sunshine, the cloudy sky puts them to sleep. Another reason for the closing is the expansion of the air vessels of the plants, due to the damp air which causes the leaves to contract and close. Just as paper curls when one side of it is moistened.

Most Useful Bird.

The common plover is one of the most useful birds in the land, as it destroys snails, wire worms, beetles, and all sorts of obnoxious insects. In Scotland these birds are protected by law.

A Good Pasture.

Timothy and clover make a fine pasture mixture, and it is best to be sown in the spring. Sow broadcast. Mix timothy with it, sowing ten pounds of timothy and four pounds of clover seed. Prepare the ground as for wheat the previous fall.

Increases Power.

A new windmill has horizontally arranged vanes, so sheltered by a hood that those which move against the wind do not feed its force, thereby permitting increased size and power.

Value of Green Bone.

Green cut bone is one of the best obtainable foods to induce egg production and promote growth.

Right Kind of Grit.

Grit, to be of any use to the fowl must be hard, and it must have sharp corners and cutting edges.

Mr. Gibson will take charge at once and thoroughly cover his territory.

The completion of George Walker's new barn was most properly celebrated at the Walker home Thursday evening by the giving of an excellent supper by Mrs. Walker. All the neighbors for miles around and many automobile loads from the city were present. It is estimated that between 250 and 300 people were present to help dispose of the good things that Mrs. Walker had prepared and to view the new structure. The receipts were something over $50 and will go into the treasury of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Walker now has one of the best, if not the best, barns in the county and it certainly is a structure that any farmer might well feel proud of.

Mrs. L. H. Healy had the misfortune last Friday evening to break her knee cap. She had stepped out onto the porch and was going down the steps when one of her ankles twisted and she partly fell, breaking the knee cap squarely in two, although Mr. Healy informs us, that she did not strike on that knee at all when falling. Dr. Wilkinson was immediately called and in company with Mr. Healy they drove to Grand Forks the same evening, where the injured knee was attended to. Mrs. Healy is now at St. Michael's hospital in that city and getting along as nicely as could be expected. The injury is a serious one, but the doctors think that with proper care, it limb.

Every Buick Owner a Buick Booster

You Can Do It With a Buick

Some Things that the Buick Motor Co. Print in their Catalogues Without Fear of Contradiction.....

Speed and Power.

The Buick overhead valve motor is guaranteed to produce more speed and more power than any other type of motor ever built—whether American or European manufacture, the actual difference in same being 15 per cent to 20 per cent.

Reserve Power.

By reason of this great reserve power, Buick cars do not labor or strain under the stress of hard roads and high hills, this is why they continue to give satisfactory service for years after other cars are worn out and discarded and they produce as much power after long service as many of the moderate price cars do when new.

Economy.

Buick cars will run more miles per gallon of gasoline than any other car manufactured. Buick overhead valve motor will burn a lower grade of gasoline and produce good results therefrom. The fact that the grade of gasoline is daily becoming lower makes this an important item. The Buick motor will handle fuel of a grade on which others fail.

Durability.

Years ago we made a challenge—which has never been accepted—to any competition to produce a worm out Buick car. Later we publicly challenged and continue to do so, any competitor to produce the names and addresses of as many owners of cars who have run either 20,000, 30,000, 50,000, 60,000, 75,000 or 100,000 miles.

Reliability.

The Buick car is called upon to render harder service in every territory than any other automobile manufactured. The owner of a Buick does not hesitate to use his car when conditions are considered by owners of other cars as unfit for motor travel.

Cost of Upkeep.

No car on the market is maintained at as low a cost of upkeep as the Buick. Figures show that the entire consumption of Buick parts, figuring on all cars that have been built since 1904, average less than $1.00 per car per moth. As to price of parts they are lower than any other standard car besides the Ford. We invite comparisons.

Call and let us demonstrate the above to your entire satisfaction.

The following clipping was given us for publication by a member of the local automobile club as equally applicable to this community:

The automobile has introduced some new and exigent problems into modern life. Safety, of course, is the most important one, and its solution becomes increasingly difficult as gas-driven vehicles multiply on city streets and country roads.

But there is another problem which is only less exigent, and that is the problem of noise. The exhausts of innumerable engines fill the air day and night with their clamor, while the various horns and the shrill whistle pierce the stillness of the night everywhere. Sleep is becoming difficult even in neighborhoods that were once the quietest. The nocturnal joy-rider shoots athwart the consciousness of the sleeper from the dewy eve till the wee small hours, while with early dawn come the stentorous motorcyclist with his puffings and popping and the delivery truck.

Must we become accustomed to sleeping amidst these clamors, paying toll by the way of insomnia and nerve-prostration?

Meanwhile, let it be noted that the most expert driver is also the one that molles the least noise in running his car. It is only the joy driver who rushes hither and yon with his muffler cut out, believing that thereby he is attracting general attention to himself. It is the awkward beginner who keeps his horn tooting continuously. Cutting out the muffler is not only illegal but quite unnecessary, and the horn should be reserved for times when warning of approach is really needed or seems advisable as a precaution.

Learn to drive your car or your cycle or your truck with the minimum of noise and thereby prove yourself not only an expert, but one who takes thought of the comfort of others.—Minneapolis Journal, June 30.

RED LAKE FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, JULY 10, 1913. VOL. XXX—NO. 41

The people of the city were greatly shocked last Thursday evening to learn that Paul Mathews, an old resident of the city for many years of age, had drowned in the Red Lake river just below the Marshall dam. There was no one at hand when the drowning occurred and how it happened will probably never be known, although it is supposed that he had an attack of some kind and fell into the river.

The old gentleman was very fond of fishing and was down at the river almost every day. On this particular day Peter Starkea went with him and they fished until noon when Mr. Starken went home to dinner. He returned about two o'clock and discovered Mr. Mathews' boat and fish line on the river bank, but the old gentleman was nowhere about. Mr. Starken started immediately to search for him but in about an hour gave it up and went for more help. The river was dragged and after several hours work his body was found and brought to shore and a doctor summoned, but nothing could be done as life had been extinct for several hours.

Paul Mathews was born in Quebec, Canada, in 1843 and was therefore just 70 years of age at the time of his death. He came to Minnesota from Canada in 1877 and resided on a farm in Polk county for thirty years. The past six years he resided in this county, part of the time with his three sons and the last three years as a resident of this city. He was married in 1864 to Miss Celina Pruneau and three sons were born to them, all of whom are living. Mr. Mathews was married three times, and is survived by his present wife whom he married about a year ago, three sons, J. F., Napoleon and Eugene and three stepsons, Alfont, Leon and Zephorine Morrisette.

The funeral srvices were held Saturday morning from St. Joseph's church, Rev. Fr. Boyle officiating, and the remains interred in the Catholic cemetary at Louisville. The pall bearers were: J. F. Mathews, Napoleon Mathews, Eugene Mathews, Alfont Morissette, Leon Morissette and Zephorine Morissette.

THE TRAINING SCHOOL

Opened Last Wednesday and the Work is Progressing Very Nicely.

The teachers' training school for Red Lake and Pennington counties opened in this city last Wednesday and is being held in the Washington school on the North side. Between fifty and sixty teachers have enrolled and the work is progressing very nicely under the direction of Conductor H. H. White. The attendance from Thief Falls and vicinity is very small as yet but several more from there are expected to enroll within the next few days. It is to be a four weeks session.

FINE AUTO-MOBILE RACES

AT THE MINNESOTA STATE FAIR THIS YEAR—BETTER THAN LAST YEAR'S.

The Minnesota State Fair will be conducted this year by a great automobile speed carnival. The great popularity of last year's automobile races has led the management this year to plan an even greater series of races and exhibitions by the highest stars in the automobile firmament. Negotiations are now under way to secure the attendance here on Saturday afternoon of fair week of all the leading drivers and race cars in the country.

Ed S. Worp, superintendent of the automobile program department, and Secretary J. C. Simpson, are in correspondence with the leading race promotors and performers,and expect to have an unusual program arranged within a short time.

There was an effort made during the legislative session last winter, to pass a bill prohibiting racing on circular dirt tracks. The bill was not passed by either house however, and the fact that there had never been an accident on the Minnesota State Fair track is believed to be responsible for the sentiment against it. The antiaction however has led the state fair managers to look over their track with a view to safeguarding the public. Secretary Simpson announces that he is now planning the erection of a concrete wall on the outside of the inner turn of the track and this is believed to be the only thing needed to absolutely protect the spectators at least. The danger to the drivers themselves is a chance that they have to take, and far which they are generously paid.

There will be a number of other changes in the staging and management of the horticultural department and every effort will be made from this time an to attract large and comprehensive exhibits. There will properly show Minnesota ability as a producer of horticultural products.

RINGERS ON TRIP TO GETTYSBURG?

IT IS SAID THAT OTHERS THAN VETERANS TRAVELED AT EXPENSE OF STATE.

St. Paul:—(Special.)—In the absence of facts for play at this time will not permit of coy criticism hearing on the matter in charge of Minnesota's end of the Gettysburg celebration or the method of selecting those who at tended at the expense of a grateful public; still it is not out of place to mention the fact that criticism is in the making and those who feel aggrieved will be on the job when the time comes to pay the bill. Who made the trip, who did not and who outsiders monopolized some of the best places on the train do lure will be hurled at the subjects at the next gathering of Civil war survivors for some time to come. Already there is a growl, and it is increasing in volume. As you possibly remember the last legislature appropriated $25,000 for the transportation to the Gettysburg battlefield and the return of all living members of the First Minnesota and others who had participated in that memorable conflict. To the list was added medal men, department commanders of the G. A. R., a drum corps and others. The governor had his staff were included and it was this latter addition that came near getting the whole thing out of business. Only by the hardest kind of a fight was the appropriation gotten through the house with the governor's staff included. How those in charge of the excursion to Gettysburg, including Governor Eberhart and others with a supposed pull, have been bombarded by persons who never enrolled powder or saw a scrap more lively than a dog fight with requests to be taken care of is fully known to those named. Every mail brought them and they appeared in person. The greatest care, it is claimed, was taken in arranging the list of those entitled to participate in the legislative appropriation, but there are now persons united enough to say that a number of "ringers" got by and they will scan the bill when it comes up for settlement by the state auditor. Another story is that some members of the staff took their wives, and another that a member of the governor's staff, unable to go on account of business, substituted his son for half. One member of the First Minnesota and others who had participated in that memorable conflict, by the list was added medal men, department commanders of the G. A. R., a drum corps and others. One member of the First Minnesota became so well overlooked, because he had no end a grateful community sent him at its expense. And so the story runs.

When the Gettysburg special left for the famous battleground it consisted of two trains of thirteen cars each and they were all filled. Every veteran had a berth and sustenance from the time he started until he returned. The same provision was made in the case of the governor's staff and others entitled to participate in the appropriation under the terms at the bill. If there were any ringers they were not known to those in charge. However such might be taken from the fact that a number were left aboard the train who paid their way and who appeared in the published list as making the trip. It is a pity that every Civil war veteran in the state could not have been the guest of the state on this occasion and also that there was not room for those not physically incapacitated, but who could not afford the trip and attendants been provided. It naturally seems the others feel a bit sore, and so you can readily see what is in store for those who engineered the trip and those who allowed their names to be used. The men who will disperse the money expect kicks, but I gather from their talk that the bill will be paid without question when it is handed in by the celebration committee. They are all men of honor and integrity.

Several laws passed by the last legislature have become effective, among them what is known as the five cents jury bill. Under its terms ten men can return a verdict when the jury has been in conference twelve hours or longer. The new act is supposed to mend the death knell of disagreements. Another law of interest to farmers of the state is that relating to the sale of seeds. Seed packages under the act must be branded as to contents, including a full history as to growth, age and whether they have been tested as to purity. Still other laws which became effective are prohibition of the public drinking cup, compulsory filing of chattel mortgages with the register of deeds and the abandonment of directed verdicts.

Unless the insurgent members of the Modern Woodmen who were responsible for the passage of a bill last spring permitting them to organize a new association can overcome the recent rulings of Attorney General Smith regarding the act the move-

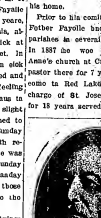
PIONEER PRIEST SUMMONED MONDAY OF THIS WEEK

Rev. Father E. Fayolle, Who for Eighteen Years Was Pastor of St. Josephs Catholic Church, Passed Away at His Home in This City at the Age of Sixty-Three Years.

Monday afternoon at 4:35 p. m. at his home in this city, Fr. E. Fayalle passed away at the age of 63 years, as a direct result of paralysis, although he had been quite sick at times for more than a year past. In June, 1912, he was first taken sick and an operation was performed and he recovered nicely and was feeling quite well until a week previous to his death when he suffered a slight stroke of paralysis. He seemed to be improving until Sunday when he had a relapse, death resulting Monday. Father Fayolle was unconscious most of the day Sunday but regained consciousness Monday and was able to recognize those about him until shortly before the end came.

The death of Father Fayolle brings sadness to the hearts of his former parishioners and the people of the city in general, as he was much thought of by all who knew him and a most exemplary citizen.

Father Fayolle was born in Limoges, France, in 1850 and spent the first seven or eight years of his life there. The family then moved to Algeria, Africa, and lived there for a number of years, during which time he served as an army chaplain in the French army for a couple of years. He came to this country from there and had since made his home.



FATHER E. FAYOLLE.

Prior to his coming to this diocese Father Fayolle had had charge of parishes in several different states. In 1887 he was assigned to St. Anne's church at Crookston and was pastor there for 7 years. In 1894 he came to Red Lake Falls and took charge of St. Joseph's church and for 18 years served his people most faithfully here. Two years ago his failing health. Two years ago his resignation as pastorship and Fr. A. Beyne was sent to take charge. But Father Fayolle had become attached to this city and since that time made Red Lake Falls his home. So far as known he has no living relatives.

The funeral services were held this morning at 10:30 o'clock, from St. Joseph's church, with solemn high requiem mass, the mass being sung by Fr. Theilen of Grantly. Bishop Timothy Corbett of Crookston preached the sermon and Fathers Beyne of this city and Wurm, Taspin and Dufault of Crookston assisted at the mass. All the priests of the diocese and been notified and most of them were present at the services. The remains were interred in the church cemetery east of town, being his wish that he be buried here, where he had made his home for so many years.

It was the most largely attended funeral ever held in this city, people being here from many miles around. The Red Lake Falls Concert Band marched to the home at 3:30 o'clock and escorted the body to the church, where it was viewed by all those who wished to do so. The remains were escorted from the church to the cemetery by the young ladies of the church, the Lady Foresters and the members of the C. O. F.

A more extended abituary will be published in next week's Gazette.

ANOTHER SILVER CUP

Great Northern Railway Will Also Give Silver Cup at the County Fair.

Secretary Robertson has received word that the Great Northern Railway will also give a $50 silver cup at the Red Lake County Fair as a premium to "home" farmer of the county. We understand that the railroad wants to offer this cup for the best exhibit of clover and hay, but the fair management will try to induce them to give this fine premium for the best hog exhibited at the fair.

As noted in the Gazette two or three weeks ago the Northern Pacific Railway has likewise offered a $50 silver cup for the best dairy cow exhibited. With these two valuable prizes to compete for there should be excellent exhibits in these lines, and the farmer who wins one of them may well be proud of the fact. The farmer winning either of these cups three years in succession becomes the owner of the same.

WORD OF WARNING.

Liquor Must not be Given to Persons Listed.

The Chief of Police wishes to give warning to all persons who have been supplying with liquor certain residents of the city who are listed, and to whom the saloon keepers have been forbidden to sell liquor, that the practice must be discontinued. The saloon keepers are forbidden by law to sell liquor to certain unfortunate residents when their mental condition appears to be such that the liquor will be apt to cause them to become intoxicated. Any person who has been getting liquor through other sources, and the parties supplying them are known, will be arrested and the names of others are known and will be severely punished. The law not only forbids saloon men selling liquor to the persons listed but forbids any other person from selling a giving them liquor and it will be strictly enforced hereafter.

NEW REGULATIONS

Parcels Post Stamps May Now be Used on All Classes of Mail Matter.

Two new postal regulations went into effect July 1st which will be of interest to our readers. One is that the parcels post stamps may now be used on all classes of mail matter and the other that all parcels post packages may now be insured for their actual value upon payment of a stipulated fee. The new regulations follow and a perusal of them will be self-explanatory.

On and after July 1, 1913, ordinary postage stamps, including commemorative issues, shall be valid for postage and for insurance and collect-on-delivery fees on fourth-class mail, and distinctive parcel post stamps shall be valid for collection of unpaid and short-paid postage on all classes of mail.

"Sec. 52. A mailable parcel on which the postage is fully prepaid may be insured against loss in an amount equivalent to its actual value but not to exceed $25, on payment of a fee of five cents, and in an amount equivalent to its actual value in excess of $25, but not to exceed $50, on payment of a fee of ten cents in stamps, such stamps to be affixed. The amount of insurance fee shall be placed on the receipt given the sender and on the coupon retained at the mailing office."

A. S. BURLESON,
Postmaster General.

No more parcels post stamps will be printed and when the present supply is exhausted this stamp will become a thing of the past.

SUICIDE AT CROOKSTON

CHARLES SIMPSON OF THIEF RIVER FALLS SHOOTS SELF IN CROOKSTON HOTEL.

Wednesday morning, a few minutes before 5 o'clock, Charles Simpson, aged about 50 years, of Thief River Falls, committed suicide by seeding a .30 calibre bullet from a Smith & Wessen revolver through his head, the bullet entering near the one ear, passing out behind the other, and lodging in the ceiling.

The remains was removed to a room on the third floor of the Bronsens Hotel an North Main street, Crookston, temporary absence of an attendant, who went down stairs to get a pitcher of ice water, and who was not absent from the room more than five minutes.

Tuesday evening about 8:30 Chief Eck received a telephone call from the Bronsens Hotel that a man was having the "jimmies", and with Captain Nelson, hurried to the place. They found Simpson too weak to be removed, and summoned Dr. Nelson, who found the patient in bed asleep and gave him some medicine to bolster him up, and gave Chief Eck a prescription to be administered hourly during the night. Chief Eck had the prescription filled and returned to the hotel about 10 o'clock, when Simpson was feeling much better thanked the police and expressed the hope that thy "would see him thru the deal."

A man was left in charge, and the the patient was restless at times, he was not violent during the night. The attendant left the room shortly before 5 o'clock to replenish the ice water, and when he returned found Simpson breathing his last, with a bullet wound in his head.—Crookston Times.

WILL SOON START

Contract for Constructing New School House to be Let Soon.

Work an Red Lake Falls' new high school building is soon to be commenced. In the issue of the Gazette will be found the notice to contractors for its construction and the contract will be let August 4th, and as soon as possible after that work will be started. The building will be a substantial structure but not elaborate in any way.

It will be 112x75 feet in dimensions with a basement thirteen feet high and two stories above the basement, made of brick and cantalatag stone trimmings, including a gymnasium and assembly room. It is estimated that the building when completed will cost about $37000. However it will not be necessary to complete all the rooms, and it is the opinion of the architect that the building can be completed as far as may be necessary at this time for $31,000 or $32,000. The purpose of the board of education in accepting the plans for a plainer room building is to provide for the future needs of the district.

SCHOOL OFFICERS' TO HOLD MEETING

AT COURT HOUSE IN RED LAKE FALLS NEXT WEDNESDAY JULY 16.

The annual meeting of the school officers of Red Lake county will be held in Red Lake Falls at the court house next Wednesday, July 16. This is to be a joint meeting of the officers and teachers of the county and though primarily for their benefit, every resident is cordially invited to be present.

State Superintendent C. G. Schultz and several others will be present and speak and a most interesting meeting is looked for. Several new laws relating to schools and school work were passed by the last legislature and these will be discussed at this time. Every school officer in the county is urgently requested to be present as he is sure to learn something that will be of benefit to him in his work. The meeting will be called promptly at one o'clock.

School officers will be allowed $3 and mileage but if some should find their districts cannot afford this, they need not draw it—but come just the same.

Following is part of the program: Music by the Red Lake Falls Concert Band and Orchestra, the teachers attending the summer school and the audience.

Anything be pleases,—Supt. C. G. Schultz.

Duties of Teachers and School Officers,—Supt. H. E. White of Ely.

The Necessity and Proper Use of Primary Methods,—Miss Kate K. Munch of Crookston; Miss Gertrude K. Sutton of Hibbing.

The School House as a Center of Attraction,—Miss L. Gertrude R. Hess, Principal Bogolusa school.

Rural School Association,—Paul Carpenter.

FINE NEW BUILDING

Crookston Will Build a New High School That Will Cost, About $60000.

The board of education of the Crookston high school has advertised for bids for the construction of a new high school high school building at that place to cost about $60,000. The building will be a modern up-to-date in every respect and completely equipped throughout.

The outside dimensions of the new building will be 111 feet 2 inches by 231 feet 8 inches. It will be in the shape of a hallow square, and will accupy a commanding position immediately in front of the old Lincoln building, which by this arrangement they will be able to leave undisturbed.

For Sale.

The Lemieux farm, in the town of Clearsea, containing 320 acres, nearly all under cultivation. Now large house and new large barn and other buildings, good well. Four miles from Plummer, half a mile from a school house, $25 an acre, terms to suit. I. LEMIEUX, Administrator.

CROOKSTON WILL HAVE BIG FAIR

PRIZES FOR STOCK ENTRIES TOTAL NEARLY $2,000—EARLY DATES JULY 16 TO 19.

The premium list of the big fair to be held in Crookston July 16 to 19, inclusive, is a premium list that will appeal to the farmers and stock raisers throughout this section of the state. The stock prizes alone total close to $2,000 in cash, and will attract exhibitors from all parts. This is for livestock alone—cattle, horses, hogs, sheep and poultry, and makes a showing that means the magnitude of the fair this year.

Secretary Hitchcock and the fair board are greatly encouraged by the letters of inquiry already received, and the scores who have personally called on the management that they wond exhibit.

The exhibit features this year will be an enlarged one, different from any of the past fairs, and in addition there will be a big carnival on all the days, so that the amusement lovers will get entertainment of any legitimate kind they desire.

There will also be horse races, etc., and already people from all directions are planning on attending. If the weather is half favorable, Crookston will see a duplication of the U. G. T. convention crowds.

TEMPERATURE 100 AT GETTYSBURG, PA.

SUN'S RAYS FAIL TO DISPEL ENTHUSIASM AT REUNION, HOWEVER.

UNIONIST AND REBEL CHEER.

All Rancor Seems Fled as Old Foes Reunite—Pickett's Men Hold a Meeting Once More and Go Over Scene of Charge.

Gettysburg, Pa., July 3.—In the pitiless glare of a sun that sent the mercury bubbling over the 100 mark, the armies of the North and the South went through the formal exercises set to mark the semi-centennial of Gettysburg.

Veterans to the number of 15,000, army officers estimated, filed into the big tent set apart for the exercises, sat in the haze of the heat for two hours, and shook the camp with lusty cheers when the speakers made reference to a re-united nation.

Every Seat Taken.

Every seat under the canvas was taken long before the secretary of War Garrison and Governor Tener, the orators of the day, came chugging up in their automobiles. Although the men in gray were few outnumbered by those in blue, there were possibly a thousand southerners in the amphitheater and what they lacked in numbers they made up in lung power.

When Governor Tener finished his speech, General Bennett P. Young, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, rose slowly and bowed to him. "I can give you something that no one else can either you," he said. "We will now give you the rebel yell."

Nine famous Confederate generals and a thousand veterans of the South gave it so loudly that it was heard far back in the camp toward Gettysburg.

Young created Enthusiastically.

General Young stepped forward to deliver his address he was greeted with wild enthusiasm, the Confederates led by Commander-in-Chief Beers, giving him three lusty cheers and a "tiger."

He took as his keynote the conviction of each side in the great struggle that it fought for a principle which it believed was the truth. Out of his fund of statements was that the northern soldiers deserved more credit than the southerners for the promulgation and successful realization of the present great reunion. When he observed that as the natural movement of its kind in the world.

This compliment to the northern veterans was the signal for wild cries of "no," to which Young quickly replied, "I know better than you do."

His speech ushered the soldiers and he was overwhelmed by handshakes.

Notables on Platform.

Among the 200 guests on the platform were Governors Mann of Virginia, McCreary of Kentucky, Eberhart of Minnesota, Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania and the following Confederate generals: Robinson of Texas, West of Georgia, Thomas J. Shaffer of Louisiana, A. D. Williams of Florida, H. H. Law of Tennessee and Corr of North Carolina.

The invocation was delivered by Rev. George Edwards Lorjoy, chaplain in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic. The benediction was to have been delivered by Rev. H. M. Hamill, chaplain general of the Confederate Veterans, but who failed to show up.

Veterans Fear Camp.

All through the night the veterans poured into camp, took graciously what food was offered them, went to them for a few hours and found convenient quarters when the hard pressed regular army officers could get them under cover. Sanitary, second in command to Brigadier General Lazzell, estimated that more than 20,000 were in camp and that he intended to hold 40,000. No officer cared to estimate the number of southerners here. There are more than 2,000 from Virginia and it is probable that one-quarter of the total number is represented by the men from Dixie.

Pickett's Men Hold Reunion.

Before the morning exercises began and after the veterans scattered in the big tent made their slim toilets; the remnants of regiments and companies and squadrons began their Confederates who were in Pickett's charge took delight in marching with the old drum to bungler's woods, where the column of Pickett formed on July 3, 1863, to begin the charge that marked the high tide of the lost cause. They did not charge again like they once did, but they remembered, or thought they remembered, the exact spot the stone in that wide stretch where death kept step with them before.

Missouri Has Two-Cent Rate.

Kansas City, Mo., July 3.—The two-cent passenger rate became effective in Missouri on the Chicago & Alton, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy and the Rock Island railroads at one minute past midnight Tuesday night. The Missouri Pacific and the Rock Island also made a two-cent rate between Kansas City and St. Louis at the same time to meet the competition. At 12:01 o'clock in the morning of July 4 several cars will become effective on all other lines in the state of Missouri.

LOBBY INVESTIGATION WIDENS

CHARGES OF MULHALL CAUSES SENATE TO HASTEN PROBE.

Expected That House Will Appoint Special Committee to Investigate Alleged Crookedness.

Washington, July 2.—Investigation of lobbyists and lobbies by the senate will begin with a number of prominent Wall street men as witnesses.

Chairman Overman of the special committee decided, after a talk with President Wilson and informal conferences with his committee associates, to renew activity at once, instead of waiting until July 8, as had been planned.

The claims of Martin L. Mulhall of Washington, that as lobbyist for the National Association of Manufacturers he had for years maintained close relations with certain members of congress and financed their campaigns for re-election, have so intensified the feeling in congressional circles that the lobby committee has determined to interrogate all persons connected with any of the recent lobby disclosures as rapidly as they can be found.

The witnesses include Paul Cravath and Lewis Cass Ledyard, prominent New York attorneys, and David Lamar, a Wall street financial man. This investigation will center about $11,000 charges made recently by Robert S. Lovett of the Union Pacific railroad that many New York financiers and lawyers had been approached over the telephone by lobbyists and persons representing themselves to be members of congress.

Until this branch of the inquiry is exhausted, the committee probably will not take up the more recent disclosures of Mr. Mulhall, which have thus far appeared only in newspaper reproduction of his personal statements and facsimiles of letters he claims to have received, containing references to the efforts to control and influence members of congress.

Mulhall is under subpoena to appear Friday.

Steps have also been taken by the senate committee to get possession of the letters and papers Mr. Mulhall presented Chairman Overman at a conference.

Responding to this latest fashion, femininity will no longer wear stiff, waists and torturing corsets. Instead there will be a combination of embroidered silk trunks, monogramed envelope chemise and garters and flimsy draped robes—so draped as to expose the view from front and corner of the figure and much of the limbs.

INSTRUCTS MINISTERS TO COMMUNICATE ULTIMATUM TO BALKANS.

GREEKS HAVE DECLARED WAR

Bulgarians Accused of Breach of Treaty of Crossing Provisional Boundary—Fighting From Intip to Eleuthers.

Vienna, July 2.—The Austrian newspapers declare that the Russian minister at Sofia, Belgrade and Athens have been instructed to summon for the last time the Balkan government to keep its pledges or to send their premiers to St. Petersburg to confer on the situation.

No Formal Declaration.

Berlin.—The Greek foreign minister informed the correspondent at Athens of the Frankfurt Gazette that Greece will begin war against Bulgaria without any formal declaration.

The foreign minister made the following statement:

"After Bulgaria has answered all the conciliatory steps of Greece by repeated breaches of treaty and by crossing the provisional boundary fixed a short time ago, the Greek government feels forced to give the Macedonian divisions of its army the order to assume the offensive."

Fighting Still Continues.

London. — Fighting between the Greeks and Bulgarians on the one side and the Bulgarians on the other is still proceeding along the line from Intip to Eleuthers, according to a dispatch from Sofia.

Fits More Closely Than Ever, Exposing Lines and Curves of Limbs.

New York, June 30.—The very latest gown coming from Paris is the "Expose Toilet" has reached New York. The first shipment of the daring new fashion was placed on sale in a leading department store and created a veritable sensation among the throngs of shoppers.

According to this latest fashion, femininity will no longer wear stiff, waists and torturing corsets. Instead there will be a combination of embroidered silk trunks, monogramed envelope chemise and garters and flimsy draped robes—so draped as to expose the view from front and corner of the figure and much of the limbs.

Canal Creates a Deficit.

Washington, July 3.—Uncle Sam closed the fiscal year 1913 with a surplus of $40,032,229, representing the excess of receipts over expenditures, exclusive of Panama canal and public debt transactions made. This exceeds last year's surprise by $3,750,000. The Panama canal closed Wednesday with the debit transaction, however, wiped out the surplus of ordinary receipts and left the government with the canal's deficit for the year of $2,149,000.

Sioux Falls Gets Plant.

Sioux Falls, S. D., July 2.—While no official announcement has yet been made, it is learned on good authority that Schlueter and Sons, big packers, have determined to erect a $1,000,000 packing plant here.

Wilson Takes Sea Trip.

Washington, July 2.—President Wilson has gone on a three days' trip down the Potomac. Therefore, the president had intended to take a rest by going to Cornish, N. H., to spend his family at the mountain home that he has been using during the summer, but his decision to go to Gettysburg on July 4 upset all plans. A trip on the Mayflower was suggested by his physician and the president agreed to go on the condition that he would have complete rest. Mr. Wilson's only companion is Dr. Cary T. Grayson.

Large Scotch Castle Burned.

Glasgow, Scotland, July 1. — Ballikinrain castle, at Killearn, Stirlingshire, one of the largest in Scotland, was burned Monday and only the bare walls remain. The fire appeared to have been an incendiary one, as the private fire apparatus had been cut and rendered useless. The usual rumors laying the blame for the outrage on the militant suffragettes spread rapidly, but no evidence was found to connect them with it. The castle cost $500,000 and contained 100 rooms.

WOULD IMPRISON CABINET

MISS PANKHURST LEADS "ARMY" THAT FIGHTS POLICE.

Dockworkers Join Women in Exploit, but All Come to Grief and Are Clubbed.

London, July 1.—Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, daughter of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the suffragette leader, has just led on attacking party to Downing street for the purpose of imprisoning the cabinet ministers. The expedition was unsuccessful.

The attempt to capture Downing street failed, but the victory of the police was not won without a series of fierce scrimmages, in which both policemen and women were injured. Miss Pankhurst appeared at the demonstration in Trafalgar square in fancy dress. She had been organizer of a "procession to the Houses of Parliament" to "end the present reign of terror."

The police had been apprised of the intentions of the demonstrators and had thrown a strong cordon around Downing street. The dockers tried to break through and some of the women went to their aid, but were severely handled. In the fighting women were thrown to the ground and the dockers were clubbed. Many were arrested. Mounted police finally dispersed the crowd.

AUTO UPSET; SIX ARE HURT

Three in Party are Seriously injured in Accident Near Fisher, Minnesota.

Fisher.—Three were injured, two seriously, as a result of an automobile accident two miles east of Fisher. The injured are Miss Nettie Berg of Nebeka, Minn., Miss Mattie Leon of Thief River Falls, and Emma Wilhelm of Crookston. All are in a hospital at Crookston.

The accident happened when a party of six were returning from Fisher in an automobile belonging to C. E. Gildersleeve, a Crookston banker. The car was driven by Harry Hitchcock, son of C. A. Hitchcock, of Crookston and besides those injured the party consisted of a sister of Miss Berg and Arthur Bonnier. The auto was being driven at high speed when a wheel came off.

According to those in the party who are able to describe the accident the car turned over three times before it came to a stop in a pile of wreckage. The car was found nearly 200 feet from where it had first turned turtle.

Miss Leon is a teacher at the Northwestern Agricultural school at Crookston. She is severely hurt; being unconscious for hours.

Highway to be Improved.

Thief River Falls—Arrangements have been made whereby the contractor who is graveling the Elwell highway has at east of the city with all once gravel about five miles running west of town. The commissioners purpose to extend the Elwell highway, which runs from the city east about thirty miles, to the extreme western end of Pennington county. This road will later be carried on to the Red river through Mershell county.

New Garage at Park Rapids.

Park Rapids.—W. M. Taber, president of the First National bank, has let a contract for a fireproof garage 50x72 feet, to be built on door west of the bank. It will be constructed of cement blocks and equipped with every modern device for the care of the automobile traffic.

Mincapolis.—The agitation to put an end to unbecoming conduct in the parks may result in a request by the park board for a squad of city patrolmen to do duty at Harriet Perrillon Sundays and holiday evenings to allow the park policemen to give attention to crowds on the grounds, according to Sergeant C. B. Barnard of the park police in the event complaints continue to be made of misconduct at the park grounds. Sunday night a ball dance canceles who disregarded the park board warning were arrested.

Big Family Holds Reunion.

Cannon Falls.—The Brunstorp family held its annual reunion in Clay bank. There are 123 members in Goodhue county. This fine old Swedish family can be traced back to A. D. 1718.

Sunday School Association Elects.

Cannon Falls.—The Goodhue County Sunday School association held its sessions at Goodhoo. Rev. C. E. Meade, Pine Island was elected president for the ensuing year.

DAIRY PRODUCTS INCREASING

$35,000,000 Butter Produced in Year, Minnesota Record—State Report for 1912 Shows 116,000,000 Pounds.

St. Paul. — Minnesota creameries, 383, produced 116,600,000 pounds of butter in 1912, adding $35,000,000 to the state's wealth. This is an increase of about $6,000,000 over 1911. The report for 1912 is not completed but the figures given are amazingly accurate to round numbers.

What Report Will Show.

"Our forthcoming report will show an increase in dairy products for every one of the eighty-six counties of Minnesota," said Ole A. Stavrum, secretary of the dairy and food commission in commenting on what he regards as a highly creditable showing for the state. "Some counties, within for instance, have almost doubled their output. The success of dairying in northern Minnesota has been fully demonstrated. We look for even a greater increase this year for we believe that the farmers realize that there is not a branch of farming industry that gives better and safer returns than dairying.

"In 1908 Minnesota creameries produced 86,000,000 pounds of butter and last year 116,500,000. These figures tell how rapidly dairying is advancing."

HEAT CRAZED; SHOOTS WIFE

William Metcalf of Lake City Commits Tragedy Then Takes His Own Life.

Lake City.—Over worrying all day in a crazed condition, after suffering sunstroke of the sun, William Metcalf, a farmer living three miles north of Lake City, returned to his home loaded his shotgun, blew his wife's head from her shoulders and then placed the weapon's barrel into his own head. He shot himself a portion of a lower jaw. He was taken to a hospital in Red Wing, where it is said that he had a good chance to recover. He is believed to have committed the deed after having been mentally deranged for days.

After his day's work, Metcalf drove into Lake City, made several purchases and started for home. Persons who passed him on the road said later that he appeared to be failed to see them.

When he arrived at his farm, according to his son, he left the horse and buggy standing in the yard and went directly to the house. A moment later Mrs. Metcalf saw her husband walk out of his bedroom with his shotgun in his hands.

Wife Sees Preparations.

She saw him shift the two shells into the gun.

"What are you going to do?" she cried.

"I guess I'll shoot myself," was the answer.

Mrs. Metcalf sprang to her husband's side, grappled with him, and called to the grown son and daughter. As they ran into the room, the gun was discharged. The wife's head was practically shot off. Before either son or daughter could reach their father he placed the muzzle of the gun in front of his face and fired. He fell across the body of his wife. Neighbors were summoned and the wounded man was taken from his home.

Norwegians Hold Big Festival.

Hanska.—Fully 600 persons attended the annual Norwegian festival of the Norwegian Unitarian church here. A program was held with addresses from 11 a. m. to 10 p. m. Addresses were delivered by Professor O. E. Rolvaag, Northfield; Professor Joseph L. Labben of St. James, and Rev. Lauritz Nelsen Norman. Miss Gertrude E. de Rochemont, late of Berlin, Germany, sang several Norwegian folk songs. In the afternoon there was a band concert and picnic dinner in the church park. Visitors were present from Mankota, Lake Crystal, Madelia, St. James, New Ulm and other cities.

Plaintiff Wins Injury Suit.

Brainerd.—In a suit brought by George Kuchmiskel against the Western Union Telegraph company he was awarded $15,000. Kuchmiskel was a butcher and it was alleged that he was going to work one night when a mounted messenger boy collided with him. He was thrown to the ground and his skull injured. Formerly a strong and rugged man he has been reduced to invalidism as a result of the injuries sustained.

New Bank Organized at Randolph.

Randolph.—The Randolph State Bank has been organized with capital stock of $10,000. Following are the officers. President, T. J. Bitseker; cashier, H. P. Hansen; assistant, H. J. Schwoeffermann. The directors are T. L. Bensker, H. P. Hanson and Charles F. Dickman.

Rochester.—Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Maass of this city celebrated their silver wedding anniversary in the home in which they were married twenty-five years ago, over one hundred relatives and friends attending the celebration. In the afternoon services were held at Trinity Lutheran church, Rev. Martin Weinhold speaking in German and Rev. E. J. Herrlich of Chicago preaching in English. Mr. and Mrs. Maass were presented with a costly silver gifts by their relatives, one being a handsome silver tray from their children.

Wind Does Much Damage.

Herdwick.—The wind demolished the brick and frame store house here, store down a new cement block building and damaged the German church, Bank, windmills and outbuildings were razed.

France Honors Dr. W. J. Mayo.

Paris, June 27.—Dr. William J. Mayo of Rochestar, Minn., who announced recently that cancer of the stomach is curable, has been elected foreign correspondent of the Academy of Medicine.

CLAIMS BOYS ARE FLOGGED

Training School Boy Accuses New Superintendent in a Red Wing Court.

Red Wing.—Henry Diedlach, a state training school boy who escaped recently and was caught in the act of trying to rob a local place of business, told the court here that whipping with a heavy strap is again in vogue at the state institution in this city, it was said.

The Lad's Story.

"Dr. Merlen tries to keep track of the boys, but it is hard work. He whips them when they do anything wrong. He uses a leather strap two or three feet in length. He removes their trousers and lays them on a bench. Sometimes he whips them until they are black and blue. If he doesn't do it one of the officers does. Dr. Merlen is always present. I know he whips them hard because my back was black and blue after I got mine. I don't know whether Mr. Fulton, the assistant superintendent, whips the boys or not. Sometimes they call in an officer to help hold the boys. An officer strapped me, but Dr. Merlen was present.

"The boys are continually planning to escape and to rob the offices and stores. I expect to be beaten when I return to the school, but I hope to go back. Dr. Merlen is better than the old officers."

When asked for a statement regarding the boy's charges, Dr. Merlen refused to talk "if boys anything to say," he said over the phone, Wednesday.

Young Diedlach was in court to answer to the charge of burglary. He pleaded guilty, but sentencing was deferred until the matter of his age and some other particulars can be inquired into. He told the court he is 17 years of age, but he appears to be much younger. He was brought to the school from Pecham where he broke into a store. The officials also have information that he was arrested in Chicago and also in Rochos.

Sheriffs Enjoy An Outing.

Walker.—The annual summer outing of the Minnesota Sheriff's association was held in Walker for a three-days' session. The fishing was the sport in a sightseeing and fishing trip on Leech lake. Lake cousins, and scaling of straw hats, gaily decorated, and behalf trousers were supplied by Mayor Kinkele and the day was spent in the pine beds of Leech lake. Every sheriff who failed to catch the limit prescribed by law, was bendoodled and had to buy a drink for Sheriff Kennedy. In the evening a fish bake and story telling bee finished the first day's program. A social smoker was given Saturday night by the Commercial club at the Gungary club house. The Leech lake band which is to play at the Minnesota state fair this fall, supplied the music for the visitors during their stay here.

To Teach Respect for Flag.

Minneapolis.—It is proposed that Independence day celebration, July 4, shall have an educational effect if teachlor respect for the stars and stripes. The raising of flags in 26 parks is to occur simultaneously at 9 o'clock in the morning, and it is suggested that the crowds in attendance will be expected to remove their hats and the concert will be suspended, also, that the city hall chimes shall play "America" at that hour and that cars shall be stopped for about two minutes to impress all the people.

Co-Operative Delivery Service.

Pipestone.—All the grocery stores and meat markets of Pipestone have organized for a co-operative delivery service. Harvey W. Wakefield will manage the business. Four times a day all of the articles for delivery about the city will be taken to a central headquarters, where the delivery wagons will be started out. The new system will be placed in operation at once.

Rev. Mr. Frye Settles Insurance.

Windom.—Rev. M. H. Frye has effected a settlement with the insurance companies for the loss which the sustained in a fire at Mountain Lake last fall, which destroyed his stock of furniture. He carried $2,000 of insurance on the stock, but compromised with the companies for $1,500 rather than take the matter into the courts.

Freight Wrecked; 15 Cars Burn.

Shakopee, Minn., July 1.—Number 263, Chicago to Pacific coast freight, jumped the track two miles east of Prior Lake, derailing the engine and 15 cars. One car contained gasoline and the oil took fire and 15 cars were burned, a brakeman on top of which was thrown over soma telegraph wires, but was only slightly hurt. The engine was demolished.

High Wind Razes Buildings.

Pipestone.—Local insurance adjusters have received numerous reports of damage by wind and lightning. On the farm of Albert Gamber the barns and all their contents were destroyed by lightning fire. Buildings on the farm of J. C. Fay were demolished by the wind as were also the buildings on the William Mitchell farm. Peter Larsen and P. Van Lantchinbuen lost their large barns by the wind. Lightning caused loss on a church at Hatfield.

Farmer's Company Prosperous.

St. James.—The St. James Farmers' Grain company held its annual meeting Friday and elected the following officers: P. H. Origana, president; Mark Moritz, vice president; J. W. Meier, secretary.

LOSS BOTHER ROWING SAILOR.

VOGUE FOR FIGURED VOILE

Revival of Old Fabric Has Been Received Most Kindly by the Public.

The public has taken most kindly to this revival of a very old fabric which is now called voile and which is dur able in the highest degree and although there have been a large number of picturesque frocks made of it the newest adaptation of it as a top to a slim white skirt is interesting.

There are some women who prefer the gown made of figured taffeta, which in its new weave is soft and supple, but it does not really give the effect that the voile gives, and does not present at such novelty.

Any girl who is to be married this summer should have one of these gowns in her outfit. If she does not care to wear it as a dancing gown she will find it admirable for informal dinners in her own home, and especially attractive as a tea gown for the 5 o'clock hour. She can add to it a cap of embroidered muslin or clony lace, which has a round crown to fit the head, a tiny ruffle to hang over the back and back, a corset piece in front and wired flaps over the ears.

This is the kind of cap Mrs. Cosby wears, minus the corset. When such a cap is trimmed with little bunches of light rosebuds over each ear the picturesqueness of such a costume is undeniable.

In these days of fanciful footwear one can always add to the color scheme by silk stockings and high-heeled slippers. There is no longer any attempt to match one's shoes to one's gown; on the contrary, one tries to make a harmonious contrast, such as wearing pale blue satin slippers and stockings with a shell pink tea gown and the other way around.

WAISTS AND NEW FIGURES

Swirling Draperies From Shoulder to Heels Are Becoming to Fat and Lean.

As long as we bow down to orientalism we are very sure to be grateful in clothes, because swirling draperies from shoulder to heel are usually becoming to the lean and the fat, to the tall and the short. But the orient recks not with white starch shirt, sweats and mannish coat suits. As long as the coat is the only thing to be considered one can here as large a waist as one wishes, but when the coat is lifted and the new oriental skirt is attached to an American shirt waist the combination is not pleasing, and no one knows that better than the women who are trying to make it.

Of course, we have long since learned the art of wearing one color from shoulder to heel, but it is not convenient or agreeable to wear colored shirt waists in summer, as our centres and our climate call for thin wash fabrics. Therefore if one would look well and be fashionable the coat must be relaxed, or one must have a figure cut off in a square way that may be fashionable but is not graceful.

After all, it might be better for women to work themselves out of this problem and lend variety to their one gown, as seems time by modifying the waist line of those skirts which are worn with coats and white shirt waists. There are many ways to do this.

Powder Scented With Rose.

Did you ever scent your rose powder with fresh roses? If you have done it once you will want to do it again. Many pale blue satin slippers and stockings with a shell pink tea gown and the other way around.

Powder is made from three parts of fine vice starch and one part of orris root. Put it in a tin box which has a tight cover and bury fresh, strongly scented roses leaven in it. Leave them there for a day and then take them out and put in fresh ones. Keep this up for a week and at the end of that time the powder will be deliciously scented.

Other highly scented flowers can be used in the same way, but perhaps not so many, as violets, are quite so sure to give satisfactory results.

Larger Hats for Summer.

As summer weddings and garden parties becomes imminent, the millinery stores begin to display large hats. One attractive lingerie hat was of white Neapolitan straw covered with a piece of lace which was tied in at the bottom of the crown by dark-toned, brocaded taffeta ribbon. The ends of the ribbon crossed in the front and were laid flat upon the brim without ornament. Many of the hats were large crowned and have drooping brims. Wreaths of tiny flowers encircle the crown and tie in flat loops upon the brim in front.

Ornaments for the Hair.

The straight dicted so much seen with evening dress last year are now partially superseded by those arranged in curves which form a wave line upon the coiffure. They end in few, sized circles with short fringe to match, and can be adjusted in a moment. One of the prettiest of these sided bands for the hair is in a design of wheels between two bands of jewelling. The wheels are connected by a point at either side. It is rather high in front, a fashion which suits the round faced.

To Bleach Feathers.

Immerse the feathers in naphtha, rinse in a second dish of naphtha, and dry in the open air. Place in a closed box and expose to the strong fumes of sulphur. The box must be airtight, or the bleaching process will not be successful.

NOT DIFFICULT TO HANDLE HONEY BEE

Hiving a Swarm.

By T. G. Pettigrew.

The extension of bee culture as a means of adding to the income has been rapidly going on since it has demonstrated that bees could be managed without discomfort to the operator, and that a profit of 50 per cent and even more was easily procurable.

Bee culture requires no outlay for land upon which to raise crops, for as bees have been in place since directed that payce to plant for honey plants.

She takest nothing from the fertility of the soil, but gives to it one of the greatest fertilizers known, the clovers, which would become extinct if it were not for her agency in fertilizing the bloom. No land is required except a spot on which to place the hives.

It is easy to handle bees when you know how. Undoubtedly a beekeeper often gets stung; it would be useless to deny it and it is scarcely consoling to a novice to tell him to be glad to be being stung; but after a time a beekeeper really does become inoculated, after which, although the momentary pain may be sharp, there are no disagreeable after effects, such as swelling, etc.

The fear of stings I think prevents many from liking the work and yet, when properly protected with a bee veil and working only in the warm part of the day and never when cloudy, rainy or cold, and with the aid of a good smoker, one need rarely be stung.

Avoid quick motions, do not breathe upon them and if there are other bees flying about in search of plunder do not leave the hive open too long.

In case of accidents the smoker should be used freely and it ought to be at hand for any manipulation in the apiary. It is much easier to prevent the anger of bees than to stop it after it has begun. If you mismanage a colony of bees and cause their anger it is quite likely that this disposition will remain with them for a few days.

A few very bees at home, or lodge with honey, never volunteers an attack. This is so well known and so established by apiarists that if I were not writing mainly for beginners I would not think of mentioning it.

Thus, in order to render bees harmless it is only necessary to know how to fill themselves with honey, and this is done by frightening them with smoke. When smoke is driven into a hive through the entrance the bees at once begin filling themselves with honey.

But with them, as with human beings, it is the most experienced which are slowest to take fright, so when the old bees are all at home it is more difficult and takes more time to compel them all to fill themselves.

For this reason it is much safer to handle bees during the warmest part of the day, at which time the greater part of the old bees are in the field.

The bees which compose a swarm are usually filled with honey for the journey which they expect to take and they are harmless unless crushed or very much irritated by the anger of others and the smell of the poison.

It is not absolutely necessary to smoke the colony of bees, till all the bees fill themselves, with honey in order to handle them safely, but it is certainly the safest method.

An expert may open a hive without smoke and without danger and may handle the combs and return them to the hive without getting a single sting by being quiet, steady and fearless.

It is a fact that the fearless apiarist may often be entirely unharmed while others a red every may be stung by the very bees which his manipulations anger

His quiet, determined demeanor is his safeguard, while the unintitated think it is the angry bees until they are stung.

When you wish to open a hive of bees if you wish to be perfectly safe, arm yourself with a smoker, cover your head with a veil and step boldly to the front of the hive; send the smoke through the opening for half a minute, then stop and repeat the operation after another half minute, and until they make a steady hum, which will show that they have given up the desire to sting.

Then open the hive, smoke gently and you may lift the combs one after another.

Many people have kept bees but did not succeed on account of the worn moth, but worms very rarely, if ever, destroy a colony of bees in normal condition.

WHITE WYANDOTTES OCCUPY FIRST PLACE

In the eastern part of the United States there are 1,000 poultry farms to one several thousand bees and devoted exclusively to the production of poultry and eggs for the markets.

The ran of any breed on such farms partially supersedes by those arranged in curves which form a wave line upon the coiffure. They end in few, sized circles with short fringe to match, and can be adjusted in a moment. One of the prettiest of these sided bands for the hair is in a design of wheels between two bands of jewelling. The wheels are connected by a point at either side. It is rather high in front, a fashion which suits the round faced.

Busy Cabbage Louse.

Lice on the cabbage make, appearance in the early summer and remain on the plant until late in the fall. Clean culture in the garden and along the fences is necessary. See that there be no stumps or other refuse from last year's crop, before planting the new. Kerosene emulsion is the most effective spray, but cannot be used on cabbage as the taste of the oil would be noticed. Whale oil soap solution as well as pyrethrum may be applied place, being used on about twice a many plants as any other one breed. Single-comb White Leghorns, Barred Plymouth Rocks and White Plymouth Rocks follow next in order. Rhode Island Reds, Light Brahmas, Buff Wyandottes, Buff Plymouth Rocks, Brown Leghorns and Black Minorcas are the other breeds in use. Leghorns, Minorcas and Rhode Island Reds are used on the egg farms.

The destructive work of these insects may be checked by the use of water sprayed upon through a spray pump. In order for the above recipes to be effective, prompt and effective repeated action is important.

CO ADJUTORS' REMARKS.

The automobile makers of, Detroit complain that the ways and means committee permitted a representative of the New York importers to fix the tariff schedules on automobiles. Of course, that is equivalent to having the schedules written by the foreign manufacturers. Wilson and Underwood condemned the alleged writing of the Payne tariff schedules by the American manufacturers. How give we believe Americans generally would rather have a tariff made by American manufacturers than one made by European manufacturers—we believe that there is at least that much patriotism in the country. If we are to have a tariff law framed by and in the interest of foreigners, why not let foreigners write all our other laws?—Warren Register.

Norman county people always favor a good thing and we would like to see them follow, on a small scale, the example of the 2000 Michigan men, who built 200 miles of excellent roads in one day recently. Contended of it was through swamps. Millionaires turned out and shovelled sand and rock all day. The women turned out and cooked the noonday dinner and were on duty from 6 a. m. till dark, and they made the road. The spirit in this way would build a good road from one end of Norman county to the other in several areas in the county. This is the quickest way to solve the good road problem we know of.—Norman County Index.

The two million women of Illinois are enfranchised by act of legislature, so far as voting for statutory officers is concerned. This means that the women can vote for president and vice president, for all municipal officers and most county officers, and on all propositions, such as voting of bonds, change of boundaries, etc. Are not the women of Minnesota as intelligent as those of Illinois?—Wheelock's Weekly.

Harvey Grimmer is slated to succeed W. H. Grimshaw, U. S. Marshal. Mr. Grimmer is favorably known to about every newspaper man in the state and is perhaps the best known politician in the state. He is an old newspaper boy, having been connected for years with the St. Cloud Journal Press and later was the political reporter for the St. Paul Globe. He was executive clerk to the late Gov. Johnson. The appointment of Harvey to the position of U. S. Marshall will be gratifying to his friends, who are to be found in the ranks of all political parties.—Roseau County Times.

The governor still thinks there is sufficient demand for a state publicities bill to justify him in calling an extra session at an expense estimated at $25,000. We must confess that we are unable to locate this demand. Would it not be better if the governor abandoned his plan of an extra session and made the question of the public utilities bill an issue in the primaries next year? The question has never been made an issue in this state and it seems only fair to the voters that they be given an opportunity to express themselves upon the question before the legislature acts.—Spooker Rinos in Kandiyohi County Times.

AFTER REBATE RECEIPTS.

Do Not Send Your Receipts to Some Agency for Collection.

Beware of speculators. Hold on to your railroad rate receipts. Do not turn them over to an agency for collection. There is no occasion for shippers or passengers being afraid to present their claims for rebates in person.

The railroad and warehouse commission has received information that speculators are getting ready to take advantage of the rebate which will be paid by the railroads following the restoration of lower rates ordered by the supreme court.

Chairman Mills gave the following notice for the benefit of shippers and passengers.

The Minneapolis and St. Louis will not have to pay back anything according to Chirman Mills, because the decision of the supreme court does not affect the M. & St. L.

The commission does not anticipate difficulty from the roads not included in this litigation.

May Making.

There are two chief factors in the making of good hay, second crop aftermath first. First, it should be cut in proper season, and second, it should be gotten in the mow or stack with its natural color but little removed. Hay that is allowed to stand until the seed is formed, becomes woody and less digestable, and this also takes place when it is dried too much in the swath and raked upon. Hay that is rained upon after it is partially or wholly cured looses much of its food substances. It is wasted out. Medium red clover should be cut when in full bloom. It makes the best hay at that stage and produces a larger crop. Alsike clover may be allowed to stand till the heads are half brown—as it does not produce two crops in the same season. Timothy should be cut for dairy cows after the first bloom. For horses it may be allowed to stand some later.

On the Experiment Farm we practice cutting hay in the left the day after it is cut, unless prevented by rain. We start the mower in the morning and cut only what can be honied in the next afternoon. After the dew is off the next morning the hay is raked into windrows. Very heavy clover is tedded or worked over with the fork before raking up. This is done the afternoon the day it is cut if the weather is favorable. When raked it is left in the windrow and bunched with a fork into small piles—just such as can be lifted on the tines in one forkful. Large piles of heavy clover hay are hard to handle. In small piles it not only handles more easily, but it cures faster.

When in danger of rain the hay may be handled with the rake and cocked up. If clover hay is put in the cock when quite green it will heat some. If left in the swath till dry it will not shed water in the cock. Get the hay up on the green side. Hay is leavened in value far more by over-curing than by putting to too green.

The natural moisture in hay after it is partly cured causes but little trouble but rain or dew should be avoided on the day when it is put in. There is a possible danger of spontaneous combustion when green hay is put up that is wet with rain or dew.

In putting in hay that is on the green side it should be mowed loosely, not packed down more than is possible, and it should never be allowed to lie or dropped by the hayfork, but distributed evenly.

Clover hulling should be under way this season July 10th. Some fields of clover are ready for the mower today, June 30.

Try haying earlier this season and putting the hay up greener. Most hay is put up over cured. Not over cured.

HANGS HIMSELF IN OLD BARN NO APPARENT CAUSE KNOWN.

The people of this city were greatly shocked last Friday when they learned that Albert Thompson of this city had committed suicide by hanging. Thompson and one of his brothers had been making hay about three miles east of town. Albert was driving the mower and the younger brother was hauling the hay to the city. Beanie, the younger brother, was making his last trip, and upon arriving at the hay-field he found Albert's team running around the hay, having been unhitched from the mower. Beanie thought his brother had probably laid down in the shade of some trees as the day had been extremely warm, and falling after a diligent search to find him, he returned to the hay and got several others to return with him and continues the search. The lifeless body of Albert was located in an old barn close to the hayfield. Albert had climbed up on the rafters and taking a rope, which he had secured from one of the horse hamters, he had fastened one end around the rafter in the upper end around his neck, after which he jumped toward the ground, breaking his neck. The deceased was 22 years old and a son of Mr. and Mrs. Olof O. Thompson of 322 Kendall Ave., North. The remains were taken to the undertaking parlors where the body was embalmed ready for burial. The funeral was held on Monday at Black a. m., from the residence. Mr. Lassesson having charge. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereaved family in the sudden death of one of the members.—Thief River Falls Times.

Rotation vs. Diseases.

By A. F. WOODS, Dean, Department of Agriculture, University Farm, St. Paul.

The accumulation of various weed diseases, and insects on the farm is one of the most serious sources of trouble. This results in the need for constant growth or too long continued culture of the same crop or class of crops on the same land. Where various crops, bacterial diseases, grain rusts, and weeds and insects too numerous to mention all accumulate in the soil under the one-crop system.

These pests often multiply to such an extent that although it becomes impossible to secure profitable returns from land this infested. Resistant varieties must be secured or some cultivated on land not subjected to these pests. All these troubles can be avoided and the fertility of the soil greatly improved by intelligent systems of rotation. The most profitable systems for any locality or type of farming, so far as they have been developed, can usually be obtained from the State Experiment Station or from the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Teachers to Study Agriculture.

College of Agriculture Thrown Open to Minnesotans During Summer Months.

For six weeks, beginning June 16, two great educational gatherings will be in session at the Department of Agriculture, University Farm, St. Paul. One is the Summer Training School for Teachers, conducted jointly with the State Department of Education and the Department of Agriculture; the other is the Summer Session of the College of Agriculture proper.

The work of the Teachers' Training School is open to teachers of the rural schools and elementary schools of Minnesota free of charge. Instruction is offered to methods of teaching and school organization and management; also review work and credit courses in the subjects required for the common school certificates, and to give special instruction in agriculture, manual training, home economics, drawing and music. Credit work will be given in arithmetic, grammar, United States history, geography, physical geography, reading, physiology, civics, physics, algebra, plane geometry and composition. At the close of the session, on July 31 and Aug. 1 and 2, no examination for certificates will be held by the state superintendent, Hon. C. G. Schulz.

The high school superintendents of the state have been engaged to teach the classes in the certificate subjects. While the classes in agriculture and home economics will be taught by members of the regular faculty of the College of Agriculture.

The Summer Session of the College of Agriculture furnishes an opportunity to teachers, students and others to obtain college work during the summer vacation. The courses offered are regular college courses and are taught by the regular college faculty, using the same classrooms, laboratories, fields, herds and other equipment used during the college year. Courses are offered in farm crops, farm management, soils, chemistry, agricultural teaching, horticulture, animal husbandry, dairy, vegetable pathology, agricultural botany, entomology, domestic science and domestic art. Students of college grade will be given regular college credit for courses finished.

There will also be special arrangements made whereby principals of consolidated schools will be given a course in agriculture, manual training and manual training and also be given one regular college course.

The work should make a great appeal to young men who wish to improve their status in teaching, and especially to those who are ultimately able to finish the college course in agriculture and thus be prepared for the many positions now open to such men at salaries ranging from $1,200 to $2,500 per year.

Credit towards the completion of the college course will be given for equivalent work done in other standard colleges.

The college fees are from $10 to $15 for the entire session, according to the amount of work taken. Board and room may be obtained at the college or application to the Registrar, University Farm, St. Paul.

The Training School for Teachers and the Summer Session of the College of Agriculture are under the direction of the same person, so their work will be made to coordinate and to supplement each other.

Water for Calves.

Calves two or three months of age should have large pails of water a day. That was the result of a trial with thirteen calves the Kansas station. In many instances in those calves got so no drink except what they receive in their skim milk. Evidently this is not good care.

THINNING VEGETABLES.

Plants in Home Garden Often Too Close Together.

Because of limited space the rows of vegetables in a home garden are usually close together, and often the seed is planted thickly in order to have a large yield. This is a mistake that, as the plants cannot develop to their full size if crowded. Vegetables grown for their roots should be given as much room as a mature plant needs. The very early radishes which are ready for the table in three or four weeks can be thinned out as used, but the larger varieties should be allowed two or more inches space. Beets can be thinned out and used for greens, giving those left to mature, about three inches of space.

Plants grown for their foliage, as lettuce, parsley and spinach need more room than those whose roots are valuable, and those which bear fruit, need plenty of room to which to develop the fruit bearing branches.

Seeds of vining plants, such as beans, melons, squash and pumpkin are usually planted thickly, as the early bugs and cut worms take some of the plants. Later, three or four should be allowed to grow in each hill.

Nearly all plants can be transplanted, and most of them, as to size and parsley, seeming to grow faster after they reset their roots. The best guide as to the room needed is a good reliable seed catalog or garden text book, which usually gives the size of a fully developed plant.

Transplanting is most easily done in May and June—as soon as the seedlings can be handled with the thumb and finger. A good tool to use is a sharp pointed stick about the size of a lead pencil. The plant can be loosened with this without disturbing those that are to be left in the row. It is also a good tool for making the hole for the plant. For larger plants a large dibber or trowel will be found useful. Keep all the soil possible about the roots, and firm the soil around the ones left in the row as well as those reset.

Do not let the roots dry out, and shade the reset plants for three or four days. If the sun is bright.—Alice McFeely, University Farm, St. Paul.

Sour Milk Saves Chicks.

By N. E. CHAPMAN, Poultry Specialist, University Farm, St. Paul.

One of the main causes of death among chicks is white diarrhea. This is very prevalent and investigations have shown conclusively that the original source is often from parent stock. Many chicks die in the shell when hatched, and others contract it from them, through feed and forage in infected ground. The symptoms of the transmission from chick to chick is common during the first three or four days, and this is the period of great danger, especially among chicks of low vitality.

The symptoms are a whitish discharge from the vent, which results in "pasting up behind." The chicks become listless and sleepy, lose appetite, the feathers become ruffled, breathing labored, and they constantly peep as they die. The mortality is gradually waste away.

This disease has been most carefully investigated by the Agricultural Experiment Station at Storrs, Connecticut, and the first report of their investigations has been published. The report recommends the feeding of sour milk as the best thing to use for a preventive of this trouble. The report advocates feeding sour milk from the very first and keeping it before the chicks constantly. The acidity of sour milk acts as a germicide. Moreover the milk is a valuable food for chicks chicks require in some form, and it is a great factor in the growth and vigor of the young. For the small flock of commercial chick feeds now so common are very good, and are quite safe but in addition sour milk is kept before the chicks constantly the vessel holding cleaned and refilled daily during the first few weeks.

Farmers and poultry raisers should feed sour skim milk constantly, at least during the first few weeks of life as a preventive of this disease, and to stimulate their growth. It also increases the vigor and health of their flock. Numerous experiments have demonstrated the fact that when a corda, or cottage cheese, are among the most stimulating foods for poultry of all kinds, and they are very fond of it. Cottage cheese pleases chicks. Many claim that sweet milk is more nutritious, but it will not prevent a week or ten days old. Even if a constant supply on scanty every day is not possible it is universally used for the farm flock.

John Pohn, assistant cashier of the First State Bank of Plummer, was over at Red Lake Falls Tuesday on a short business trip. On his return he was accompanied by his father, who will visit here for several days.

A petition containing seventy-five signers and asking for the establishment of another rural route from Plummer, this week was sent to the postoffice department at Washington. The new route if ordered established, will supply mail to residents northeast of here in the towns of Emardville,Carmen, Mayfield and Wypandotte, covering for the round trip a distance of about thirty-five miles. The petition asks for a three times a week service.

That the dairy cow is playing an important part in the development and prosperity of this country is shown by the steady increase or business by the local creamery, despite the fact that new creameries are being built throughout the country. Last week the local creamery shipped 120 tubs of butter or 7200 pounds, this being one of the best outputs since its organization.

ATTEND GAME AT OWN RISK

SO SAYS MINNESOTA COURT—NO DAMAGES IF YOU ARE HURT WHILE THERE.

Minneapolis, Minn.—That a person attends a baseball game at his own risk is the dictum of the Minnesota supreme court in a decision handed down last week. The danger of batted and thrown balls is known, so the court decides, to every patron of the national game. Further, declared the justice, as long as a ball ground management takes reasonable precautions to protect patrons, that is all they can be legally expected to do, and no liability should attach to them once these customary measures have been complied with. The decision which carries with it nation-wide interest, was handed down in the case brought against the Minneapolis Baseball and Athletic association by Mrs. Bobo L. Wells, the latter having been struck by a batted ball. The court, gave Mrs. Wells $25 damages thus finding the supreme court reverses and orders a new trial.

Among other things, the court holds that one who maintains grounds to witness games of baseball, and knows from actual dangerous incidents, but is required to use the care and precaution of an ordinary, prudent person to protect the spectators against danger. He is not required to anticipate the improbable.

ELK FOR LOCAL HUNTERS.

State Will Try to Get Herd for Superior Forest.

Fifty elk from the Yellowstone National Park, if they can be obtained, will be turned loose in Minnesota in the Superior forest and game reserve, which lies along the Canada an boundary line north of Lake Superior. This was decided upon today by the State Game and Fish commission.

The territory is the natural home of the elk and together with the adjoining national reserve covers more than 1,000,000 acres. There are no elk in other parts of the state. It is estimated that the annual increase in the herd will be 50 per cent. This is the increase noted in the Yellowstone park.

Elk in the second announcement made recently of herds of elk to be brought to the state. The forestry board announced that a herd will be placed in the Itasca park. These elk however, will be kept in paddock.—Filed River Falls Times.

A NEW SEED LAW

Minnesota Extension Bulletin 39 States the Law and Explains the Inspection and Free Tests.

The last legislature provided a law for the regulation of the sale or exposure for sale, of agricultural seeds in Minnesota. It is in effect on and after July 1, 1913, and provides for the labeling of agricultural seeds in such a way as to indicate to the germinating power, the locality in which they were grown, and the character and amount of noxious weed seeds or other impurities present.

The execution of this law is hereby entrusted to the University Farm Experiment Station where it has been placed in the hands of Dr. E. M. Freeman, Plant Pathologist, and W. L. Oswald in charge of the Seed Laboratory. Dr. Freeman and Mr. Oswald have just prepared Extension Bulletin 39 which states the new law in full, explains its provisions and makes a number of suggestions valuable for seed buyers, and gives directions to those who wish to have free tests made by them at University Farm.

The bulletin has just been mailed to over 40,000 farmers and should be in the hands of all who buy or sell agricultural seeds of any description.

Stringent Marriage Law in N. Dak.

Grand Forks.—Under the new North Dakota marriage law, which has just become operative, the issuance of marriage of diseased persons is prohibited. This is the first step taken towards the more effective control of marriages, and is in line with the general movement throughout the country for the greatest eugenic safeguard of persons about to enter the marriage state.

Each person seeking to be married must file with the license clerk a certificate of good health, the certificate to show that the person is not afflicted with any contagious or infectious diseases. Another certificate must be filed to show that the parties are not in any manner related by blood. The new law according to Grand Forks county officials is working without friction.

Habitual drunkards are prohibited under the provisions of the new law also.

CAXTON'S NURSE

By ELIZABETH WEED

When I was in the medical department of the British army in India and stationed at Hongkong I was sent to an interior station to see a young officer, Lieutenant Caxton, who was ill. I found the lieutenant in the house of a widow with a very pretty daughter. He was in bed intermittently, for at times he was quite able to be up and about. When he was confined to his room the young woman had the care of him.

The thought entered my head that perhaps Caxton was aspiring in order to remain in close proximity to the girl. But I was soon convinced that he was really ill. His symptoms not being familiar to me, I did not know what to do for him except to give him a stimulating drug—quinine—to help him to throw off what was troubling him. But he did not improve, and I was puzzled what next to do.

I had some experience with Indian poison cases, though not much, and if Caxton had not been in the care of a girl who treated him with such tenderness that I could not doubt she was in love with him I would have believed that for some reason or other she was poisoning him.

Talking one day with the widow, I learned that they were not a family of Europeans' in India, but had come from Java. In those islands upon one that I had heard that a Javanese girl who loves a man will either have him or kill him. This gave me a clew to Caxton's case.

From that time forward I watched his nurse's every movement. I also took care of my belief that his nurse was in love with him. His confession that his ex had begun to suspect as much himself and that he had occasionally treated her with more consideration than he showed his duty, I acted on this information regarding them. I therefore kept my eyes open with a view to discovering some other way by which Caxton's nurse was exercising on him, if she was doing so at all, of which I was by no means sure.

I suggested to him to get out of the house; but he said there was no hotel for him to go to and he knew the living much better nursing than he would in his quarters. I saw that it would not be easy to make a change, and the only other way for me to do was to solve the puzzle of the illness.

A common way of administering poison as something which is much used is by means of finger ring. A ring wearing one will clasp the hand of another, and a poisonous pricking the skin will inject a poison. I noticed that Caxton's nurse wore a ring on her finger and suspected that she gave him poison in her wine. I pretended to admire the ring and asked her to let me examine it. She handed it to me without hesitation, and I looked at it very carefully. No, poison was not administered in that way. The ring was perfectly plain gold, and if there had been any projecting apparatus, however minute, I would have discovered it.

Another Indian method of inflicting poison is through the air. It is often breathed and sometimes inhaled from a perfume. Where are persons in India who have taken a deadly poison in minute doses, gradually increasing them till the poison enters here become immune to harm and so attracted with the drug that their very breath is deadly to others. I wondered at the habit of Caxton's nurse being one of those. But after carefully to get to near her for a few minutes that I could smell her breath I felt no unusual sensation from it whatever. So I gave up the clew.

Seeing a plant in Caxton's room, I told his nurse to take it out, since the perfume of flowers is considered harmful to the sick. She objected, and from that I did not see it in the room again for six months. I went in to see Caxton before his nurse had fixed his room after the day. As I saw the plant and asked him how it came to be there, contrary to my instructions. He informed me that she was very much interested to bring it to his room before leaving him for the day, and that it was to enjoy the fine thing in the morning. I at once perceived upon this that she was feeding a solution of the poison. I had heard of the poison plant of India and how one kept only to inhale its perfume to be affected by it. Picking a flower from it, I took it away with me and plucked it sufficiently under the microscope to convince me that it was being used upon Caxton.

I at once informed him of the fact, and he was glad to forego to his cigarettes, where as soon as the deleterious effects of what he had been subjected to passed off, he recovered.

But we never let the girl know that we had discovered her method of procedure.

al mien perhaps it come have walked on the same stretch of sand for half a day without meeting an object, when I knew a book of cloud coming in from the ocean. In a few minutes I was enveloped in it. The wind that had brought it in died down to a dead calm, and everything was still save.

I thought I had my bearings and, turning, started back toward my hotel. But I was off my course, for I had not gone for before I stepped on the verge of a shallow indentation in the sand filled with water left by the outgoing tide. It was evident that I had been walking into the ocean. I turned and started again, as I supposed, toward the dunes, but I must have swerved, for I walked on and on for some time on sand. Then I stood still.

It was a singular sensation. Standing there, all direction obliterated—something like being in perfect darkness or on the ocean out of sight of land. No, it was like neither of these; it was like itself only. But I wondered if being suspended in space would resemble something unobstructed. Then suddenly a voice came out of the surrounding vapor. It was a girl's voice, sounding as clear and distinct as if spoken in the same atmosphere following a snowstorm.

"Here I am."

I was so startled at the sudden break of the surrounding oblivion that it did not occur to me to make a sound myself. There was something in the change from isolation to contiguity that seemed like passing from nothingness to life. Then, too, the docility of the atmosphere imparted a muskiness tone to the voice that harmonized with a chord in my own being. I had plenty of time within a few seconds to feel all these things before I said:

"And here am I."

Sound does not of itself give direction, and I knew not whence the words I had heard came. But in another minute the fog directly before me darkened, then resolved itself into a girl's figure. Seeing me, a stranger to her, she stepped back, then stood still.

"Are you lost?" I asked.

"Indeed I am," was the reply. "A ship which I have taken a deadly poison in the fog. She stepped out ahead of me and we became separated. I called her."

"I would be happy to guide you," I said, "but I am lost myself at the present. However, you had better permit me to stand by you till the fog lifts."

"I will," she replied and they have walked into some quicksand or water or something. She was with me a few minutes ago and has suddenly disappeared."

"Call her," I suggested.

"Helen, Helen!" called my companion.

She elicited no response.

"We may as well go on," I said; "doubtless we shall come out somewhere. Don't worry about your friend. There are no quicksands on this beach."

We moved—in what direction we knew not—and chatted, as we progressed. When seemed a great change, a great relief from the preceding isolation to this companionship. I certainly felt it, and if the girl kept very close to me, as if fearing she might lose me as she had her friend.

"What is that?" she asked suddenly. "What?"

She pointed, but I saw nothing. She told me that she had seen something there indistinctly before us, but as soon as she spoke it quickly faded.

We went on for some time, but all was dark. Suddenly my companion, very broad, and the ship title went out a great distance. I did not wonder that we reached bedding different. Then I saw a form in the fog coming—my companion saw it, too, and, frightened, clung to me.

I was not superstitious and had it not been for my companion would have sprung toward the spot, to discover whether it was human. But I feared that clinging of a fair girl as delightful that I preferred to remain as I was. I reassured my companion in a whisper, putting my lips against hers as necessary, for her ear, and feeling her warm breath. I kept my eyes on the spot, while she turned her face toward me that she might not see. At last I was relieved to find that it was a man. I believed it to be some animal though.

Quiet now by my companion's side, I waited for the object to approach. It was a long time coming, but it finally came within a few feet of us and proved to be a man. He was walking in his sleep, with his eyes open and fixed upon vacancy. He passed us without seeing us and disappeared in the fog.

Suddenly the fog began to clear, and with that rapidity with which fogs sometimes take themselves away, and revealed the figure of a girl walking rapidly away from us.

"Why, it's Helen!" exclaimed my companion. "I believe she has been nine on all the while."

"Helen!" she called.

The retreating girl stopped and turned. I could see that the surprise she showed was feigned. She joined us with an unmixed smile on her face and confessed that she had heard the words "Here I am," but, thinking to bother her friend, had remained silent. When she was about to reply she heard my "And here am I." She had kept silent to get a bit of fun out of it and had succeeded.

SYNOPSIS.

Bill Cannon, the bonanza king and his daughter Rose, who had passed up Mrs. Cornelius Ryan's ball at San Francisco to accompany her father, arrive at Jennings' Boarding Farm cafe on the mother lode country. Cannon is in search of a cook and finds the determined old lady willing to relinquish her daughter-in-law, Dominick, but how to persuade her is the problem. Dominick herself is accompanied by Bernard Ryan, a San Francisco broker's son. Mary Jane frequent quarrels and Rose sings. Cannon and his daughter are rescued by an Antelope Dominick tells a rescued from storm in uncomfortable quarters. Rose and Ryan are left alone. Dominick's cook is out of control. Cannon nurses Dominick back to life. Ryan seeks Rose. Bernard Ryan arrives and is given a room in the cabin. Rose and Ryan are left alone. Dominick at last is able to talk to Cannon. Dominick's husband, Bernard Ryan, is a disappointment to his father

The Baseball Primer

By Hugh S. Fullerton

(Copyright, 1914, by W. G. Chapman)

Baseball needs a Webster and a standing revision board to keep the dictionary of the game up to date. The sport is building its own language so steadily that, unless some step soon be taken to check the inventive young men who coin the words that attach themselves to the pastime, interpreters will have to be maintained in every grand stand to translate for the benefit of those who merely love the game and do not care to master it thoroughly.

Joe Campbell, the Chaucer of baseball literature, was sitting in his office one evening, lamenting to me that his paper (The Washington Post) would not permit him to write as he pleased, but insisted that he confine his writings to straight English. I reached over and took the sheet he just had finished. "And Amlo Rueie" it ran, "made a Scoogill pass in front of Charlie Reilly's lampe and he carred three sticke in the weather." What could be plainer or more expressive of the fact that Rueie had hypnotized Reilly into striking out? Or what could be more graphic than Lecoin Washburn's description of a ball that was hit hard and instead of bounding, "hugged the dirt," as the players say, and tore its way through the grass.

The following does not pretend to be a complete dictionary of the baseball language. It merely is the primer, containing some of the commonest words and phrases, with an explanation of their meaning:

Air (up in)—Excited, uncorred. A term used to describe the condition of a pitcher who loses his courage or presence of mind at critical stages of a contest.

Bean (N)—The head of a player (V) to bean—to pitch or throw and hit the batter to the head (see Idiom).

Bean Ball—I fast ball pitched at or near the head of a player who is standing too close to the plate with intent to drive him back. Often used to drive timid batters away from the plate, after which the pitcher usually throws a fast curve.

Big Goo (The)—The third strike. After two strikes are called the "big goo" is left. The percentage of safe hits made by batters after two strikes are called is extremely high, and the term probably results from that fact.

Bingle—A clean base hit, the ball being driven clean over or past the fielder without presenting a chance for any possible play.

Blite—A term applied to batters who are weak in that they cannot resist the temptation to strike at a curve ball, especially at a slow curve. The message "He will blite" passed through a league among the players generally means the end of the usefulness of that player.

Bleechers—Uncovered field seats on baseball parks. Term originated in the south where the colored spectators were forced to sit to the sun, and were "bleached."

Boner—A stupid play; a blunder in the science of the game. Term adopted from the idea that a player making a stupid play has a head composed entirely of osseous tissue.

Bone-head—A player noted for making stupid plays; one whose apparent of a player's head as his "armored turret."

Boot—An error, in the making of which the player fumbles with his hands and allows the ball to bound off his feet or laps, kicking or "booting" it.

Why does he waste his efforts booting baseballs? inquired Boss Bolzer of a new infielder, Thursday morning the lack of a punter?"

Break (The)—The turning point of a game of ball; the critical play which starts a stampede of the defeated team and a fusilade of hits by the attacking club. Also "the breaks" are used to express the luck of the game. "The breaks were all against us" means that to every game in which luck does not contend into the play, it favored the opposing team.

Bunt—A ball, struck with the bat with the intention of dropping or rolling it onto the ground and only a short distance, forcing the infielders to hurry the play to throw out the runner. It is used chiefly to advance runners who already are on bases

Bust and run—The term used to designate a play much used in the more fashion teams. The batters and base runners exchange signals as the pitcher starts to deliver the ball to the batter, the runner or runners start for the next base at full speed. The batter bunts as they go, and if he puts or the ball fair the play obviates the chance to force the other runners. The play is extremely dangerous to bad bunters, as a double play is almost certain if they bunt a fly into the air.

Coacher—A player or manager who from the coacher's boxes back of first and third bases, endeavors to guide and advise batters and baserunners, warning them of the movements of the enemy and flashing the manager's signals to players, as ordered for certain plays. In the early days of the game the duties of coachers were to play clown, make noise and strive to excite or annoy the opposing players. The coacher is the modern game usually is quiet, studying the movements of the opposing pitcher and catcher and assisting base runners.

Control—Ability to throw a baseball where it is directed to be thrown and to pitch it over the plate between the batter's knees and shoulders when necessary. Control is the pitcher's principal stock in trade, as a pitcher who can throw the ball over where he wants it to go needs few curves and not much speed.

Crab—A crabbed player, a "grouch." The verb to crab means to show a quarrelsome or complaining spirit. Many of the worst "crabs" in baseball are the pleasantest and most genial when off the field, their crabbedness evidently being the result of the nervous strain of playing.

Crabs—Verb used in baseball not to signify a sloglo sound, but a series of hard hits. A term "starts crabbing," when three or four batters in succession make hits.

Crowd (Verb)—To stand close to the home plate when batting, the purpose being to hamper the pitcher and sometimes to force him to hit the batter. The team that "crowds" persistently is a hard team to beat, as in many cases batters will be hit, and many more pitchers, ever anxious through fear of hitting them, will pitch inside the plate and give them bases on balls.

Curve—In professional baseball the only curves spoken of as such is the fast breaking ball, pitched overhand, that darts down and out from a right-headed batter. All curves are qualified as sidewarm, out, barrel hook, slow, drop. No one speaks of an incurve among major leaguers. See Putting Something on It, and The Jump.

Dirt (Hit the) Slide—Deadly heard in connection with an order to a player. Managers always reprove players who "stop standing up," and order them to "hit the dirt," partly because standing up is a risky way of going into a base, and partly because so many players are injured by not sliding.

Double—A two base hit, or "two bagger."

Double Play—A play in which two runners are retired or put out, before the ball ceases to move, or in one continuous play. The commonest double play is from the catcher to the second baseman to the first baseman.

Double Steal—A steal of hases by two runners simultaneously. The steal is when made with runners on first and second is seldom called a double steal, as the runner on second steals home and the other runner merely "trails." The double steal, as made by the expression, is made with runners on first and third. The runner starts from first and, as the catcher throws to catch him, the runner on third trier to score before the ball can be returned to the catcher. The play is used chiefly when two are out and the chance of scoring in any way is small.

Doehls Steal (Delayed)—With runners on first and third bases the runner on first pretends to steal, for second. About 30 feet from first he slops quickly and turns as if to go back. If the catcher relaxes from the throwing position, he starts for second at top speed and, as the ball is thrown, the runner at third starts for the plate. The success of the play depends upon the element of surprise and except against experienced and cool-headed catchers it is likely to be more effective than the double steal made in the ordinary manner.

Fadeaway—A slow curve ball that loses speed suddenly as it approaches the batter and falls, or "fades" away at an unnatural angle. The fadeway is accomplished by a jerking and sliding motion of the fingers upon the ball at the moment of releasing it from the hand. Christy Mathewson developed the "fader" into its highest state of perfection.

Groove—An imaginary passage from the pitcher's head over the center of the home plate. When a ball comes "down the groove" it is pitched at the batter's head, and is "without anything on it") over the plate and therefore is easy to hit. Grooves also are the space between the fielders and between the fielders and the foul lines through which batted balls usually pass out of the possible reach of the players.

Hit and Run—One of the most effective styles of attack devised in baseball. The object is concerted action on the part of the batter and base runner, and the runner on the base may take two bases instead of one on a hit, or reach the next base before he can be forced.

Hold Up—Perhaps the most important part of the baleful work of the pitcher, catcher and batsmen is to "hold up" runners, or prevent them from "getting a lead" off the bases.

Hole (In the)—Is difficulties; in dire straits. Either the pitcher or batter may be "in the hole" so the batter be "in the hole" with one or two strikes and no balls called, and the pitcher when he has pitched two or three wide balls, and hes one or one strike on the batter. The object of every good batter is to get the pitcher "in the hole" so that he, in fear of giving a base on balls, will pitch a straight fast ball ever the plate, giving the batter much better chance of making a safe hit.

Hook—A slow overhand curve that breaks downward and outward at an unusually sharp angle. The hook curve is accomplished by a sharp snap of the wrist at the finish of a wide swing of the arm, which accentuates the sharpness of the curve. The hook curves of Brown and Overall, Joe Corbett, Tom Ramsey, Bill Donovan, Bill Terry, Walter Johnson, and others have become famous for their width.

Hook Slide—Also called the "Chicago slide"—A method of sliding to base which was perfected by Mike Kelly of Anson's White Stockings, and taught to all the Chicago players.

Inside—A pitched ball that passes between the plate and the batter is "inside" whether the batter is right or left-handed, but the "out" corner of the plate is the corner toward first base, and vice versa, when there is no batter on.

Knuckle Ball—A slow ball pitched with the knuckles of the three middle fingers turned under and pressed into the ball, which is gripped with the thumb and little finger only. The knuckle ball is extremely deceptive, as it is delivered with a show of great speed and comes with extraordinary slowness. Summers of the Boston team, perhaps, is the greatest master.

Lead—The distance from any base that a base runner can gain before the ball is pitched. To "get a long lead" is the object of every runner.

Liner—A hard drive ball that is hit on a straight line to or past the infield before it touches the ground.

Mound—The pitcher's foot plate, or slab. Derived from the fact that on most grounds the plate is higher than the rest of the infield, to give the pitcher an advantage in throwing plate downward at the batter. The "mound" is elevated or depressed by some clubs, high plates being used for tall overhand pitchers while low ones are preferred for sidearm or underhand pitchers.

Outlaw—The club, league or player who offends against baseball law is punished by being "outlawed" or blacklisted. The alleged benefits of "protection" are withdrawn as punishment to offending leagues or clubs while players are blacklisted. There are several hundred players on the blacklist at present who cannot play to any club belonging to the national agreement until reinstated by the commission.

Outside—The side of the home plate opposite to that occupied by the batter. If the term is used without regard to the batter the first base side of the plate is outside.

Pinch—A base on balls.

Pitchout — The most effective method of meeting and breaking up the hit and run play. The ball is pitched rather high and on the outside of the plate, to prevent the batter from hitting it and at the same time to permit the catcher to receive it to perfect position for a throw. When a signal is detected, or when the catcher and pitcher suspect that either a steal or the hit and run is to be attempted, the pitchout is pitched out to halk the play.

Putting Something On It—Manipulating the ball so that it will curve, break, float or revolve in the air, rather than throwing it naturally.

Reserve—"Organized baseball" depends upon a clause in the players' contracts whereby the club "reserves" their services for the following season. The reserve clause really acts as a perpetual contract and the legal advisers of players declare the contract would not hold in law. The reserve clause was placed in contracts to prevent the wrecking of leagues by competitive bidding for the services of the best players, whereby the richest clubs always could win.

Scout—A supposed judge of ball players employed by the larger clubs to watch out for those of men in small leagues, colleges and in independent clubs to recruit good players.

Slider—An injury to a player caused by scraping a segment of skin off the leg or thigh in sliding to bases. Many players suffer much from these injuries, often having the skin torn off their limbs in patches four or five inches square.

Smith Do—A left-handed pitcher. The term is derived from the fact that when left-handed pitchers are laid out as the pitcher faces west, and a left-handed pitcher's arm is to the south.

Spitter (To Sharpen)—The pretense of a player who is under the fungoler too and heel plates he wears on his shoes, is a threat to "put his way around," or to spike certain antagonists if they attempt to step or touch him. Chiefly a form of braggadocio, and seldom carried into effect.

Spit ball (The Spitter)—The most effective ball in the pitcher's repertoire. It is executed by putting heavy friction on the under side of the ball by gripping the thumb into the seams, while the friction on the upper part is lessened by the use of saliva, slippery elm or some such oily substance. The spit ball is used most effectively by Walsh and Ford and its modern development was due to Elmer Stricklett, who relotrodueed it after a major leaguers. The discovery of the spit ball is a matter of much argument. Some claim the honor for Al Orth, who used it to sodethand pitching many years ago. It is claimed that Tom Hood, the famous old time pitcher, pitched the spit ball by wiping his left cheek and using glycerine, which he carried in his pocket.

Stuff—The "English," twist or reverse which causes the ball to curve or perform other nonsteard movements in the air. When a pitcher has a "lot of stuff" he is credited with ball curve or break more then he ordinarily uses.

Swinger—A batter who strikes at a ball with a full, long, sweep of the bat and who is capable of "clouting" or shortcoking ble grip and "just meeting it." The "swinger" is a type of player not weeted in foleheb ball clubs. They usually are long distance hitters, but uncertain and usually finish with low averages.

Texas Leaguer—In short, term fly that drops safe just over the infield and too close in for the outfielders to reach it. Usually an accident, but sometimes accomplished purposely by good batters who merely tap the ball and foot it safe. The term originated from the fact that Ted Sullivan, the veteran player-manager-magnate, was the team in the Texas league that was noted for that kind of batting.

Triple—A hit which sonbibe the batter to reach third base before the ball can be returned to the infield. Also called Three Bagger.

Triple Play—A play which retires three runners before the ball ceases to move, or in one consecutive play. The records of eight triple plays made by one man unassisted, and about twenty triple plays are made in each league every season.

Twist—Pitching high or wide to batters purposely. The pitcher often will, when he has the advantage of the batter in the matter of balls and strikes, waste a ball, either trying to tempt the batter into striking wildly, or trying to allow the catcher to make a put to second base.

Water Bucket (Spiking)—Drawing away from the plate as the ball is pitched. Many batters draw back the foot an entire step, out of timidity or through nervous habit, and those who step far back are said to spike the water bucket.

Whip—The throwing arm. Also called Wing and Soup-bone.

RURAL WOMAN HELPS SELF

Writer Declares That She is "The Salt of the Earth."

The country woman is, from her environment, the possessor of a resource at once so intelligent and capable that it behooves those who observe it to admire.

She can hitch the horse to the buggy and drive him, too; she can round up the cows that have broken through the pasture fence and mend the fence; she can put out the fire in the chimney when the men folks are far afield; she can administer first-aid treatment of the very best to bad burns or cuts or broken arms, as well as such minor ills as hornet stings, chilblains and bruises; she is apt to be a pretty shrewd judge of cattle; she can make and mend her own and her children's clothes; she knows how to cure meat, to shoot a marauding hawk, to prune a rosebush, to make soap, to beat a carpet, to scale a fish—and she looks on none of these things as an "adventure" or a unique experience, but simply as part of the day's work.

Because she lives with the actual realities of life she is not likely to put undue emphasis upon its nonessentials. Comfort, business and cleanliness, above style, are desirned in her home. Her table is supplied with palatable and wholesome food, neatly served.

She does not worry about the lack of lace oesterpieces, or monogrammed linen, or the position of the knives and forks. She knows that if she is comfortably dressed in neat, clean clothes befitting the occasion, and if they are suitable to the weather she is truly a well-dressed woman. She asks, "Will it wear well?" when she goes to buy, and she is a very astute purchasing agent, but as a bargain, knowing or scotly what she wants and what she wants to pay for it.

There is just one phrase that fits her—"salt of the earth." Let us by all means put her in a class apart, and yield her the respect due her.—Woman's Home Companion.

HIGH TIDE OF WAR

BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG WAS TURNING POINT OF GREAT CIVIL CONFLICT.

BOTH SIDES FOUGHT BRAVELY

Three Days of Fighting That Resulted in Total Losses of Over 50,000 and Put Confederate Forces on the Defensive.

Bravely fought by two great armies of Americans, bravely won by the Federals and bravely lost by the Confederates was the battle of Gettysburg proved to be the turning point of the Civil war. Before that the victories of the south were frequent and its armies were aggressive. After the bloody battle of July 1, 2 and 3, 1863, the forces of the Confederacy were generally on the defensive. Lee's invasion of the north, undertaken in the hope that it would bring foreign aid to the southern cause, was brought to a sudden and disastrous end.

General Lee's army at Gettysburg numbered approximately 64,000, while the Federal forces, under command of Gen. George G. Meade, aggregated about 100,000 officers and men. Lee's corps commanders were General Longstreet, Ewell and A. P. Hill. Commanders of the Union corps were Generals John F. Reynolds, W. S. Hancock, D. E. Sickles, Sykes, Sedgwick, O. O. Howard and Slocum.

Reynolds, sent ahead to feel out the enemy, arrived at Gettysburg the evening of June 31, and in the fighting which began early the next day, was killed. Gen. Abner Doubleday, who succeeded him, was forced back to Seminary Ridge, after hard fighting, and then had to abandon that position, so that on the first day of the battle was in reality a Confederate victory. Two eight Meade ordered the entire Union army to Gettysburg, and by next morning the two armies were confronting other other on the two little line of battle.

Lee ordered Longstreet to turn the left flank of the Federal army by taking Little Round Top, but Sickles defended that position so stubbornly that Longstreet's movement was checked. Ewell, Cemetery Hill, Culp's Hill and The Devil's Den were the scenes of desperate fighting, and Little Round Top was saved by the Federals by the arrival of a brigade under General Weed. His men dragged the guns of a battery to the summit by hand.

The third day opened with a wonderful artillery duel, the greatest of the entire war. From these came Lee's etty charge, which has gone into history as one of the most heroic assaults of all time. The man of Pickett's division formed in friendly columns, move detesdily across open fields which were swept by such a storm of shrapnel and rifle fire as had never before been seen, and though they fell like grain before the reapers, some of them reaching the Union lines, only to be overpowered or captured. That ended the mighty battle, and there was nothing left for Lee to do but get back into Virginia.

Gettysburg cost the Union army the lives of a number of generals, and the loss of nearly 24,000 men. On the Confederate side five generals were killed and nearly 30,000 men killed or wounded.

Quard Against Bores.

Lord Rothschild's father, Baron Nathan, guarded himself against importunate bores by allowing no chairs in his private room except the one for himself occupied by himself. From a passage in the "Reminiscences of Charles Gavard," who was for many years the secretary at the French embassy in London, it appears that this precaution did not always prove effective. Gavard frequently had occasion to visit St. Swithins Inns in connection with the payment of the indemnity exacted after the Franco-German war. As his business was often complicated he declined to hurry over it, and used to find as comfortable a seat as he could on the baron's writing table.—London Chronicle.

Cigars.

Cigars are like women. Many times you can't tell by the wrapper what the filler is. They are of many kinds, sizes and shapes, and when on display in their rainbow raimeut few sights so tickle the eye or flurry the fancies

"I believe in putting by something for a rainy day"

"And, so saying, he stole his neighbor's machintosh."

He Owned the Place.

Little Tommy was inclined to be wicked, and when the minister found him with rod and line fishing near the road one Sunday morning the good man asked:

"Don't you know it is wrong to fish on Sunday, Tommy?"

"I don't care if it is," Tommy replied, "I'm going to fish when I can get a chance, Sunday or any other day."

"Are you not afraid that you will go to the bad place when you die?" the good man asked.

"I don't care if I do," Tommy replied sullenly. "I own that place. It's mine."

"What do you mean by saying that you own the bad place, Tommy?" the minister asked, astonished.

"I ran away last Sunday and went fishing, and when I got home pa gave me a licking."

The Red Lake Falls band members that furnished part of the music for the celebration here yesterday returned to their homes this morning, leaving many warm friends and admirers in Crookston. It is a very classy organization of which Red Lake Falls has great reason to be proud. Only about half the band was here, twenty members being at another celebration. — Crookston Times, Saturday.

An exchange says "A banker in Missouri has hit onto a novel way to tell whether an applicant for loans at his bank is reliable or not. He steps to the telephone and calls up the publisher of the local paper. If the applicant is a subscriber and his account is paid up, he gets the loan, but if he is in arrears the security must be gilt edge. There is more truth than poetry in the above proposition. The man who is slow to pay on his local paper is just as apt to be slow elsewhere and the men who deadbeat the printer are the same fellows who do the merchant and the banker."

Ed. Kolfenbain, the local twirler, returned Monday from Thief River Falls where he had been for several days. The Thief River ball team played Roseau at Warroad on the 4th with Kolfenbain in the box and the game was called in the eighth inning on account of rain, with the score a tie 3 to 3. Kolfenbain got 18 strikeouts in this game. Sunday Warren played at Thief River Falls and won by a score of 10 to 7. Hye, the Thief River pitcher, threw the first two innings and six runs were made off his delivery. Kolfenbein then relieved him and held his opponents down to four runs in seven innings.

Strange animal instinct led Martin Apperly's dog to find his grave in Oak very cemetery, Mankato, and since then the animal has haunted the place. Apperly was a farmer living near Kasota, and died three weeks ago in a hospital in Mankato and was buried in the cemetery nearby. The dog was not here until several days after the man's death but managed to locate the grave and has spent every night there, not leaving until the sexton arrives in the morning, and then returning to the city for food. The dog is a handsome Scotch collie.—Wadena Pioneer Journal.

LAMBERT (OKLEE)

The celebration at Oklee was a good one considering the rain that fell. The ball game was declared a draw at the eighth inning and was a good close game up to the big shower. The races were snappy, the fat men, the old men and the boys all did their best. The band from Red Lake Falls was fully appreciated.

Sam Miller and wife of Red Lake Falls were the guests of their son Sap and wife last week.

Minogel Hince and wife returned from their Canadian trip last week, well satisfied with their home on Lost River.

The forty hours devotion at the Lambert church ended Tuesday noon. Rev. Tapin from Crookston and Rev. Veilleux from Argyle assisted Rev. Fr. Bealeau.

Peter Hince and wife are the happy parents of a baby girl, born on Saturday.

Miss Leora Lesieur was the guest of Miss Marcia Paquin over Sunday.

Vida and Fred Bernier are handling the heavy parts of the George Hess dredge and loading it for shipment at Oklee.

Mrs. F. Bourque returned from the Rendell hospital Monday evening much improved in health.

C. D. Hall is managing the Farmers' elevator and if are glad to see Clare with the rest of the farmers in the wheat business.

Mrs. Olof Tande.

Mrs. Olof Tande died at her home in Garnes township last Thursday, July 3rd. She had been sick but a week or so with pneumonia complications and a mild form of insanity caused by the intense heat the last days of June. Mrs. Tande was 49 years of age and had been a resident of Garnes for 17 years. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband and five children, 3 girls and two boys, ranging in age from 15 to 6 years of age, besides a host of friends who will miss her from the bedside of the sick, the church and all neighborly functions. Rev. Kolstad presided the funeral sermon and found the task one of love and never as the deceased had been a helper in his church and a friend and neighbor for the past 17 years. Mr. Tande is undecided what he will do as yet and the beautiful home and the flowers she loved are desolate meantime.

Buick

Would you go to a tailor for a suit of clothes if you knew he bought the goods in Chicago, had the coat made in Lincoln, Neb., the vest in St. Louis, Mo., and the pants in Springfield, Moss., and all he did was to put in the pockets and sew on the buttons?

The motor car company which is going to be in business five years from now is the concern that builds its own product from the ground up. They can build it cheaper and they can build it better. You want a car, don't you, that is boched by a company that won't be quitting business about the time you are needing some mechanical replacements.

What are acknowledged as the best motor cars on the market? Name them over. Aren't we right? Aren't they the cars built by the concern that sells them?

The Buick Motor Company builds everything from the ground up. We are building a motor car that sells, and it sells because it is a good car, a powerful car, a durable car, and economical car.

MADE TWO BANDS

Red Lake Falls Concert Band Divided for Fourth of July Celebrations.

The Red Lake Falls Concert Band was engaged to play at Crookston and Oklee the Fourth and for this reason the band was divided on this occasion—the older members going to Crookston and the younger ones to Oklee—making two bands of twenty pieces each. All the members speak well of the treatment accorded them and the good time had. Some of them returned the same evening but the majority remained until the following morning.

TO FOSSTON SUNDAY.

Local Team will Auto to That Place Next Sunday.

The local ball team goes to Fosston Sunday for the first game of a series with the team of that place. The Fosston team has always been a strong aggregation and the locals will have to play ball all the time to win. Owing to the condition of the roads the game which was to have been played at Mentor last Sunday was called off.

RINGERS ON THE GETTYSBURG TRIP!

ment is due to go by the boards. One thing contended by Mr. Smith was that members desiring to sign articles for the new association would first have to sever their connections with the old organization. This would leave them without insurance for the time being. Last week attorneys for both sides argued the ruling at length, but they were unable to bring about any change. It is likely that the controversy will be removed at the special session of the legislature to be held October next.

Those who are fighting Governor Eberhart's scheme of statewide control of public utilities offer as an argument that it is the utilities who want the law, not the consumers. In Minneapolis a fight is on for five-cent gas and the battle may extend to St. Paul. That the gas companies of the two cities would hail with delight something which would relieve them of their troubles does without saying, or perhaps there is something after all in what the opposition claims. You certainly cannot blame the utilities. With the cities it is got what you want first and then argue it afterwards. The statewide control idea is first to get the utilities can stand the desired cut.

Educators throughout the state are more than pleased over the decision of the supreme court upholding the Putnam consolidated school act, which provides state aid for schools which add the teaching of agricultural, industrial training and domestic science to their list of learning. The law was attacked as to the provision which permits the district furnishing such courses to tax nonresident pupils a nominal fee. Justice Holland wrote the opinion and he upheld the law in every respect.

SCHOOL OFFICERS HERE YESTERDAY

ANNUAL MEETING AT COURT HOUSE ATTENDED BY MANY SCHOOL OFFICERS.

The annual meeting of the rural school officers of the county occurred at the court house yesterday. One hundred members of rural school boards and about fifty teachers were in attendance. That the attendance should be so large in spite of unfavorable weather conditions speaks well for the progressive spirit of the men who are responsible for the welfare of the country schools.

The talent secured by Supt. DeForge for the program was of exceptional merit. State Superintendent Schulz not being able to be present, T. A. Erickson, superintendent of the Douglas county schools, represented the State Department of Public Instruction. He presented the subjects of School Equipment and New School Laws in a very interesting manner. Many laws concerning the management of rural schools were passed by the last legislature and a knowledge of these laws is a matter of immediate concern to all board members.

Supt. White of Ely, conductor of the summer school now in session, developed the topic of Teacher and Members. Among many other good points he urged the importance of a more hearty co-operation between the school patrons and the teacher.

The presentation of agriculture, and the association of the rural districts with the Red Lake Falls High School were subjects handled by Paul Carpenter of the local high school faculty.

Mrs. Murch of the summer school faculty explained in detail the purchase and use of the primary material which must hereafter be secured for all state aided schools.

Miss Brown, a teacher of much experience in this county and a student in the summer school, very ably discussed methods for making the rural school the community center.

Music for the occasion was furnished by a chorus of summer school students under the direction of Mrs. Murch.

Supt. DeForge is to be congratulated upon the success of the meeting. The annual conference of the school officers of all the state forces in the improvement of conditions in the schools of the county.

The Red Lake Falls concert band gave a pleasing outdoor concert as the people were assembling for the meeting.

TO COMMENCE FEDERAL SURVEY

PARTY OF SURVEYORS FROM WASHINGTON WILL COMMENCE WORK SOON.

Congressman Halvor Steenerson was in this city the first of the week making arrangements for a surveying party that will arrive here shortly from Washington, D. C., to commence surveying in the neighborhood of Red Lake.

Last fall Congressman Steenerson and two others made a trip over the reservation and around Red Lake to make a thorough inspection and investigation of the land and conditions in that locality with a view of securing some large drainage projects to render that country suitable for people to live and farm. On the strength of this trip Mr. Steenerson got Congress to make an appropriation for a federal drainage survey of the reservation lands in the vicinity of Red Lake. This survey will be conducted under the control of the department of the Interior. Employees of the Geological Survey will do the work and a party is at this time being made up at Washington to commence operations as soon as all necessary arrangements can be made. The work will probably be in charge of Alfred P. Stand, who made a survey of the Mud Lake basin some years ago.

The object of this new survey is to ascertain that these lands can be properly drained and made available for agricultural purposes. If this is found to be feasible, a bill will be introduced in the next session of Congress for an appropriation to carry on the drainage work. The bill will also provide for other matters in connection with the reservation, such as the disposal of the matured grass, etc.

If this immense drainage project matures it will include the deepening of Red Lake river from the lake down to where the dam backs water. It will also likely include the building of a lock at the outlet of Red Lake to control the flow of water in the river so that the same amount of water will be in the river all the time.

It has also been said that the War Department will make a survey of Red Lake with a view to locating harbors.

It is quite likely that the Secretary of the Interior and other public officials gentlemen from Washington will visit this country next September to look over the country in which it is proposed to carry on this work.—Thief River Falls Times.

BROOKS DEFEATS TERREBONNE

In a Fast Game Played at Terrebonne Sunday.

The Brooks and Terrebonne teams met on the Terrebonne grounds Sunday in a fast and well played game. Brooks showed up better and by fighting the big end of a 7 to 2 score. The game was hotly contested throughout and the result was in doubt until the last man was retired. This is the first game the Terrebonne boys have played this season and they have hopes in the near future of getting several revenges.

Theo. Ducharme and Walter Lacourcidere of the local team acted as umpires and gave the best of satisfaction. Following is the score by innings:

SEEDING WOODMEN START NEW ORDER

NORTHWESTERN PLAINSMEN IS NEW NAME—LITTLE FALLS HEADQUARTERS.

Temporary organization was effected last week by the insurgent branch of the Modern Woodmen of America, at a meeting attended by about 100 representatives of Minnesota lodges at the Hotel Ryan, St. Paul. The name adopted for the new order is the Northwestern Plainsmen, and Little Falls was chosen as temporary headquarters. The delegates claim right to represent 25,000 Woodmen and the petition required under the special "emancipation" law, demanding separation from the parent order, was prepared.

Representative D. P. O'Neill of Thief River Falls was chosen president of the order, and other officers were elected as follows: W. A. Gilkerson, Minneapolis, vice president; George M. Stetson, Duluth, secretary; C. L. Swanson, Albert Lea, treasurer, and John L. Sundean, Minneapolis, field manager.

The directors, being chosen from each congressional district, are McD. and Wilmington Dodge County; F. P. Ellsworth, Mankato; W. J. Drew, Glencoe; J. A. Larson, St. Paul; R. E. Bradley, Minneapolis; H. P. Bacon, Pillager; O. B. Bjornson, Minneapolis; C. M. Kiag, Deer River, and J. O. C. Pease, Anoka.

The publicity committee consists of Dr. Henry Weerzlager, Minneapolis; G. M. Stetson, Duluth, and C. W. Sikes, Lake Benton. They announce that there will be no trouble in getting the 5,000 signatures and information of the new order, and that it will be completely formed in six weeks.

BUILDINGS ARE UP

Skala & Son Preparing to Put Fixtures in New Store Building.

During the past few weeks much progress has been made with improvements made by M. Skala & Son. Earlier in the season they constructed a machine warehouse north of the general store building occupying all of the space between the store building and the corner building. Recently they have been engaged in building a fine hardware store and another large machine warehouse. The store building is 24x70 feet in dimensions and the warehouse 24x70 feet and the two buildings occupy all of the space between the general store and John Deutschman's saloon. The buildings are now enclosed and the work of putting in the fixtures is about to be commenced. M. Skala & Son have their establishments on the north side fronting on more than half a block on Broadway.

H. E. Ives was down from Thief River Falls over Sunday. He was accompanied home by his wife and children who had been visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Finch.

OPPOSITION IS BADLY DIVIDED

EBERHART MAY BE NOMINATED AGAIN IS COUNTY CHAIRMAN'S GUESS.

St. Paul.—(Special.)—Some day those who aspire to relieve Governor Eberhart of his grip on the helm of the ship of state will succeed, but the present tactics of the enemy do not indicate that the jarring loose process will take place at an early date. Even Capitol Hill those in charge are beginning to believe that the man from Mankato is invincible. Adolph Olson Eberhart, you know, "broke in" some four years ago on the death of Governor John A. Johnson. He was lieutenant governor then, a position those who were at the Duluth convention will tell you one all but obtained as a choice. The year following his promotion, which was made possible by the death of Governor Johnson, he was given the Republican nomination for governor at St. Paul without opposition. A change of candidate and about row on the Democratic side of the house made his election a cinch. But rule of political warfare the close of his second term would have made the strongest, but his friends are anxious for his return, forced the extension of a primary set and a fierce factant legislature, anxious to please and at the same time hand his executioner and his friends what they considered a package of the doubtful kind, passed the primary law. That has clinched the governorship a third time for Adolph Olson Eberhart and now it looks as if those interested in a change were again preparing to hand the job to the Mankato man on a silver platter and with no chance whatever of his falling down on the way of to acceptance.

\+ \+ \+

In pointing out how Governor Eberhart's enemies are going about the job of making a third term for him an absolute cinch I simply call attention to the latest row, in which James A. Peterson, who a year ago unanimously tried to succeed United States Senator Nelson, has succeeded in stirring up. Jim, you possibly have heard, has gubernatorial ambitions, and about the period of October 1 had been opened the game by jumping with both feet on a scheduled meeting of Progressives to be held in St. Paul for the purpose of discussing the gubernatorial situation and preparing the way for rival candidates Mr. Peterson says the scheduled meeting is a hockey affair, is in the interest of Governor Eberhart and his public utilities control scheme and as far as any endorsement of his candidacy is concerned he wants none of it. He adds that all true Progressives to stay away. Jim, you know, has broken with George S. Loftus, with whom he used to train, and he intimates that the former head of the Shippers and Receivers' association and later the ruling spirit in the Equity Grain Exchange is playing with the Eberhart crowd, which he once opposed. As the old saw runs, "Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad," and the Mississippi Dodge County statesman has fallen into the trap. The next victim, I suppose, will be "Bill" Lee, who has come R. A. Young and others." Mr. Peterson says he is not now a candidate, but the chances are that he will. Mr. Lee has asphrothes and it is said Ed Young is considering. It is the old, old story, and so why comment any further. If you have any spouting blood, just bust your money on Adolph. Nuff sed.

\+ \+ \+

You have got to give credit to his excellency, the governor, for his complete ignoring of the strictures indulged in by his enemies because of his traveling cities. Following his visit to the Gettysburg battlefield with his staff Governor Eberhart is now in Boston, and by the time he and the dispatches toll of his visit to the New York state capitol and to Chicago, where he was wined and dined and made much of. Members of his staff, resplendent in gold lace and blue cloth, accompanied him and the local papers furnished a line of publicity that must have gladdened the hearts of all concerned. The governor has promised to be back in time for the first of the quarterly meeting of the state parole board.

\+ \+ \+

It is hardly fair to indulge in any criticism, as the civil service law passed by the last legislature for the benefit of the state labor department is scarcely three months old, yet this fact has not prevented a number from complaining upon the examination of last month and which resulted in the appointment of a force of 100 men for the present employees. All passed the examination and received reappointments. Under the terms of the civil service law as drafted for the benefit of the department the three highest ratings are to be considered when a position is to be filled and the examination as held last month was for the purpose of testing out the competency of those already employed.

\+ \+ \+

According to the figures compiled by the state board of health there were over 5,000 cases of measles in Minnesota last year and this figure by no means represents the actual number of cases in the state. Because of the failure of town clerks and others intrusted with the making of reports only a fraction of the cases were sent in. One case of leprosy was also reported, but this has since been proved to be only a boil doton cases of this dread disease have been reported, but no attempt has been made to control it beyond isolating the victim. The disease, it is claimed, is less contagious than others of the contagious kind.

\+ \+ \+

If present plans are carried out Winona county will within a year have a system of concrete roads that will be without a parallel in the state. The county is preparing to invest over $750,000 in this style of road building and as a starter has let contracts for 100 miles thereof. Trunk roads cost the county $7,500 a mile. The roadbed and surface is composed of cement sand and washed gravel and is said to be almost indestructible. The state highway commission is not pushing the claim of roads because of the high cost, but it is handling its aid wherever they are adopted.

\+ \+ \+

As a result of a supreme court decision handed down last week the state treasury has been enriched to the tune of over $100,000, but this tidy sum would never have been added to the coffers of the state's treasurer box had it not been for the alert eyesight of a lumber firm. The timbers which will pay the state this $100,000 is the property of the Backus-Brooks company, Rock in 1906 the company bought from the state of 40,000 acres of St. Louis county. It paid the price demanded and according to the deals made by the state timber appraisal of logs and lumber. A clerk in the employ of the Backus-Brooks company, sore at being discharged, whispered to his employer that he had the state had not been estimated and he started an investigation which resulted in the discovery of a discrepancy of nearly 3,000,000 feet.

\+ \+ \+

In this neck of the woods no one would be sorry to see Governor Eberhart deforred his call for an extra session of the legislature to consider the question of statewide public utilities act until the first of next year. The general demand from the country is that it be postponed until that time. Governor Eberhart had October in mind for the date. It is claimed that rural paper falls due between the 15 and the 30th of that month, and that by then they are in a condition even grouchier than they are now, if that is possible, and are looking to clean it up.

\+ \+ \+

Insurgency has broken out in the ranks of the insurgent members of the Northern Pacific delegation in Minnesota and it now looks as if the scheme of a new organization would be glimmering. The last legislature passed a law permitting a new society, but it was hampered, and it is said that the act was rendered impracticable. Despite rulings made by Attorney General Buffington that the law it is claimed that certain persons interested in the old organization have been giving out a misleading line of information to the effect that interested to a square deal have threatened to make trouble. It is more than likely that the next legislature will be asked to interfere.

\+ \+ \+

Now it is the negro population of the state who are after Governor Eberhart. The latest outbreak was the Twin City Star, published at Minneapolis, among other things which has lizarded the colored man in Minnesota. The chief grievance of the paper is that Governor Eberhart failed to answer a letter from the editor of the publication asking that a negro be named among the Minnesota commissioners to the Panama-Pacific exposition.

\+ \+ \+

It looks very much as if friends would force Alva Eastman, the St. Cloud editor, into the gubernatorial fight in the new sixth district. Alva did threaten to break into the game last year, but successfully laid down at the last moment.

\+ \+ \+

The location of the new sixth normal school authorized by the last legislature is the cause of a lively row on Minnesota towns by the cars and the chief contestants will undoubtedly to result in bad blood. All kinds of charges of double dealing are being made. Only three towns, Thief River Falls, Bemidji and Cass Lake are actually in the field for the new school and they are out with an axe for each other's throats and then some. While the location of the school was ordered no appropriation was made by the legislature for the needed school buildings.

\+ \+ \+

So far as traffic within the limits of Minnesota is concerned the 2 cent a mile passenger rate and the state commodity and merchandise schedules were put into effect by the railroads Tuesday. It is understood that the roads are preparing to appeal cases from Minnesota will not be in force until September, on account of the several days required in advising those schedules.

RACE PROGRAM FOR COUNTY FAIR

AN ATTRACTIVE PROGRAM THAT SHOULT INTEREST LOCAL HORSE OWNERS.

Following is the race program for the three days of the Red Lake county fair:

First Day, Sept. 24.

2:30 farmers' trot or pace	$60.00
Pony running race, ½ mile	15.00
Pony race, ½ mile	10.00

Second Day, Sept. 25.

2:45 trot or pace	$100.00
Farmers' running race, ½ mile	25.00
2:17 trot or pace	250.00

Third Day, Sept. 26.

2:30 trot or pace	$100.00
Running race, free for all	25.00
Free for all trot or pace	200.00

It will be seen from the program that the purpose is to interest owners of local horses in the race events.

It has been the purpose of the officers of the Red Lake County Agricultural society since its organization to encourage better farming methods and the raising of better stock. To this end it has made a special exhibition of the resources of the county and not simply a race track. The idea of encouraging friendly competition is also aimed at in putting on the races and is carried out as far as it may be for an attractive program. Owners of local horses that can "go" are invited and urged to enter them for the races.

$50 Reward.

The Chas. Blanket mare was stolen on Thursday night, June 12, at Porterbonne, Red Lake County, and a reward of $50 will be paid for information leading to the recovery of the stolen property. Following is a description of the outfit:

Big stolen consists of dark bay mare, about 13 years old, weight about 1100 pounds, white star in forehead and white spot on side of head. She is a blooded road-mare and can be her blood. Also stolen with her was a Thoroughbred bay harness. Valuable but rubber and a plush robe were in the buggy. Watch among farmers who have seen for it to believe the horse will be offered for sale. Wire at top expense any information about the stolen property.

IMPRESSIVE TRIBUTE

Hundreds of People Attended the Funeral of Father Fayolle.

The funeral of Father B. Fayolle, held in this city last Thursday morning, was an impressive tribute to the memory of the good priest, the good man and the good friend. The attendance was nearly one thousand people at the funeral and the procession of between ninety and one hundred vehicles in the funeral procession was a quiet demonstration of the high esteem in which the people of this community felt for the former priest of St. Joseph's church who died at Deer River last Monday evening.

Rev. Bishop Corbett at Crookston gave the last absolution. The mass was sung by Fr. Thibodeau of Bemidji and Fr. Taplin of Crookston and Fr. Vallieres of Argyle were the deacon and subdeacon. Fr. Dufault of Crookston acted as master of ceremonies. Besides those named other visiting priests were Fr. Kerr of Crookston, Fr. Philippe of Bemidji, Fr. Lenhart, New Folden, Minn., Fr. Klukhammer of East Grand Forks, Fr. Beaulieu of Lambert, Fr. Adolph of Deer River and Fr. Ambrose, pastor of St. Mary's church, this city.

But one of the vast number of people who attended the funeral was Fr. Fayolle's relative. The people did not come to express their sorrow be relieved relatives, for so far as known Fr. Fayolle has no living relatives. They came to express their sorrow in the loss of a loved friend.

The obituary published in the last week's issue of the Gazette was incomplete, owing to the fact that the detailed information has been hard to get, and even now it is somewhat incomplete. However, in addition to what was published last week, it may be added that after five or six years service as chaplain in the French army Fr. Fayolle was appointed curate priest at Rocha, Algeria, and began his work there Oct. 9, 1883. He left Africa March 19, 1893 and became assistant priest of St. Charles parish in Montreal, remaining there from April, 1885, to July, 1886. He was parish priest at Persbrough for a few months and on Dec. 15, 1887, came to the St. Cloud diocese and on Dec. 21, that year, took charge of the work of St. Ann's parish, then St. Rose's parish, Crookston. He remained in Crookston until June, 1894, when he came to Red Lake Falls. His pastorate of St. Joseph's church continued over a period of eighteen years and terminated two years ago when he resigned and retired.

COLLINS-CARPENTER.

High School Faculty Man Brings Bride to Red Lake Falls.

The marriage of Miss Omore Collins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Collins of Lakefield, Minn., and Mr. Paul Carpenter, of the Red Lake Falls High school faculty, took place at the home of the bride's parents, Monday, July 7. It was a quiet home wedding, attended by a few relatives, and the reception following was attended by relatives and a few intimate friends. The ceremony took place at 5:30 o'clock in the morning, Rev. J. E. Orrock, pastor of the Lakefield M. E. church, officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter have returned to Red Lake Falls Saturday and they have rooms in the Roe house "on the hill on the hollow." Mrs. Carpenter will be welcomed to Red Lake Falls, by the many friends of Mr. Carpenter who esteem him for many fine qualities.

STATE HELPS SCHOOL TEACHERS

SCHOOL BOARDS AND INSTRUCTORS GOOD LOOK INTERESTED IN NEW BUREAU.

Minnesota school teachers and officers will be interested in knowing that the state employment bureau for teachers, under the auspices of the state superintendent of schools, is now in operation. The bureau, which is known as the Teachers' Co-operative Association, is a co-operation.

R. T. Crichett, one of the inspectors of the high school board, is in charge of the bureau, and already has found employment for several teachers. So far only about forty teachers have enrolled, but as the bureau becomes better known it is expected that the enrollment will not be less than 2,000 or 3,000.

Superintendent has written to all school boards over the state explaining the bureau, but he has found it the best plan to go out in local towns with the 10,000 or more teachers in the high and graded public schools of the state.

The methods employed are similar to those of other employment agencies. The name of the teacher of desiring a place, or a change of location, is enrolled for a nominal fee of $2.50. Circulars are sent to

GREEK VICTORY OF GREAT IMPORTANCE

OORIAN, CAPTURED CITY, WAS CENTER OF FOOD SUPPLY FOR THE BULGARIANS.

WHOLE DIVISION DESTROYED

Powers Have Abandoned Hope of Mediation—News of the Burning to Death of Several Hundreds of Persons.

London, July 10.—The Balkan war is having now been repudiated by formal declarations, it is understood that the powers will make no attempt to mediate. The Official Gazette at Belgrade, has just published notice of a formal declaration of war against Bulgaria.

Cholera in Belgrade.

Servian dispatches admit a strong Bulgarian column has invaded Servia at Kosnagavatz, which town they occupied after setting fire to the adjacent villages. Cholera has been brought to Belgrade by the wounded. Many official Greek dispatches claim a great victory at Doiran, where the Bulgarians, severely reinforced, were in superior strength to the Greeks. The latter assert that a whole division of Bulgarians was destroyed and that the Bulgarians fled in such confusion that they even left loaded guns behind.

This victory is considered of great importance because Doiran was the Bulgarian victualling center and all the provisions fell into the hands of the Greeks.

It is reported from Sofia that the Tenth Bulgarian division, which reinforced General Ivanhoff, was brought from the Tchataldja district. Orders would indicate compliance with Turkey's demand that the Bulgarians evacuate Turkish territory.

Burned Hundreds to Death.

Saloniki reports that the superior of the French Catholic mission at Kilkish confirms reports of massacres committed in that district by Bulgarian soldiers. He says hospitals that burned to death seven hundred men belonging to Kirkee by imprisoning them in a mosque under which they exploded bombs, setting the building on fire. They had previously assembled the victim's wives and daughters to witness the spectacle.

Even more terrible scenes were enacted at Kilkish, Pisaltza and Razrodog, women being burned to death.

Father Michel asserts that among the treasure commandeered for these atrocities were business and professional men and students from Sofia.

Roumania to Join Alliance.

London.—The Post's Bucharest correspondent, reporting that the mobilization of the Roumanian army will be completed today and that a few days more will be required to get the army in motion on the frontier, intimates that Roumania intends to join in order to prevent Bulgaria from crushing Servia and Greece, and that the most intense enthusiasm for the struggle is apparent among the Roumanian people.

DEMOCRATS FOOL OPPONENTS

Time Afforded Democrats to Look Over Criticism and Check Over Figures.

Washington, July 10.—Senator Simmons, chairman of the finance committee, turned a trick on Republican leaders today when he laid on their desks long analysis of the Democratic tariff bill which had been prepared under the direction of Senator Smoot, showing that the Republicans claim were serious defects.

Senator Smoot had delayed for a month the introduction of the analysis despite Senator Simmons' insistance that it be presented by the first day of the caucus, when the Republicans asserted that the Democrats were through with the bill. Senator Smoot consented to send the document in for printing. But the Democrats have not yet printed their bill and have a day or two to make corrections and laugh at their opponents' approach to debate will not begin until next week.

President Wilson Feeling Better.

Cornish, N. H., July 10.—President Wilson improved in health in the last three days and like his senator home so well that he has practically decided to remain here at least until Sunday. Should affairs in Washington, however, become pressing, he will start back immediately to the capital. The satisfactory progress of the tariff bill, especially the passage of the caucus resolution by the caucus, has relieved the president of anxiety for the measure removed the last of anxiety the president had.

Endeavor Hosts in Session.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 10.—The city is entertaining over 20,000 people who are here for the International Christian Endeavor convention, which opened today and will close on Sunday. Monday. When the committee began casting about for a hall to accommodate the delegates to the convention it was built one found in the city having a sufficient seating capacity, so Piesta park, a private park covering a city square, with a stage, has been roofed over with canvas. On the program are 100 speakers.

Tpachers Flee to Lake Shore.

Salt Lake City, July 10.—Thousands of teachers attending the National Educational Association convention escaped the heat by spending the afternoon at Great Salt lake. While there they listened to an address by former Governor Edward H. Hoch of Kansas.

It has become known that the committee on membership of the National Council of Education will submit, the name of Robert J. Aley, president of the University of Maine, to the business session for president of the organization.

BIG FETE IN ERIE BEGINS

CELEBRATION OF COMMODORE PERRY'S VICTORY IN 1812.

Thousands Attend Ceremonies Which Will Continue Throughout the Week

Erie, Pa., July 7.—The centennial celebration of Perry's Victory at the battle of Lake Erie, which began yesterday with a "Peace Sunday," will continue every afternoon and evening throughout the week. An elaborate program has been arranged for the entertainment of the thousands of visitors already here.

The celebration in this city is but one of the many events arranged to commemorate the great naval battle of the War of 1812. The list of celebrations will probably close with the dedication of the Perry memorial and nearing completion on South Bass island, near the mouth of Lake Erie.

The old DuPont powder wagon which was used for the transportation of ammunition in the War of 1812, made an overland trip from the Du Pont works in Wilmington, Del., and arrived in Erie this afternoon, when a reception in its honor took place. This evening a leading citizen impersonating Commodore Perry will sail into the harbor on Perry's flagship, the Niagara, which has been raised from the bottom of Misery Bay. The Niagara will be moored at the public wharf and will be open to visitors during the remainder of the week. Mayor Berry of Erie will deliver an address of welcome to the "Commodore" at Perry Square and present to him the keys of the city.

ARREST SYLVIA PANKHURST

Pallen With Others to Appear in Police Court When Summoned.

London, July 9.—Miss Sylvia Pankhurst was arrested, together with several other suffragettes, at a meeting at Bromley.

A warrant had been issued for her arrest because she failed to appear at the Bow street police court last Saturday to answer a summons charging her with inciting a crowd to raid the residences of the members of the Epping street on June 29.

Miss Nelle Pearson, the American suffragette, who was released from Holloway Jail April after having been had aroused an international agitation, was among those arrested, according to the report.

KILL WOMEN AND CHILDREN

Tibetans Repulse the Chinese, but Make Sacrifice When Danger is Imminent.

Chengtu, Province of Szechuan, China, July 8.—A large band of Chinese recently surrounded the Tibetan town of Batang Chen. The Tibetans, before going into battle, killed their women and children lest they should be captured by the Chinese. The Chinese, however, ran short of ammunition and the Tibetans repulsed them in the fighting. Several hundred Chinese were drowned while fording the river.

Mrs. Clara V. Weaver Dead.

Ida Moines, Iowa, July 9.—Mrs. Clara V. Weaver, widow of the late Judge James B. Weaver, the soldier and publicist, who was three times a candidate for president and twice candidate for president on the Populist ticket, died at the home of her daughter.

Attempt to Burn Pier.

Southport, Eng., July 9.—Militant suffragettes attempted to burn the recreation pier, a mile long, at this watering place.

Offer Six Women for Orozco.

Mexico City, July 8.—The Madero government is willing to exchange six women for Pascual Orozco, Sr., who has been in the hands of Emiliano Zapata's forces for several months. These women are Zapata's mother, his wife, his sister and his three sisters-in-law. The woman were taken prisoners at Villa Ayala, in the state of Morelos, Zapata's old home. They were brought here and lodged in the barracks. They are authority for the statement that Orozco has not been executed, as several times reported.

76,683 TRAINMEN FAVOR A STRIKE

CONFERENCE OF UNION HEADS FROM ALL ROADS NEXT SATURDAY.

ERIE MEN QUIT CONFERENCE

This Takes to Practically Invite a Strike—Result of Findings to Be Reported to Rail Heads On Monday.

New York, July 9.—Ninety-four per cent of the members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and of the Order of Railway Conductors out of 76,683 participating in a strike vote in the wage dispute with the eastern railroads, are in favor of a strike. These figures were announced at a joint meeting of union representatives and a committee of railroad managers.

Erie Withdraws.

When the conference convened, the Erie railroad announced that it had withdrawn from the proceedings on the ground that it would be unable to meet any advance which might result. This practically invites a strike.

After the unions had submitted the result of the strike vote and referendum on the demands the conference adjourned. President A. B. Garretson for the conductors and W. G. Lee for the trainmen then announced that a conference of union leaders from all the roads involved would be held here on Saturday at which the strike vote would be considered and course of action adopted. The result will be reported to the railroads on Monday.

Result of Withdrawal.

With reference to the Erie, Mr. Lee said that that road's withdrawal would not necessarily mean that a strike would be forced against it.

"We are dealing with all the roads as a unit," he said, "and if the Erie action precipitated a strike it would be against the Erie alone, but against all the roads."

CANOE CAPSIZES; FIVE DROWN

Young Men, Who Left Niagara Falls, Ont., July 2, Were Headed for Lake Erie.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 9.—Five young men, members of prominent families of Niagara Falls and La Salle, N. Y., were drowned in Lake Erie when a canoe capsized overturned the canoes.

The dead are: Reginald McEwan, Albert Kayser, Thomas Brophy, Edward Reichert of Niagara Falls and Carl D. Goodrich of La Salle. They started in the boys 17 to 22 years.

The party, consisting 10 young men in a canoe, left Niagara Falls, Ont., on July 2, following the Welland river and Welland canal to Lake Erie.

Spelmer Puts Out Fire.

Chicago, July 8.—Six armored bantenders with asbtos bottles put out a fire that threatened to destroy a street-car in the loop district, while a big crowd cheered.

Police Chief of Havana Shot.

Havana, July 8.—Colonel Armando Rio, chief of the national police, was shot and mortally wounded during a pistol fight in the Prado. General Pedro Betancourt, governor of Havana province, Senator Vidal Morales and Representative Arias were involved in the fatality, which was the outcome of a raid made by General Riva Saturday night on the Aghurt club. Prisoner Admits Eight Murders.

Los Angeles, July 8.—Arrested on the charge of having passed a bad check at a sanitarium, Simon P. Heifenstine, who is in jail here, startled officials of the sheriff's office with a purported confession in which he detailed six series of eight murders in Ohio, three involving the slaying of Pearl Bryan, for whose death the convicted Scheppel, Jackson and Walling, were executed. Some of the circumstances of the crimes as related by Heifenstine do not coincide with known facts.

SENATE MAJORITY PLEDGED

DEMOCRATS HAVE 49 VOTES FOR TARIFF BILL

One More Than Enough With Ballot of Vice President to Fall Back On.

Washington, July 9.—Forty-seven Democratic senators stood up in the Democratic caucus here to-day and declared their intention to vote for the Underwood-Simmons tariff revision bill as finally approved by the caucus a few minutes previously.

Two senators, Randsell and Thornton of Louisiana, stated they would not make public statements because of the proposal to place sugar on the free list in 1916.

Senators Hitchcock of Nebraska and Culberson of Texas were absent, but both are known to be in favor of the bill.

This gives the Democrats 49 votes for the bill or a slender majority of one, with the vote of the vice president to fall back on in an emergency.

An absolute binding resolution was not adopted, the poll by individuals being substituted—and that poll was not only on the ground of personal promises and was not made binding.

A resolution was adopted, however, declaring the Underwood-Simmons bill "only measure and urging its individual support without amendment unless such should be submitted by the committee. Senator Newlands of Nevada cast the only vote against this resolution, but Senators Shafroth of Colorado, Randsell and Thornton did not vote.

The resolution was as follows:

"Resolved, That the tariff bill agreed to by this conference, in its amended form, is declared to be a fair measure and we urge its unbridled support as a duty by Democratic senators without amendment. Provided, however, that the conference of the finance committee may, after reference or otherwise, propose amendments to the bill."

Senator Kern, chairman of the caucus, Mr. Simmons of the finance committee, who have fought for the measure, and other administration leaders, expressed satisfaction over the outcome and declared that enough votes were personally pledged to assure the passage of the measure with free wool and free sugar within.

"We are satisfied with this showing," Senator Simmons said.

"The Democrats are on record in support of the bill. Forty-seven are than answered "aye" on the motion to support the bill and two others declared in favor of the measure and support it and said they did not know of anything that would cause them to vote against the party."

LAUTERBACH SAYS HE WAS A VICTIM

"VICARIOUS SACRIFICE" IN LOBBYING FOR WALL STREET, HE ALLEGES.

CHARGE MISREPRESENTATION

Denies That He Tried to "Shake Down" the Big Interests—Report of Investigation.

Washington, July 9.—The strange tale of Wall Street operations, begun before the senate's lobby committee last week, by David Lamar, had another chapter added when Edward Lauterbach, Lamar's associate in many undertakings, pleaded that he had been the innocent victim and "vicarious sacrifice" in negotiations that have involved the Morgan firm, the steel interests, New York attorneys, members of congress and men of lesser prominence.

Lauterbach had already testified before the committee. But since his former appearance Lamar had told his unexpected story, involving himself and Lauterbach in the profitularies of the steel trust investigation and also involving their effort to restore Lauterbach to the good graces of the Morgan firm; and Lewis Cass Ledyard had added his sworn statement that Lauterbach had represented himself as the emissary of Speaker Clark, Senator Stone and Democratic leaders in an effort to "effect a reconciliation" with the Morgan-Steel interests and shut off investigation or opposition in congress.

All Day on Stand.

Lauterbach, long prominent in legal circles in New York, sat all day under a scathing fire of questions from senators on the lobby committee. He denied that throughout the negotiations between Lamar and himself and between himself and members or representatives of the Morgan firm, he had been the innocent victim of those who had confided in him or made statements to him.

The witness admitted his long association with Lamar and said it had been "a most intimate connection and a profitable" one for him.

Talking over with Lamar the steel trust situation and of seeing the proposed resolution and admitted urging Lamar to withhold it until he could see J. P. Morgan and others and urge them to authorize him to prevent its introduction.

Never Thought of Reward.

Throughout all the long proceeding he declared there was no thought of reward on his part. He raised himself in the witness chair and shouted with emphasis and emphasis, when Senator Reed suggested there had been effort "to shake down" the Morgan and steel trust interests, that the insinuation is an insult and an outrage," he exclaimed.

Lauterbach admitted he had told Lamar he had been the author of Speaker Clark, transmitted through Senator Stone, to make "certain promises for peace" to the Morgan interests, but said this authority came from Lamar. He declared he had never seen Clark or Stone, but had been assured by Lamar that the latter knew Senator Stone and that he had made the arrangements for the Lauterbach-Ledyard interview with the approval of Stone and the senator.

"My only hope was for restoration to the good graces of the people who apparently had gotten together to destroy me," he said.

Lauterbach said he did not know what Lamar's motives were in taking up the proposed reconciliation with the steel corporation. He thought Lamar was interested in everything and free wool was among the list.

"We are satisfied with this showing," Senator Simmons said.

"The Democrats are on record in support of the bill. Forty-seven are than answered "aye" on the motion to support the bill and two others declared in favor of the measure and support it and said they did not know of anything that would cause them to vote against the party."

CURIOUS DEEP SEA FISHES

Captured in Depths of One to Two Thousand Fathoms in Atlantic Ocean.

New York.—These fish were captured in depths of one to two thousand fathoms in the Atlantic, and brought to the surface by means of a brawl. To preserve the extraordinary shapes of these strange dwellers of the ocean floor, a spray of serums quickly made casts of their bodies and coated the colors. The majority of those living at great depths were set black.

Their luminous organs, which light up the dark regions which they inhabit, are marvelous. These fish plow through the dark waters like dancing torches. Some have elongated snouts, on the tips of which are luminous organs emitting great volumes of light. Others have rows of luminous cells on top and below their bodies, with reflectors and lenses which serve the function of projecting light in definite directions.

These light-emitting organs are thought to be of vital importance to the life of the animal for the purpose of illuminating the surrounding water to avoid foes, to recognize their own kind or to capture prey.

At 1,500 fathoms animal life is quite abundant. The greatest depths found by sounding are those of nearly 5,269 fathoms, or 31,614 feet—nearly six miles. This is a point in the Pacific ocean to the east of Guam, about 100 miles or so. But a surveying ship of the German navy has recently discovered a deeper spot in the same sea, near the Philippines, about 40 miles off the north coast of Mindanao.

VANISHES; MILK NEAR KILLS

Zenophon Hebert Does a Sudden Disappearance Act in Street of Radiant.

Chicago.—Zenophon Hebert drove slowly along St. Lawrence avenue here. Zenophon is driver of a milk wagon," he explained afterward. Suddenly the street opened beneath the wagon's front and there was a concussion disappeared from sight. People who were on the street at the time stared aghast.

"Now you see it and now you don't" from Lamar. "Reminds me of a phantom milk wagon, or what?"

Then they heard a faint cry—the cry of a man who seemed to be drowning. It was the voice of Zenophon and he was drowning—drowning in the milk and cream that had been intrusted to his care. Passers-by came running to the street and found that a large section of the pavement had caved in. In the pit thus created 20 feet down lay the milk wagon. The horse was sitting on top of it, keeping balmlessly and kicking the wagon and several hundredweight of bottled milk into its small bits. Of. Zenophon nothing could be seen.

Then came a glass crash of more than usual violence and from the upper end of the chasm Zenophon, second the surprised face of the driver, dripping with milk and from one of his brows. He climbed steadily and courageously until the hands of the bystanders clasped his and he was dragged to the edge of the pit.

The police and fire department were called in and in an hour or so the wagon and horse had been taken to the surface. The milk was all spilled, but Zenophon refused to cry over it.

"It's all in the day's work," he said, "but it came a trifle sudden. Whose will be the look milk baths for the rheumatism?"

JAPS HONOR A MISSIONARY

Emperor of Japan Confers Third Order of Rising Sun on Rev. Dr. Daniel Crosby Greene.

Boston.—The American board of commissioners of foreign missions has received word that 'the emperor of Japan has conferred on Rev. Dr. Daniel Crosby Greene of Tokyo, the board's senior missionary in the empire, the decoration of the Third Order of the Rising Sun, the highest order conferred on civilians under the Japan. The official notice accompanying the decoration mentions Dr. Greene's valuable services in promoting International relations between Japan and America and in introducing a knowledge of Japan to other countries while he has been engaged in the propagation of Christianity.

ROUND BUILDING IS OPPOSED

New York Judges Declare the Plans for Fresh Courthouse Too Radical.

New York.—It is doubtful if New York is to have a great round courthouse after all. By unanimous vote the justices of the supreme court in this district have disapproved of the plan submitted by Guy Lowell, the architect selected by the courthouse board, declaring that a round building of the immense size proposed would be an experiment too radical for the city to make.

State News of General Interest

EXTRA SESSION IS TO BE PROTESTED

CHAIRMAN J. M. HACKNEY WILL MOVE ACTION AT EARLY MEETING.

HAS COMMITTEE MAJORITY

Rumored That Sufficient Number of the Seven Will Support Chairman—Opposition Commites Meets Expert.

St. Paul.—Senator J. M. Hackney of St. Paul, chairman of the state senate special committee on public utilities, announces that he will favor action by the committee, waiting on Governor A. O. Eberhart and asking him not to call an extra session, which he has announced to meet in October. The senate committee will meet at the state capitol, and Senator Hackney will make the proposition. It is said that a majority of the seven members is ready to support the proposition. The committee was appointed to investigate the subject and report a public utilities bill at the next session of the legislature.

Sees No Need of It.

"I don't see any need for 'he extra session, and do not feel any necessity for one from the people of the state," said Senator Hackney. "I for one shall be fond to recommend to the governor that he let the matter rest until the next regular session. This will be my position at the coming meeting of the committee. I would tell the governor that if the committee does its full duty it will have all the time between now and the next regular session to studydo the question and prepare a bill. I do not know whether our recommendation will have any influence with the governor, but that is the position I take. The governor says that we can get a better bill at an extra session, but I do not see the point at all. We might as well apply that rule for all important legislation, and call a special session for every bill of consequence. I do not believe that any emergency exists that calls for the expense of an extra session. As for hearings, I think that the committee shall give them at any time to any one who wish to be heard."

Wants Efficency Expert.

George G. Sikes, former Minneapolis newspaper man, now secretary of the Bureau of Public Efficency of Chicago, was in Minneapolis Monday and conferred with members of the public utilities committee appointed to fight against state control of public utilities. The committee met Mr. Sikes at luncheon at the West hotel, and he told them of the recent control of the Illinois legislature.

"Sentiment in the city of Chicago is very strong against the bill passed in our state," said Mr. Sike. "We had fully expected Governor Dunne to veto the bill, but some of his advisers seemed overcome by the logic of the appointments to be made on the commission, at $10,000 a year, and he signed it."

Three Drown In Hennepin.

Minneapolis.—Three men died in the waters of Hennepin canal, Sunday. They were: John S. French, 25 years old, recently of Chicago; Carl Anderson, 22 years old, employed at Minnehaha street, St. Paul; Edward Rabe, 20 years old, of Chicago. French had arrived in Minneapolis Saturday to take a position as a concessionary clerk for Fogg Brothers, commission contractors for the Great Northern railroad.

Red Lake Falls Pioneer Drowns.

Red Lake Falls.—Paul Mathews, an old resident, was drowned in Red Lake river here, when he broke the ice dam. He left home early to fish. Late in the day he was missed and a search was made. His coat and hat were found on the apron of the dam and his rod and line in the water. There were indications on the apron of the dam that he had slipped and fell in.

Vincent Speaks at Duluth.

Duluth.—Duluth celebrated the Fourth in a very quiet manner. No works were prohibited by the city ordinance, except under municipal supervision. Three public exhibitions of fire works were given by the Lark of the Lake in connection with Duluth's summer carnivals, by the Country club and by a Sunday school picnic organization.

Baby Saved; Man Drowns.

St. Paul, July 5.—William Rondau lost his life after rescuing the two-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Rudheimer and attempting to save the parents from drowning in Bevage Lake, about ten miles southwest of here. Mr. Rudheimer is superintendent of paving in St. Paul. While the parents were trying to save the life of child fell into the water. Father and mother jumped in to save the baby. Rondau waded in and rescued the child. Then he returned for the parents, but sank.

Will Pay Tribute to Lawyer.

Pipestone.—Memorial exercises for the late Frank L. James, a leading attorney of this city for many years, will be held by the local bar association in district court here with Judge L. S. Nelsen presiding, July 24.

Staples Crops Assured.

Staples—All the territory surrounding this city seems insured a good crop. The past month has been one of intermittent showers and sunshine and is considered the best growing weather known.

Park Ventures Prosperous.

The Minnehaha refectory did the largest business of any of the park refectories during the month. The report of the board shows that the sum of $2,250.30 was taken in during the month. At Harriet, the business amounted to $8,810. The total money taken in at all the refectories during the month amounted to $20,262.

SAID TO HAVE ROBBED STORE

Detroit Couple and Young Man and His Sweetheart Are Accused.

Detroit.—Fred Lyoch, a young man who was employed in the Buckman & Gordon store for a year or more, is held to appear before the grand jury on a charge of grand larceny. Dear Rice and Mrs. Mrs. L. C. Reed are held as receivers of stolen goods.

The arrests of the alleged gang came to light through a tip given to the authorities by Stephen Collins, a friend of young Lyoch's in the city of Rose Price, who was arrested when about to take a train for the Twin Cities in order to dispose, it is charged, of a quantity of stolen goods which constituted a large part of her baggage.

Sun Spots Cause Alarm.

Minneapolis, July 3.—That condition of the sun's surface is greatly affected during the next four years by the development of spots on the sun is the belief of Dean A. F. Woods of the university agricultural school. A large number of aged people and others of weakened vitality may die or become seriously ill during the development of the sun spots according to Dean Woods. He said that it was the belief of astronomers that the sun spots cause severe electrical disturbances of the atmosphere while sudden changes of the weather reduce the resistances of animals and plants and that disease and serious sickness often ten result.

Second Boy Bandit Dead.

Duluth.—Algot Johnson, the boy bandit who was pardoned recently for the murder of Harry Chesmore, a fruit pulls policeman, died at the home of his mother in Virginia. Operations with his pal, Charles Melodrowskie, Johnson shot and killed the officer after the latter had placed both youths under arrest for holding up the Mc-Kay hotel on Jan. 5, 1911. Melodrowski was sentenced to thirty years and Johnson to fifteen. The former died six months after being taken to the penitentiary. Death of Johnson obtained his release because he was going of consumption.

"J. C. R." Is Operated On.

Rochester.—After carveral postponements, the proposed operation on the brain of "J. C. R.," the "man of mystery" in the state hospital for the insane here has been performed by Dr. E. H. Beckman of the state hospital staff. The surgeon endeavored to remove a pressure from the brain upon the brain and thus restore to "J. C. R." his memory and reveal his identity. It was realized, according to the hospital authorities, that the operation was a difficult one and only slight hopes are expressed that it hoo been a success.

Fire Truck is Wrecked.

Winona.—The auto fire truck responding to an alarm in an alley in the down town section near Broadway collided with a telephone pole. The front of the machine was wrecked. The fireman escaped injury.

Mankato Sociability Run.

Mankato.—In first sociability run of the season will be made by the Mankato Automobile club on Tuesday, July 15, when the Minneapolis Automobile club house next Sunday. Through invitation to the auto clubs of St. Paul, Le Sueur, Belle Plaine, Jordan, Gaston, Jordan, Shakopee, Chaska and Carver valley towns to join in the tour has been extended. It is intended to have a picnic dinner under the trees at Spring Lake park near Henderson. The federal post route will be inspected.

Faribault in Storm's Path.

Faribault.—A damaging storm last week resulted in the destruction of much valuable timber in the western part of the city, the uprooting of trees and the tearing off of roofs. The city electric light plant being put out

Section Foreman Shot.

Two Harbors.—Peter Potsmos, 35 years old, a section foreman, was shot and killed by John Ember, 55 years of age, a section near Higgins, six miles north of this city. Ember was arrested.

STUDENTS SCALE HIGH PEAK.

See Minnesota First Tourists See State From Trempealeau Mountain.

Winona.—The See Minnesota first tourists of the State University gazed upon their state from Trempealeau mountain, the highest point in the Mississippi valley Thursday.

According to Prof. E. M. Lohnerz, the leader of the party, the ascension was the most profitable of the entire series.

Trempealeau peak is located ten miles below Winona on the Wisconsin side of the river. River lore is built around this historic spot, with its peculiar early French or Indian moods, to the earliest days it was the Lookout for the Indians. A flint quarry there, which supplied arrow heads many years ago, a peculiar cell formation similar to that of the Yellow river in Chiles, cool various strata of rock formations, exposed through the many ages, were studied.

HALF MILLION FOR ROADS

Itasca County Preparing to Build Trunk Lines Under the Elwell Act.

Grand Rapids.—At a meeting of the county commissioners it was decided to take the preliminary steps for the expenditure in the neighborhood of $500,000 for roads under the provisions of the Elwell act.

Eight trunk lines are projected, and with connecting lines to be built and taken together will give the county by one of the best road systems in the state.

The east and west highway, known as Duluth-St. Vincent road, will call for the expenditure of $50,000; Deer River-Northome road $40,000; the Mill City-Cohasset road, $30,000; Nashawuk-Carpenter road, $25,000; Grand-Cloquet River road, $50,000; the Fork-Arkwood road, $20,000; Arden Park-Marble road, $20,000; Effie-Bustlecaple road, $10,000.

FIVE-SIXTHS JURY VERDICT

Ten Men at Brainerd Award Damages for Child Killed—First Case in State.

Brainerd.—The first jury to report under the five-sixths law brought in a verdicts in the district court. The ten men awarded Judge J. T. Hale of Deerwood $100 damages because of the condemnation of part of his country estate on Rreo lake for the proposed Cuyuna Northern railway.

Bitter Protest Scores Lynch.

Protests sent to Washington against the appointment of E. J. Lynch as collector of internal revenue for Minnesota, by Daniel W. Lawler of St. Paul and others, have been followed with a letter to President Taft from Mr. Lawler, urging that the appointment of Mr. Lynch be withdrawn. He was sent to the senate June 18, but has not been confirmed yet though Mr. Lynch was requested to assume the office July 1, at the beginning of the fiscal year. Mr. Lawler, who is former mayor of St. Paul and ran for governor against Adolph O. Eberhart, a bitter enemy of Fred B. Lynch, democratic national committeeman, has dictated the protest of his brother to the collectorship.

150 Mutes in Convention.

Duluth.—A convention of silence, the twelfth annual meeting of the Minnesota Association of the Deaf, was held here last week. The 150 delegates were given the keys to the city. Eloquence of the fingers was shown to surpass the eloquence of the voice, when officers of the association, in making their addresses, taxed the skill of the interpreters who translated the replies verbally for the benefit of many visitors. The rest of the meetings were in complete silence. Deaf mutes in the state of Minnesota, members of this association, hold in their own right more than $2,000,000 worth of property and are active in between forty and fifty lines of trade.

SPEECH BY WILSON

PRESIDENT ADDRESSES GREAT THRONG ON THE GETTYSBURG BATTLEFIELD.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO VETERANS

Nation Does Not Stand Still, He Says, and Orders of the Day Are the People Are Less on Statute Books.

Gettysburg, Pa., July 4.—President Wilson's address today was the chief feature of National day in the celebration of the semi-centennial of the Battle of Gettysburg. It was heard by a vast crowd of old soldiers and others and was warmly applauded.

The president's address follows:

"Fellow citizens and fellows: I need not tell you what the battle of Gettysburg meant. These gallant men in blue and gray sit all about us here. Many of them met here upon this ground in grim and deadly conflict. Upon these famous fields and hillsides their comrades sleep in honor. In their presence it was an impertinence to discourse upon how the battle went, how it ended, what it signified. But 50 years have made it since then and I crave the privilege of speaking to you for a few minutes of what those 50 years have meant.

What have they meant? They have meant peace and union and the opportunity and the maturity and might of a great nation. How wholesome and healing the peace has been we have seen, how one another again sat brothers and countrymen in mutual confidence and mutual friends rather, our battles long ago in the great forgotten—except that we shall not forget the splendor, valor, the manly devotion of the men then gathered in these fields and the unsparing hands and smiling into each other's faces and remember that we have become and how dear to all of us, how wholesome and how benign and majestic, as state after state was added to this great family of free men! And how complete the union now at maturity, the might of the great nation we love and serve! How intimate the bond, how full of large and confident promise that a little will be left to do—but that will crown its strength with glorious justice and a happy welfare that will touch all the weary world with refreshment! We are debtors to those 50 crowded years, that have made us debts to a mighty heritage.

Nation Not Finished.

But do we deem the nation complete and finished? These venerable men, wrestling with the fortunes of field here set on a great example of courage and utter sacrifice. They were willing to die that the nation might live. But their task is done. Their day is over and night is coming. They look to us to perfect what they established. Their work is handed on to us, to be done in another way but not in another spirit. Our day is not over; it is upon us at this hour.

Have efforts paused? Does the present generation of the United States have rwough! since those days of battle finished, rounded out, and completed? Has it a great task great with every force that has ever been in its blood or mind finished? And it is secure. There is no one within the borders who has a larger power among the nations of the earth, to make it afraid. But has it yet opened itself to the full variety of standards set up it its birth, when it made that free? Has it yet grasped in the moral judgment of mankind to which nation and government had now at last been established? It was to serve men, not masters? It is secure in every right of mankind, a perfection that its life is right, adjusted to the standards of justice and of righteousness and humanity. The days of sacrifice and cleansing are not closed. Rather, they have begun to do that were done in the heroic days of war. Standards must be seen clearly, requisite more vision, more calm balance of judgment, a more candid searching of the hearts for springs of right.

Tribute to Their Valor.

Look around you upon the field of Gettysburg! Picture the array, the fierce lines of battle, the guns, the cannon hurled against columns, battery following battery! Here at the Devil's Den, Greeter no mes shall see in war; and self-sacrifice, and loss to the utter most; the high recklessness of gallant devotion which does not count the cost. We are made by these things, epic things to know what it costs to make a nation great, to make a great force of multitudes of unknown men bound to a great stature in the view of all nations of the world. Here and it by their manly willingness to serve, in armies fighting, not for glory, but for the ranks of free men you will see, as it passes, a nation unfettered and unafraid and the led, and may know, if you will, how little except in form its life differs from the life of those who are in active in days of war.

May we not see now and be at ease? Are the forces that fight for the nation dispersed, disbanded, gone to their homes forgetful of the common cause? Are our forces disorganized, without constituted leaders and the might of men coordinated united by causes we contend, not with armies, but with principalities and powers and wickedness in high places. Are we content to lie still? Does our unlikeness sympathy, our peace contentment, our vicor right action, our materiality idealism and a certain confidence in choosing what we shall do? War fitted us for action, and action never ceases.

Our Duties the Orders of the Day.

I here been chosen the leader of the Nation. I cannot justify the choice by any qualities of my own, but as it has come about, and here I stand, Whom do I command? This shoutly hosts who fought upon these battlefields long ago and are gone? These gallant gentlemen stricken in years whose fighting days are over, their work done? What are the orders for them, who rallies them? I here in my mind another host, when those set free of civil strife in order that they might work out in days of peace and settled order the life of a great nation. That host is the people themselves, in great and the days without close or difference of kind or race or origin; and undivided in interest, if we have but the vision to guide and direct them and order their lives aright in the way we do. Our counsels and their relations of antistenot. The orders of the day are the laws upon our statute books. What we strive for is their freedom, their right to lift themselves from day to day and from age to age more worthily with the years. There are many incentives of good worth toward working with in animate objects, yet the real, live things always arouse more of interest.

The work is so light as to be easily within the ability of the average child. Perhaps children is one of the freshest duties assigned to the little one. With growth comes the added pleasure of fashioning the coops—it may be in the rudest form by means of discarded boxes, or it may in the evolving of a triumphant victory through the department in manual training. In almost every other form of live stock raising there are some duties too heavy for the child to perform. Even bee-keeping shows these features at times. Gardeing and fruit culture, too, have their drawbacks which the help of an adult is essential; but with the poultry business the children are fairly independent.

It harmonizes nicely with school work, the most of the chores being required night and morning; and if at certain seasons during the school year supervision through the day is necessary, some older member of the family is usually within call. Even then—the work being arranged for as a definite business, with regular hours or eggs given in payment and at the trading prices.

It gives the needed out-door exercise, and there is no reason why a child of the public school age cannot exclusively for baseball should not be diverted in a more profitable occupation. The bustle in getting the flock ready for the day adds to the relish of the child's breakfast.

It fosters a spirit of kindness to the helpless and dependent. It grows hope to attain any measure of success and the spirit of gentleness is mastered in connection with his charges.

It fosters a love for nature study, and the lessons on this topic which the public school affords have practical applications which render them more real and impressive. Thus the evolution of bird life to insect life is emphasized in the chick's liting for bugs and worms and its adroitness in securing them. And as the child notes these facts it will more readily understand the mission of the birds in keeping at bay the hordes of insect pests.

The original investment may be almost nothing, and it is possible to keep it within moderate limits, teaching the child economy while at the same time encouraging him in the first. Give enough to make the venture attractive, as the eggs from a setting hens cost more than the chicks, the cleanliness of everything from drinking cup to roost and plentiful.

Patience is in the preparation of the eggs for market is another wholesome lesson in child development. The eggs which are spotless and presentable clean wrappings are those which participate in the best sales. They are packed that there is no danger of breakage, and the profits on the entire lot are assured. Show how the glossy finish given by nature is impaired when the damp cloth must be used, injuring the keeping qualities as well as the appearance, and urge the care with which this trouble can be obviated. Soon the habit will be one of clean straw.

Responsibility is an element which never can be lost sight of. Life, even though only that of a chick, is not to be trifled with. The plant may be allowed to run down through neglect, and yet, there is only the loss of the plant. But with animal life there is pain and suffering as a result of neglect. And the child who takes up this branch of industry should be fully impressed with the attendant responsibilities.

Discipline is gained through the enforced regularity of duties. There is no excuse without it. Poultry grows, but unless the attention regularly or trouble will follow. And the habits

Children instinctively delight in fowls. Their chicken fare an irresistible charm for the mere baby; and the natural taste guided with judgment will develop with the years. There are many incentives of good worth toward working with inanimate objects, yet the real, live things always arouse more of interest.

viduals as an within reach should be developed to the best possible standard. And this pride in securing the best should constantly exist in something better. Birds for exhibition purposes may or may not be desirable. They are selected for birds worthy of prizes is that which can be obtained.

Encourage the idea of improving in fashion and form. The goal which is in plain sight is the one which inspires to greatest effort. Urge the selection of the favorite breed and then become familiar with the standard of perfection, and always growing toward it, calling out the individuality which do not conform to the requirements of the breed.

Young people have more time for reading than older ones, and are not so firmly bound by the common customs of the day. Encourage a study of improved methods, to learn from the experience of others. The poultry department of the standard farm papers may be a textbook for them. Progressiveness is a characteristic of youth rather than age. Start them on the way of reading along the line of their work, and they will soon surpass you with the extent of their researches.

Expect the work to be conducted on business principles. Criticise it where it necessary. If there are losses, let them come out of the pockets of the youthful proprietors; but if there are gains, do not be tempted to defraud them of their rights. The calf which belonged to Johnny when it was being raised and to "Pa" when ready for the butcher has sickened many a heart of the farm. On the other hand, Juvanile work in the poultry yard accompanied by careful advice and honest treatment will do much toward rendering suburban life alluring.

Rotation Means Success.

Some of the most successful stockmen have a system of crop rotation that enables them to have one meadow crop, besides the profit from the animals. The increased fertility brought onto the farm through the use of concentrated feedstuffs more than offsets the amount of fertility removed by the sale of animal products. Another factor is that the same help required to properly conduct a stock farm can find time outside of the routine stock work to care for and harvest a market crop. Such a high-value crop as potatoes or sugar beets is a profitable stock. It works out especially well on the dairy farm where there is considerable nothing to be done.

Poults Are Delicate.

Young turkeys are of a delicate nature until they are full feathered and have thrown out the red on their heads, which usually occurs at about three months of age. After that they are hardy and may be allowed unlimited range at all times.

WHO WON GETTYSBURG?

Controversies over the questions, Who started the Battle of Gettysburg? Who ended it? Who won it? Who lost it? will probably never be settled. As to the starting of it, that is hopeless. Here are two hundred thousand men converging on a single point bent on annihilating one another. As they drew nearer fights were inevitable. It began with cavalry brushes, then infantry engagements and finally the grand crash when the chief generals had arrived and set the stage for the tragedy of blood. In such circumstances it is impossible to say who fired the first shot.

It is just as impossible to say who fired the last shot. Was it turned loose on Pickett's brigade at the climax of their futil charge, or shall we count the shots exchanged after Lee began his retreat to the Potomac as part of the battle? Chronology is just as uncertain here.

Who won the battle? The contentions of corps commanders, the claims of regimental, of batteries, are all confusing, not because they are false, but because they are all true claims. The First Minnesota saved the day by stopping Longstreet for a few minutes. McGilvery's Battery saved the third day by repulsing Pickett's charge. The claims of all may be admitted in full, and then it will not be known who won Gettysburg.

There is just as much reason to give the credit to Abraham Lincoln as to any man on the field. George H. Sickles says that Lincoln told him and when he saw that a battle on Northern soil was inevitable, and thought what would be the consequences of Meade's defeat, he prayed for victory. And really it seems as though his prayer was answered. The result at Gettysburg looks as much like an interposition of Providence as the result of man's judgment and efforts.

The two armies were as nearly matched as possible. A dozen battles might have been predicted. A dozen battle it was, in the sense that Lee's army was neither driven from the field, captured nor scattered. It was beaten and withdrew in good order. But the news of the defeat of Gettysburg was as clear as though great cataclysms had befallen Lee. It prevented recognition of the confederacy by England and France. That new Nation, which the English said Jefferson Davis had created, died in its infancy at Gettysburg. Lee went back to Virginia to comb its lean older again for supplies, to fight a local war and to be finally extirpated by Grant.

The Union never was in peril after Gettysburg. The specter of two hostile Governments, one slave and one free, confronting each other along the Ohio river was laid forever. Such a wonderful result it is not irreverent to credit to the direct intervention of Divine Providence.—Minneapolis Journal.

The peculiar thing about vacation is that a fellow needs the vacation that he may rest and after the vacation more than ever he needs the rest.

The publishers of the St. Hilaire Spectator have improved the paper by putting the "patent insides" where they belong and printing home news on the front page.

The printing of the prayer book containing the prayers delivered by "the blind chaplain" will not be effective unless it is read by the assembled legislators acquire the habit of reading the Bible book.

THE COMMON EXPERIENCE.

A Man Needs a Vacation and That He Needs to Rest.

The publisher of the Gazette, after enjoying the strenuous life of a man on a vacation, has just returned to the busy desk once more. During the three weeks of his absence L. E. Baker, the foreman, has performed the difficult task of editing the paper and at the same time keeping a watchful eye on the work in the mechanical department. He as well as the "old man" is about "all in" and the publication of this issue of the Gazette has been a little less enjoyable than if there were one whole man on the job. However, prompt recovery is anticipated.

CO-ADJUTORS' REMARKS.

Over in North Dakota they have passed a law requiring that advertisers should tell the truth about their goods in newspapers. Such a law has not become a necessity in Minnesota because Minnesota merchants always tell the truth. The thought has struck us why North Dakota did not pass a law prohibiting fraudulent advertising from taking effect in that state. That would be some kind of a law that might be copied by other states. You can pick up a monologue any day and spear a red hot lie.—Norman County Banner.

Over in Duluth they propose not only to recall the commissioner recently elected under the commission form of government, but will also seek to recall ordinances passed by the commission. They expect to do this by a referendum vote, and the Duluth newspapers, while are all supporting the commissioners, declares that the opponents of the ordinances consider it very likely to win. From all of which we gather that the much vaunted commission form of government is after all a rather expensive and trouble breeding luxury.—Brainard Tribune.

The tobacco trust and the pore food department of North Dakota are now waging war on each other, the efforts of the trust to evade the North Dakota anti-cigarette law being impossible. North Dakota is the first state in the union to bar the cigarette and the pure food commissioner Ladd making a successful fight on the product on the plea that it is poisonous. This law clothed fourteen years ago by stopping Longstreet for a few minutes. McGilvery's Battery saved the third day by repulsing Pickett's charge. The claims of all may be admitted in full, and then it will not be known who won Gettysburg.

There is just as much reason to give the credit to Abraham Lincoln as to any man on the field. George H. Sickles says that Lincoln told him and when he saw that a battle on Northern soil was inevitable, and thought what would be the consequences of Meade's defeat, he prayed for victory. And really it seems as though his prayer was answered. The result at Gettysburg looks as much like an interposition of Providence as the result of man's judgment and efforts.

Newspaper advertising tends to lower the cost of living, according to the concensus of opinion voiced by speakers at the luncheon given by the Hawkeye Fellowship Club in Chicago. If it were not for advertising the manufacturer could not market his product except in a few localities, as it was asserted. The relation of newspaper advertising to the cost of living was summerized by the speakers as follows: It decreases the living expenses. It increases the volume of sales. In increasing sales to the customer, lower prices. Advertising causes the sell people who can buy cheapest. Bargains would go begging were it not for advertising. Advertising reduces the percentage of unsold merchandise.—Larkin Reporter.

The Northfield News, one of the best patronized country weeklies in the state, after a year's careful and systematic accounting has found that its advertising patronage has been carried at a loss, and has decided thereto. (See Section 938 R. L.)

This Cow Appears Healthy, but Is Diseased.

The cow shown in this picture is apparently healthy. She does not cough, her appetite is good and her general condition is excellent for a milch cow that has recently calved. At the time her picture was taken it was known that she had been affected with tuberculosis at least four and one-half years and that she had been passing tuberculosis germs from her body for a long time. The calf by her side is the fourth she has produced in the last four years. Small quantities of her dung caused tuberculosis in guinea pigs when it was placed under their skin. The mixed dung of this cow and another caused tuberculosis in hogs that were permitted to eat it.

Sixty thousand copies of Extension Bulletin 32, on "Tuberculosis of Cattle," have just been printed for general distribution. A portion of this bulletin is a reprint with slight rearrangement of Farmers' Bulletin 473 of the United States Department of Agriculture, prepared by the International Commission on the Control of Bovine Tuberculosis. This was a plain, nontechnical statement of the nature and symptoms of tuberculosis, with a brief explanation of the tuberculin test. It has been especially adopted fo Minnesota conditions by the addition of a statement of the law and regulation governing such matters in this state.

Dr. M. H. Reynolds, University Farm, St. Paul, was secretary of the commission which prepared the original bulletin. He has added some interesting statements showing the relation of the tuberculous cow to human health.

Not every split log drag is doing the good work that its inventor got of it. Too many of the effective qualities of the drag are lost by applying it at the wrong time. The right time is when the soil of the roads is about the consistency of plaster. The wrong time is any other time. The theory of the drag is exactly that of the plasterer. Applied to mushy mud, it smoothes off the surface amazingly, and the good effects remain until after the next rain. If it is not used till the mud is dried and wheels and horses' hoofs have cut up the surface, the drag will not do half as much good as it will if applied earlier. Plaster the roads with it—that is the idea.

Dr. William J. Mayo, the famous surgeon, startled the medical fraternity by issuing the following statement last week: After eighteen years of special investigation of cancer at the stomach we are assured that it is a curable disease. Nearly one-third of all cancers occur in the stomach, so our investigation proves that cancer is a curable disease. Of course cancer of the stomach can not be cured in all cases. Out of a thousand cases operated on from 1894 to Dec. 31 last, 378 resulted in cures, 246 patients were improved as their lives prolonged and 376 were given up as hopeless after exploratory operations. Perhaps all of these cases would have been cured if the disease had been diagnosed in time.

BUCKTOWN.

Quite a heavy rain fell here Monday morning.

A number of young folks enjoyed a pleasant afternoon at Joe Berger on's last Sunday, where the Misses Collins, Emma and Rose Lambert were guests.

Half Million for Roads.

If the plans formed by the county commissioners at their adjourned meeting held Monday in the court house, are carried out, the county will be covered by a network of first class roadways before another summer. By the action taken Monday almost a half million dollars will be spent, $300,000 of the money to be raised by a bond issue. The commissioners voted to call a special election for the authorizing of the bond issue, and although the date was not set it will probably be within a few weeks.

In addition to this sum there is at present in the treasury or due for taxes the sum of $125,000, which will also be used, and this, with the $40,000 in contracts for road work now outstanding will bring the total to $465,000.- A portion of the roads will be built under the new Elwell law and the remainder under the old statute.

It is pleased to apportion the money as follows: East and West highway, Duluth-St. Vincent line, $75,000; Deer River-Northome road, $40,000; 13th City-Bolinas-Big road, $60,000; Nash-wauk-Carpenter road, $35,000; Marcell-Third River road, $30,000; Big Falls-Alwood road, $18,000; Archuhuet-Alwood-Moose Park road, $20,000; Effie-Justin-son road, $10,000.—Itasca County Independent.

LIVE STOCK TRAIN

Farmers Discuss Farm Topics With the Agricultural College Professors.

A special live stock educational train operated by the Minnesota University, College of Agriculture and the Northern Pacific railway recently spent half a day in each of 24 communities. The smaller towns were visited in order that the audiences might be made up of stock raisers.

The first hour in each town was devoted to lectures on dairying, live stock feeding, horses, hogs, poultry, potatoes, silo construction, rotation of crops, and domestic science. A special car was given to talks for boys and girls, during these lectures the live stock was unloaded and the second hour was given to a study of the strong and weak points of the animals. During the remainder of the time local live stock was judged and criticised and prizes awarded for typical bunches men were awarded to the winners. This proved one of the best and most interesting features of the work.

Th live stock carried included good specimens of Percheron and Clydesdale horses, Guernsey, Holstein, Short Horn and Aberdeen Angus cattle, and four breeds each of hogs and sheep. A special car carried exhibits of good tools, and of miniture poultry houses and various labor saving devices for use in poultry raising.—Harvey Bush, Farm ers Cluba, Extension Division, University Farm, St. Paul.

THE MAN IN DOUBT

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

As I traveled a mountain road at West Virginia I came upon a squatter seated on a log in front of his pole cabin, and after we had given each other good day he asked:

"Heard tell the camp meetin' at Cedar Grove, stranger?"

"I hadn't heard there was one there," I replied.

"Yes, and it's a whopper. Powerful lot of prayin' and singin' over thar."

"Aren't you interested in it?"

"I or and I hain't. I sorter went to go, and then I sorter think I hadn't better. That's the way with the old woman too."

"You think there may be trouble there?"

"Oh, no."

"Too busy with your work?"

"No, stranger. The Lawd orter be at that camp meetin', hedn't he?"

"I should say so."

"And he orter gin us a fair deal if the old woman and me went over?"

"Yes."

"But what I'm afraid of is that he won't."

I looked at him and wondered what he meant, and after a minute he went on:

"Sit down and be to home, and I'll tell you a bit of a story. It happened y'ars ago. You see, me and the old woman had both bin havin' chills and fever, shakin' like scared rabbits one day and a-burnin' up the next, and I was almost too weak to lift an ax when a feller named Abe Brockford come to see me in camp. He wasn't doin' any braggin' as long as I was able to be about, but when he heard how poorly I was he squored off in front of the cabin one night and shouted:

"'Hello thar, Inside! Am I makin' a mistake in supposin' this to be the residence of Bill Hope?'

"'Yo' ain't,' says I as I crawls to the door in my weakness.

"'Come out like a man and squar' off at me!' says he.

"I told him I'd been freezin' and burnin' and couldn't fight a rabbit, but that only made him wuss.

"'Bill Hope, if you've got any-more in yo'r heart come out yere and dance around while I pulverize yo'r bones!'

"It hurt me mighty bad to be talked to that way," said the old man, "b-t I was helpless about it. All I could do was to shet the door and fling myself on the bed and cuss and weep. The old woman tried to comfort me, but the feller kept his mouth goin' till I was purty nigh crazy. By and by I says to her:

"'Do yo' reckon that if I prayed to the Lawd fur strength I could whip the weed he unvvored?'

"'That's accordin',' she answers. 'What do yo' want the strength for?'

"'To go out and smash Abe Brockford.'

"'Then yo' won't git it. The Lawd don't mixup in sich rows.'

"'But he might if yo' prayed too.'

"'But I won't do it. When the critter out thar gits tired of talkin' he'll go home.'

"I lay quiet for half an hour, but Abe didn't go, and when the old woman see how bad I was feelin' she says:

"'Bill, I'm willin' to try a sort of experiment. It ain't right to bother the Lawd with our troubles, and prayers and fightin' don't go together, but under the circumstances I'll do what I can.'

"All of a sudden I hegun to feel stronger, and by the time the old woman had finished I told her that I was all right to go out an' drive Abe into the ditch.

"'Better not go,' she says as she looks troubled.

"'Why not?'

"'Bekeze I'm not much about it. I prayed hard 'fust, but I never got the feelin' that yo' are gwine out to whip anybody. Sorter feels to me that you'll git the worst of it.'

"'If you might'ry ourse about my gittin' strong,' mused Bill, "and to this day I can't make it out. Perhaps it was all owin' to my madness. The old woman hung on for me not to go, but I got her calm and rushed out. It was a darkish night, but I saw Abe standin' a few feet away and sailed for him. I was gwine to whip him killed in two minits, but I hadn't counted on startin' things. Pushy, the critter had got tired and gone home, and, sexually, a powerful big b'ar had taken his place. I knowed it as I grabbed his fur, but it was then too late. He jest hunked wif with his right paw and fetched me a swut on the side of the head that put me out of it, and it was daylight befo' I come to and found myself on the bed.

"'What's happened?' I asked of the old woman.

"'Experimentin',' she answers.

"'As how?'

"'Prayin' to the Lawd to hook yo' to wallop Abe Brockford. Abe slipped out and a b'ar slipped in, and as nigh as I kin make out Providence didn't stand by yo' fur shucks.'"

"Is that the reason you are in doubt about going to the camp meeting, is it?" I asked as he finished his story.

"I ain't, stranger."

"But I don't exactly see the point."

"Plain as sand, and I'd go thar to fight Satan, would I?"

"In a way, yes."

"And prayin' the Lawd would slip him out on me and slip a b'ar dozen in spread. I am one to take the risk."

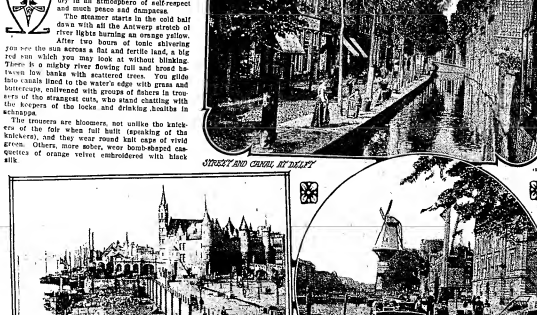
SYNOPSIS.

Bill Cannon, the bonanza king, and his daughter, Elise, are living in Paris. Cornelius Ryan, a rich ex-Senator and wire-pulling boss of Nevada, arrives at Antelope, Nevada, his home city, on the day he is refused admission for his wife, and is informed by Bill Cannon that he has married his daughter for the Senatorship. Contrary to Ryan's expectations, Bill Cannon's daughter, Elise, is a remarkable woman, and Ryan, who has married her for political reasons, finds himself deeply in love with her. Bill Cannon, who is a confirmed invalid, is carried on board his private car, and, accompanied by his daughter, Elise, and Ryan, starts for Antelope. Ryan's arrival is heralded by a brass band, and he is met at the station by Dominick Ryan, his brother, and a delegation of politicians. Dominick, who is a saloon-keeper, is in charge of the political campaign of Senator Ryan, and is engaged in a bitter fight with Bill Cannon, who is trying to secure the election of a Legislature which will be favorable to the election of Senator Ryan

THROUGH A LAND OF CANALS



STREET AND CANAL AT DELFT

FROM Antwerp to Rotterdam is less than three hours by the rails, but on the slow steamer, which crawls through the creeks, canals and lakes of Zeeland it is a full day.

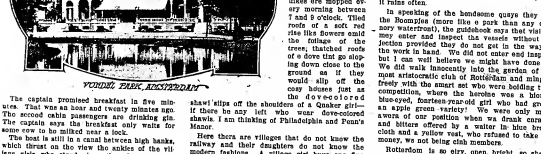
Come, steep yourself in sober luxury in an atmosphere of self-respect and much peace and dampness.

The steamer starts in the cold half dawn with all the Antwerp stretch of river lights burning an orange yellow.

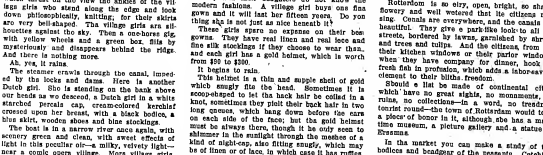
After two hours of lonic shivering you see the sun across a flat and fertile land, a big red sun which you may look at without blinking. There is a mighty river flowing full and broad between low banks with scattered trees. Now and then canals lead to the water's edge with grass and buttercups, enlivened with groups of fishers in trousers of the strangest cuts, who stand chatting with the keepers of the locks and drinking knaibs in schnappa.

The trousers are bloomers, not unlike the knickers of the folk when full built (speaking of the knickers), and they wear round knit caps of vivid green. Others, more sober, wear bowl-shaped caps specties of orange velvet embroidered with black silk

VIEW OF DUCK BY ANTWERP



BIT OF OLD AMSTERDAM



VONDEL PARK, AMSTERDAM

The captain promised breakfast in five minutes. That was an hour and twenty minutes later. The second cabin passengers are drinking gin. The captain says the breakfast only waits for some cow to be milked near a lock.

The boat is still in a canal between high banks, which thrust on the view the ankles of the village girls who stand along the edge and look down philosophically, knitting, for their ankles are very well-shaped. The village girls are all-bouffies against the sky. There is a windmill sig, with yellow wheels and a green box. Sils by mysteriously and disappears behind the ridge. And there is nothing more.

Ah, yes, it rains.

The steamer crawls through the canal, imeded by the locks and dams. Here is another Dutch girl. She is standing on the bank above our heads as we descend. a Dutch girl in a white starched pircais cap, cramcolored bombard cressed upon her breast, with a black bodice, a blue skirt, wooden shoes and blue stockings.

The boat is in a narrow river once more, with scenery green and clean, with sweet effects of light in this peaceful land—a turfy, velvety light—near a comic opera village. More village girls, the milk and blush rose blonde of Zeeland, with their silky mosses of pale golden hair, immaculately clean. They look neat and tight and tidy, do these little Dutch girls in their stiff dresses.

Out in the open Goester Skeit, three miles across, the yellow brownish water scarcely ripples itself against the banks of yellow green, low dikes, with long, long lines of trees, whose roots assist to hold the soil together.

We bug the edge. Along the bank there coughs and snorts a dusty little ancient automobile. As it nears we see it is conducted by a pretty girl in white. She looks like a bridal The villagers run pu, relishing What is it? What is he? Mystery.

We steam onward. Now, there are always these long lines of trees that stand like a-grim regiment to defeat the feeds of the encroaching sea. It is the Verdronken Land, the thousands perished—villages and towns and all the country side—in 1833, when a dike burst.

There is a short Canal de Kesten.

At a village where the captain stops to get his hair cut a fair bumboat girl sells us schnappa. Then the little steamer quits the subdivisions of the Scheide, meanders through the mazes of the Maas, comes through the, Krammer and the Volkerak to the wide Hollandsch Diep, which has rough water and looks almost like the sea. Once the bay was land, but long ago, in 1421, a tidal wave wiped out a hundred market towns and villages and spread 72 of 100,000 people perished, and the water stayed.

Then soon it is the little Dorsche Kil, a very narrow stream (where the Prince of Orange was drowned in 1711), which takes us to the broad and lovely Merwede, a double river, where the windmills of the landscape and the busy villages proclaim the land of Holland one has read of.

Now it is raining. Dort, or Dordrecht is the first fine town. It is the cleanest land! The very cows are scrubbed down with soap and rubbed dry with bath towelling till they shine. The sloping stone fikes are mopped every morning between 7 and 9 o'clock. Tiled roofs of a soft cherries like flowers omit the foliage of the trees, thatched roofs of a dove tint go sloping down close to the ground as if they would slip off the cosy houses just as the dovecolored gowns. They have real linen and real lace and fine silk underskirts. If they choose to wear them, and each girl has a gold helmet, which is worth from $50 to $200.

It begins to rain.

This helmet is a thin and supple shell of gold which snugly fits the head. Sometimes it is scoop-shaped to let the back hair be coiled in a golden chignon, or they plait their back hair in long queues, which hang down before the ears from each side of the face; but the gold helmet must be always there, though it be only seen in shimmer in the sunlight through the meshes of a kind of night-cap, also fitting snugly, which may be of linen or of lace, in which case it has ruffles of the finest lace. Then her gold helmet, when they go to service up in Rotterdam, though when they grow sophisticated, clipped and shame-faced they first put on city bonnets over their gold helmets and when sophisticated and then later on took up their caps and helmets to bury themselves and take to smart plait cotton prints for gowns and wear conventional coffins of gray talle'on their heads, for all the world like London chamberlands.

These helmets, horned on each side of the forehead with long twisted prongs of gold and dating back to when the Germanic tribes were struggling with the Romans, are, together with the bomb-shaped skirts, soon bound to disappear and figure only, like the peasant costume of the rest of France, in charity bazaars on city girls instead of farm girls, who are abandoning them for flimsy trash three years behind the current mode.

The air is sultry, like a gentle steaming in the Indies nocodays sun. Clouds rising above clouds around the whole horizon meet at the zenith like a dome. There is no end of peaceful hamlets, pretty, tidy, poor.

We stop for the captain to make an afternoop call. Small girls pass in procession bearing tiplips. Where to? What for? Mystery. We stand on. And there is nothing more.

The river widens and the windmills and the sawmills give place to shipping. Then the squat spires of a city full of little quartistic churches show themselves, and we approach the seventh commercial port of Europe.

The captain says it looks like rain.

From bonny Belgian Antwerp to Dutch Rotterdam and its solid thoroughfares is all the distance from the continental system to our American respectability. The town is Puritan. The girls look at you with straight eyes, as innocent of coquetry as babies. They are not like French girls walking with their mammas, casting down their eyes consciously. Would a French girl play shawl slips off the shoulders of a Quaker girl—for there are no shawls. I am thinking of Philadelphia and Penn's daughters.

Here there are villages that do not know the railway and their daughters do not know the modern fashions. The village girl buys one from town and it will last her fifteen years. Do you think she is not just as pure because?

These girls spare no expense on their best gowns. They have real linen and real lace and fine silk underskirts. If they choose to wear them, and each girl has a gold helmet, which is worth from $50 to $200.

It begins to rain.

The girls look at you with straight eyes, as innocent of coquetry as babies. They are not like French girls walking with their mammas, casting down their eyes consciously. Would a French girl play

Copenhagen or other promiscuous kissing games? Here they kiss all the afternoon, as innocent as little blithing birds. They kiss in the cars and it rains often.

In speaking of the handsome quays they call the Boompjes (more like a park than any ordinary waterfront), the guidebook says that visitors may enter and inspect the vessels without question provided they do not get in the way of the work in hand. We did not enter and inspect, but I can well believe we might have done so. We did walk innocently into the garden of the most aristocratic club of Rotterdam and mingled freely with the smart set who were holding tulip competition, where the heroine was a blonde, blue-eyed, fourteen-year-old girl who had grown an apple green variety of tulip. She only made a worn of our position when we drank cocoa and bitters offered by a waiter in lace bread cloth and a yellow coat, who refused to take our money. We not being club members.

Rotterdam is so airy, open, bright, so shady, flowery and well watered that its citizens may sing. Canals are everywhere, and the canals are beautiful. They give a park-like look to all the streets, bordered by lawns, garnished by shrubs and trees and tulips. And the citizens row out their kitchen windows or their parlor windows, when they have no canals in front of their doors, and trees fish in profusion, which adds a labor-saving element to their blithe freedom.

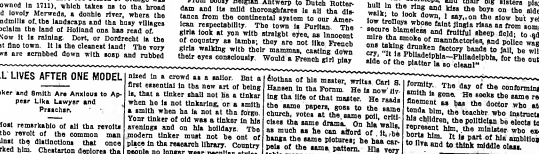
Should a list be made of continental cities which have no great sights, no monuments, no ruins, no collections of art, and no splendid tourist round—the town of Rotterdam would take a place of honor in it, although she has a marvelous museum, a picture gallery and a statue of Erasmus.

In the market you can make a study of the bellices and headgear of the peasants. Catching the Dutch lasts for a whole life you may make a symphonies of color in the prodince. Here are the fish stalls, where all the shades of silver—silver white, blue white, white shaded with green, white shaded with mauve, white with metallic reflections—quite in a clear scale of harmony. Here all the tints of green are heaped together in the vegetables, fabulously accompanied by the fragrance of the flowers, which sing together with the fruits in the most diverse color tones.

Though Rotterdam is a great port and an important manufacturing center, my host impresses one as the pleasure city are connected with a cafe chantant, a park, the markets and the rest. Certain streets, the great manufacturers are ship building, tobacco factories, sugar refineries and many great distilleries, especially of gins and Dutch liqueurs. The most important industries and commerce are coffee, sugar, tobacco, rice and spices. It is the raw-material port of Europe.

Again and again the vision of a well-known and beloved city rises up before the writer's docile imagination and affects him to the point of tears—the city of Philadelphia, Pa., which, I see, must be a faithful drawing picture of today of what York was in 1750. It is the city of homes par excellence, and it contains Rotterdam, and Rotterdam resembles it. The wearied tourist will look for a whig corner in which to relax a beard will find Rotterdam a second Philadelphia.

And looking from the watch tower of St. Lawrence's church, down on the tranquil panorama of the river and the suburbs; on the red brick houses and the shade trees of the quiet and self-respecting, where the children play jackstones on the front doorsteps, and their big sisters play hull in the ring and the boys play hull in the alley, to look down, I say, on the slow but yellow trolleys whose faint jingle rises as from some secure blameless and fruitful sheep fold; to quinines the smoke of manufactories and police wagons taking drunkes factory hands to jail, he will say, "It is Philadelphia—Philadelphia, for the outside of the platter is the exact



Evidence in the Case.

"How do you know this horse's tail was cropped?"

"We have dock-summatory evidence," of the fact."

HEAT OVERCOMES GETTYSBURG VETERAN

A pitiful sight indeed is this, of a member of the G. A. R. who came unscathed through the three days' fighting of the greatest battle of the Civil war, overcome by the heat at the reunion of Gettysburg survivors, and being led off the field to medical aid by a couple of young guardsmen.

WITH BLUE AND GRAY AT GETTYSBURG

Many were the stories told and innumerable were the incidents, both pathetic and humorous, which marked the greet reunion of the Union and Confederate veterans on the Gettysburg battlefield. Commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the most stubbornly contested battle of the Civil war, fragments of the forces which faced each other in the most conflict gathered to renew old acquaintances and to recount the deeds of other days.

Here is a story which was told by A. T. Dice, vice-president of the Reading railway.

Once upon a time there were a veteran in gray and a veteran in blue. They came to Gettysburg and in the course of events and visits to hotels they happened to meet. They looked over the sights of Gettysburg and the monument to the field. And they refound they must part.

The one in blue lived in Oregon; the one in gray in New Orleans. They were keeping together to their stations and passed by train after train, deferring the parting that must come. Both had the same age, were widely separated by the great grand idea of the meeting. Nr. Dice did not know.

But, however, yesterday they finally decided that the time for parting had come. The one from Oregon could not figure how to reach home via New Orleans and his grey comrade, while willing to see the west, didn't have the money for a ticket.

They lined upon on the platform as their trains stood waiting and then before the crowd, they slowly stripped off their uniforms and exchanged them there while the curious flocked to see them.

The Oregonian who came proudly to the west with a blue coat on his back proudly away with one of gray and the veteran from Louisiana who boarded the gray of the south sat with swelling chest in his new uniform of blue.

James H. Lansberry of St. Louis, Mo., who enlisted in the Third Indiana cavalry from Madison, Ind., recited to his comrades the details of his adventure in the town of Gettysburg by Confederate troops. He was captured during the skirmish just outside of town and, being held the opening of what was to be a world-famed engagement, he had been detailed to assist in carrying a wounded officer to the old seminary in Gettysburg. While in there a young woman flocked about him and begged that he tell of the battle, as remained to tell the story, with the result that he had to spend several days in following the Confederate army as a prisoner. After traveling 50 miles near rough country without shoes he succeeded in escaping and finally made his way back to Gettysburg, where he remained till August in safety in the care of the same people ed, which were housed in the seminary, churches, barns and public buildings.

Harry K. Thaw has come to the financial rescue of Gen. Daniel E. Sickles from bills of $30,000. Mattaweap. He sent a letter to Chairman Schoonmaker, treasurer of the committee of the fiftieth anniversary o fthe battle of Gettysburg, in which $1,000 in cash was inclosed by the latter. Thaw wrote that he felt the deepest sympathy for General Sickles because of the misfortunes that had come to him in his old age. The letter from the writer declared, was heightened by the fact that Thaw had two uncles in the Union army.

Gen. "Tom" Stewart of Pennsylvania, calling at army headquarters in "runaway vet" he came across in the big camp. The veteran is eighty-five years old, and his son at home announced that under no circumstances should his aged parent go to Gettysburg. The desire to be here and meet his former enemies was so strong in the heart of the old gentleman that he climbed out of a window of his home and ran away, turning up here in good shape. He is now happy and well cared for.

The camp is full of unexpected meetings. Every day brings forth numerous meetings between men who have not seen one another for 50 years. Many are commonplace, but some are extraordinary. For instance, here is one:

I. B. Nunnes of Erie county, Pennsylvania, a soldier in the 111th Pennsylvania, was captured by the confederates at Peachtree Creek, Ga., when he was one of Sherman's army on the celebrated march to the sea. He was being conveyed to the rear by a confederate soldier when the union batteries opened fire upon the party among whom he was a prisoner. The man who was escorting Nunnes was hit and fell, knocking Nunnes down and lying on top of him.

Seeing his chance of escape, Nunnes lay very still under the unconscious confederate while the battle raged around them. That night he slipped from under the body and escaped to the Union lines.

"I thought that fellow was dead," said Nunnes, "but I saw him today. Poor fellow, his mind's bad, and he didn't recognize me, but I was sure of him. I couldn't even get his name. I'm goin over later to the Georgia camp and try to find out who he is."

One of the most interesting places in camp was the tent and found his reun, located under the beeches in the hik tent. Everything found on the grounds was brought there and thou sands applied every day for missing articles.

There were at least 100 crutches piled up in the bureau, dozen or so artificial limbs being called for them. Those who come to claim the crutches or limbs soon recognize them with the aid of a number and are soon busily at work.

Then was one wooden leg also lying unclaimed. It was brought in by a Boy Scout, who had found it under a tree.

Several sets of false teeth were found.

A grandson of Francis Scott Key, composer of "The Star-Spangled Banner," is here. He is John Francis Key, Jr., of Washington, D. C., and by trade he is a veteran of the Second Maryland infantry of the confederate army.

Wearing a suit of gray, Key came into town, weak and almost dropping. He has been in failing health, but declared he was "going to see Gettysburg on this occasion or die."

One of the oldest veterans in the big camp is Captain W. H. Pleig of Corsicana, Texas, who was ninety years of age on his last birthday. February 22. During the war he served with distinction in the Thirty-seventh regiment of the confederate navy. Captain Pleig is one of the best preserved men in camp and is more active than many of the other veterans e score of years less advanced.

Wearing a tattered uniform of gray, Alexander Hunter of Virginia was the central point of interest on the streets during the early morning hours. Hunter was wearing the identical suit, said he, which he worn at Gettysburg fifty years ago.

The suit was in rags and has a bullet hole through one of the sleeves. He carried all his accoutrements of 1863 at Gettysburg and wore a union belt which he took from a foe. Mr. Hunter was a member of the Black Horse cavalry.

One of the big events was the "charge" of the survivors of Pickette's division on the "bloody angle."

Under the hot sun the men in gray marched across the field that had not seen anything more warlike than a blackberries in 50 years, up to the wall that form the angle. The "enemy" in this was waiting with weapons ready, and when they met across the wall they shook hands. Afterward they looked over the ground for the site of a $125,000 monument that hope to erect on the ground there.

One of the unadvertised reunions of the celebration occured in the cons federate section of the camp. A fife and drum corps of the blue tramped up and down the streets of the cont federate part of the city of tents.

They stopped before the tents, played each a fanfare as only drums and fifes can make, summoned forth the occupants and shook hands, threw their arms over the gray shoulders and in a dozen other ways showed their fondness of friendship.

They kept it up for hours and visited practically every "reb" tent. Their reception was as warm as their greeting.

A remarkable coincidence of the camp was the meeting of two men of exactly the same habit, coming from towns of the same name, but in different states. One fought on the union side in the battle of Gettysburg, and the other with the confederates.

These two men are John Carson of Burlington, N. J., and John Carson of Burlington, Ky.

They met by the merest chance. The Jersey Carson was walking along one of the streets, and saw a man in gray. Just to be friendly, the Jersey man stopped him and gave him a greeting. It was not until they had talked for several minutes that they discovered their names were identical.

One recorded veteran of an Illinois regiment told of an incident that happened 50 years ago.

"As we rode through Gettysburg that last time," he said, "I remember a little girl stopped my horse and said she wanted to give me a bouquet. I got down and she pinned a ribbon—a little purple ribbon to my coat. 'Wear that in the next battle you go into,' she said.

"We're not going to have any more battles around here,' I told her.

"Yes, you are,' she insisted. 'Those bills back there are full of rebels.'

"I wore that purple ribbon through the battle. I never saw the girl afterward, but I've kept that ribbon, and I'm back at home in Illinois today."

A striking contrast is seen in the menu provided for the soldiers fifty years ago and what they enjoyed this year:

1863—Breakfast—Hardtack, bacon beans and coffee.

Dinner—Bacon, beans, hardtack and water.

Supper—Bacon, hardtack, boiled beans and coffee.

1913—Breakfast—Puffed rice, fried eggs, fried bacon, cream potatoes, fresh bread, hard bread, butter and coffee

Dinner—Fricassee chicken, green corn, ice cream, cake, cigars, fresh bread, hard bread, butter, coffee, iced tea.

Supper—Salmon salad, macaroni and cheese, fresh bread, butter and coffee.

When the house of representatives recently undertook to name a committee of its members to represent it at the reunion of the blue and gray at Gettysburg it was found that not a veteran of the Civil war sat on the Republican side of that body. The only Union veterans left are few in number, are all Democrats, and almost without exception Democrats, and sit on that side. In the senate, how ever, there are two veterans of the war ass on the Democratic side and one of the veterans on the Republican side. As indicating the passage of time, it today in congress more veterans of the Spanish war are represented on the Civil war. Nineteen members of the house are veterans of the war with Spain. One member of the house, who has not seen war service at all, served for seven in the signal corps of the army as a private, and Delegate Jaime Aguinaldo of the Philippines was chief aide-de-camp to his father during the Philippine rebellion.

My heart beats faster tonight, said Jack Dempsey, as he left the training house for the fight. Dempsey is a native of Kilkenny, Ireland, and has always regarded July 2.

It was on this day a half century ago that God gave me strength to serve my country and my maker better than I ever had been able to serve them before.

It was on this day in '63 that I lost my leg and did my little part by the mercy of God to preserve the Union.

July 2, 1863, broke hot and clear. Just as in the early morning a mountain sun poured out of a sky hot a trifle overcloudy, I had retired shortly after midnight the previous night and slept a quiet, dreamless sleep that is generally accorded to babes.

That night I enjoyed just the same kind of sleep. But that is to be expected of a young fellow who at twenty-three is still able to read without his glasses, eh?

Many men who came today to shake my hand told me they were too young to do so by a couple of years, but I told them I was old enough and disarmed."

A romance developed in camp when John Goodwin of New York, a veteran, and Margaret Murphy of Chicago were united in marriage by Squire Harralson. Forty-six years ago the two were engaged, but they subsequently married others. They became widower and widow, the old flame was rekindled, and they agreed to come to Gettysburg on the fiftieth anniversary of the battle and marry. The happy pair will go on a wedding tour from here and will reside in New York.

ALL LIVES AFTER ONE MODEL

Tinker and Smith Are Anxious to Appear Like Lawyer and Preacher.

Most remarkable of all the revolts is the revolt of the common man against the distinctions that once marked him. Chesterton deplores the lack of color in modern life. He harks back to the middle ages, when a tinker was a tinker with pack and apron, and when a smith was as sastly recognized in a crowd as a sailor. But a first essential in the new art of being a tinker or a smith is not to be one when he is not tinkering, or a smith when he is not at the forge. Your tinker of old was a tinker in his evenings and on his holidays. The modern tinker must not be out of place in the research library. Country people no longer wear peculiar styles. They are more distinguished for telephones and taste for cigars.

The modern smith, tinker, even laborer, has not stopped at imitating the clothes of his master, writes Carl S. Hansen in the Forum. He is now living the life of that master. He reads the same papers, goes to the same church, votes at the same poll, cribs from the same drama. On his walls, as much as he can afford of it, he hangs the same pictures; he has carpets of the same pattern. His very table manners are as much superior to Chesterton's thinkers as were the noble's of that medieval day to his serf's. The result is that in all this community there is a still greater homogeneity. The day of the conforming suitfit is gone. Side by side the same fragment as has the doctor who attends him, the teacher who instructs his children, the politician he elects to represent him, the minister who exborts him. It is part of his ambition to live and to think middle class.

J. D. Houston was at Herman the latter part of last week on a business trip.

Wanted—Girl for federal house work. Good wages. Apply to Mrs. J. A. Duffy—Adv. 194

The Misses Laura and Mary Jane Cots visited with relatives and friends in Crookston last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. H. Lemieux of Minneapolis spent last Friday and Saturday with relatives in this city.

Register of Deeds Frank Jeffers attended to business matters at Thief River Falls between trains Monday.

For Sale—Two two Sengers houses on Third street. Get address of owner at Gazette office and write for prices.—Adv. tf

S. C. Schockley, of the P. & S. Hardware Co., left Monday on a business trip to Fargo and other points in North Dakota.

Frank Cyr and son left last Friday for their home at Sherwood, Wisconsin, after a two weeks visit with relatives in this city.

James Blake, who has been on a claim in North Dakota for the past three months, returned to his home in this city Saturday.

Rudolph Holzman has purchased six lots in the south part of town and will soon commence the erection of a house on them.

Miss Mayme Laurent left Wednesday afternoon for Louisville, Canada, where she will spend about three months visiting relatives.

After a several days visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. F. Hastings, Mrs. L. C. Simons left Monday for her home in St. Paul.

Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Jackson of St. Hilaire visited with their sons, Allen and Robert, and friends in this city the first of the week.

Homer Furstenau last week purchased three lots from L. A. Duthrieft and will probably build on them some time in the fall.

Miss Rebecca Clement left Monday for her home at Montreal, Canada, after several days visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Laurent.

Miss Evangeline Fairchild left Wednesday for her home in Grand Forks after spending two weeks with her brother, Dr. G. B. Fairchild.

Mrs. Gene Reay and children returned to their home in Fertile the latter part of the week after having spent a week with relatives here.

For Rent—Eight room house, in "Little Canada", with 7 lots, 3 sheds, granary and barn. The house is well built and warm. Enquire of Charles Benoit.—Adv. tf

Robert Zaiser, who is employed in Duluth, arrived in this city Sunday and will visit for some time at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Zaiser.

Chas. Beatrom of St. Paul, deputy state public examiner, was in this city the latter part of last week inspecting the books and records of the several county officers.

One car load of salt will be on D. N. tracks Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, July 18, 19, 20, 21. Anyone wishing for barrel salt to salt fresh hay can get it at $1.50 to $1.55 per barrel from us.—Max Ingber.—Adv.

A kitchen shower was given for Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Garosen at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Healy last Friday evening. Numerous useful articles were received by the Newlyweds and a most enjoyable time was spent. Light refreshments were served during the course of the evening.

The Thief River Falls Times in saying that "Mr. E. L. Mayhew returned Monday from Red Lake Falls where he had spent the past two weeks relieving Mr. Baker of the Red Lake Falls Gazette, who has been taking a short vacation," makes an unintentional misstatement. Mr. Mayhew was employed in the mechanical department for a brief time and should not be injured by charged with the responsibility for what appeared in the paper during that time.

In order not to disappoint the crowd that had come to see the Curtis-Akerman match, which was called off on account of an injury to Akerman, Theo. Ducharme and Jos. Cyr consented to go into the mat and wrestle. This match proved almost as interesting as the other one would have been and the first fall was scored by Ducharme, after 17 minutes of fast work, with a hammerlock. The second fall also went to Ducharme in 3 minutes also by the use of the hammerlock. The match was a good one and the crowd was well satisfied. The Curtis-Akerman match will be pulled off in the near future.

Max Schutt, in his Ford runabout had quite a narrow escape last Sunday. He was coming into the city from the south and just before reaching the bridge over the railroad bridge struck a mud puddle. The car, getting away from his control for a moment, ran part way on to the bridge and then crashed into the railing, but, luckily, it struck one of the railing supports and this prevented it from going over, although the two front wheels were over the edge when it stopped. Max says his hair stood straight up on end for a few minutes and that he does not care to repeat the performance.

For all kinds of fresh fruits call at Max Ingber's store.—Adv.

Miss Margaret Kane was the guest the first of the week of Miss Clara Marchand at Crookston.

Wm. Schutt returned yesterday from a business trip to Hector and other points in southern Minnesota.

Advertised letters at the local P. O. Mrs. Sam Huard, Miss Lena S. Hanney, B. H. Pilaney, Fred Norge.

Mrs. Geo. Tyahson left the latter part of last week for Mayville, N. D., where she is visiting at the home of her parents and other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McIntyre and son Billy of Langdon, N. D., have been visiting this past week at the home of Mrs. McIntyre's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Fletcher.

Atty. and Mrs. C. D. Broughton and son Charles left last Friday for Minneapolis where they will visit with relatives for some time. They made the trip by automobile.

There will be a meeting of the Rebekah lodge at I. O. O. F. hall next Wednesday evening. The work of the meeting will be the installation of officers for the ensuing year.

For Sale—One Minnesota Binder, seven foot cut, run last season only, $100.00; one OK Champion potato digger, as good as new, $50.—Healy Land Co., Red Lake Falls.—Adv tf

The Ladies Aid of the Presbyterian church will hold a business meeting Saturday afternoon at three o'clock at the home of Mrs. Ed. L. Healy. A full attendance is earnestly desired.

Miss Lou Fletcher entertained the P. & F. B. Tuesday evening. The party was a very pretty affair. Miss Fletcher's sister, Mrs. W. A. McIntyre of Langdon, N. Dak., was an honor guest.

Miss Addie Orr, who has been visiting with her sister, Mrs. Geo. Walker, and other relatives for several weeks, left Monday for Park River, where she has accepted employment in a general store.

Mrs. A. H. Cowles and children left Monday to go to Wisconsin for a visit with relatives. They will be away three weeks and will visit with Mr. Cowles' people at Oakfield and with Mrs. Cowles' people at Loyal.

Frank Brenllier left Monday evening on a trip to the west. He will be gone four or five weeks and will spend the greatr part of that time with relatives in North Yakima, Wash., and with the many former Red Lake Falls people residing in that city.

Congressman Halvor Steenerson was a passenger on Friday's northbound train and expected to visit several points north of here. The congressman being away from Washington for two weeks is no doubt spending a part of the time "cultivating the farmers."

For a meatless priced salt, well made and tasteless, see our Coast-craft clothes, prices from $10 up. We are now prepared to show the men that dress well some up-to-date clothes made by Hart Schaffner & Marx. Guaranteed in every respect. —Max Ingber.—Adv.

Miss Hazel Reardon and Ralph Reardon, who are spending the summer vacation at Maple Lake, have been guests of relatives and friends in the city this week. Tuesday evening they were honor guests at a canoeing party and yesterday afternoon a number of the young people gave a picnic for them.

Let me in this way thank most heartily those who in any way contributed to the success of our officers' meeting, especially the speakers for their valuable instructions, the band boys for their joyful music, the student teachers for their songs, and the little boy whose recitation pleased all so well.—A. B. DeForge.

Falls Cyclodels has just completed the construction of a new barn on Mr. Syrm seven miles north of this city. The barn is 32x40 feet in dimensions with heavy concrete foundation, concrete floors and other idea of modern construction. Mr. Grandbois will dedicate the new building with a barn dance to be given Friday evening, July 18.

Haag's Mighty Shows gave two exhibitions here to good sized audiences Monday. The show does not claim to be one of the biggest on the road yet the performance was one of the best seen here in years. Many of the acts alone were worth more than the price of admission and would have been a credit to the largest aggregations. Mr. Ernest Haag, owner and manager, is a gentleman of the highest type, and made lasting friends of all who met him. Unlike most of the traveling aggregations Haag's Show is free from graft and gambling devices, there being a standing forfeit of a large amount for any person or persons who have ever been defrauded out of a penny around his tents. His show had never visited McIntosh before yet all who attended the exhibition went away friends of the aggregation and feeling that they had never before been treated nicer, or seen a cleaner or more moral show. The announcement of a return engagement to McIntosh next spring will be hailed with delight.—Warren Co. Times, McIntosh, Minn.

Smartweed.

Smartweed is not usually troublesome in cultivated fields. If low land and marshes are drained and put under cultivation, the weed will disappear. In low pastures or meadows that can not be drained or tilled the smartweed should be cut frequently enough to prevent seeding. Grasses adapted to the conditions should be sown thickly to crowd it out.

MEETING OF THE BUSINESS MEN

TO DISCUSS MATTER OF IMPROVED RAILWAY SERVICE FOR CITY.

There will be a meeting at the Riverside rooms next Monday evening for the business men of the city and all other citizens who may be interested in a proposition to secure better railway service.

The purpose of the meeting is to determine what may be done to secure Sunday passenger and mail service on the Great Northern line. All interested are invited to attend the meeting.

CIRCUS COMING SOON.

Haag Railroad Shows to be Here on Monday, July 28.

In the little town of Monroe, Louisiana, lived the family of Enos Haag, and about thirty-seven years ago there came to grace the family a son, and this son was named Ernest Haag; and as soon as he could even play with toys, pet playthings were due to animals he gathered and neighbors had given him. When he grew older, his play days were spent playing circus and he was the unfortunate enough to see one of the circuses that visited his home town, he would elaborate on it in his own way, and so it went on until he was 19 years old. He then secured a position with one of the large circuses in an executive capacity, returning home at the finish of the season with one thought, to have a show of his own that would be recognized by the circus king, also a southern show for southern people. The following spring he bought a flat boat and organized a small show, floating down the Red River on a flat boat, playing the small towns on the river front. He then bought a few wagons, and started on overland show, every year enlarging and getting new features and with ever that one idea and ambition, to give his friends, the public, the best money could procure, successful management suggest and brains devise. Every year Mr. Haag enlarged his show until it becomes too large to travel on wagons. It was then transposed to a railroad show with its own special train.

In the eighteen years history of this enterprise each year has been an unexplained and marked increase in size over the preceding one, and this year has been no exception to the rule. Mr. Haag has always had three principal objects in view, namely: cleanliness, honesty, and kind treatment to all. Mr. Haag claims the distinction of being the only southern aggregation owning and controlling a southern show.

Haag Shows will exhibit at Red Lake Falls, Monday, July 28th.

Fortune in Forests.

Grand Marais, Minn.—The Robertson brothers of Maple Hill, who had 32 acres, young and old, including several silver gray and black foxes, disposed of the entire lot to I. T. Mann & Co., Kansas City, Mo. The price paid has not been given out, but it is generally understood to be about $7,000. Mr. Mann evidently a prize lot of livestock, for there were other parties here from New York city, Prince Edward Island and other places who were interested in the deal.

Buick

30,000 Buicks have been sold during the 1913 season.

It is nothing unusual for a Buick motor to run 10,000 miles without any attention except water, gasoline and lubricant. This means a total of three hundred million Buick miles.

If you want a Buick this season, its time for you to get it. The Buick means service, power, reliability, durability and economy.

The Buick Overhead Valve Motor has more power and more speed than any other type of motor ever built. It will pull stronger on low grade gasoline and the fuel consumption is less.

RED LAKE FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, JULY 24, 1913. VOL. XXX—NO. 43

RYE AND BARLEY IS BEING CUT

BOUNTIFUL CROP FOR RED LAKE COUNTY IS PRACTICALLY ASSURED.

The farmers are now busy harvesting rye and barley and putting up hay. Both of the grain crops are good. The hay crop is a little light, owing to the dry "spell" early in the season. However it is not an extremely light as to be called a short crop.

The wheat fields are looking fine and every indication now points to the record year for corn in Red Lake County. The stand of corn is not so magnificent as that of wheat.

While six weeks ago there was a general feeling of anxiety over the crop situation, that has been displaced by a feeling of satisfaction, and the opinion quite generally expressed is that the harvest of 1913 will be much better than that of 1912, though not quite so bountiful, probably, as that of 1911 which was a record-breaker for this particular part of the map, though people in other parts of the northwest were not so fortunate that season.

Six weeks ago there was considerable anxiety because of the dryness, but since then there have been many fine rains, it is considered only necessary, and a good crop is as near a certainty as it could be at this season of the year.

LIKED THE BAND.

And the Way Red Lake Falls People Patronized Fair.

Red Lake Falls attended the Crookston Fair yesterday with help on, best as they promised. At 10 o'clock yesterday morning over 20 automobiles arrived bringing the Red Lake Falls band, headed by Leader Clint Brunelle and the band occupied a place in the grand stand, furnishing some fine music during the entire afternoon while the races were on. There were 24 pieces in the band, 14 members being unable to get away but the organization as represented here was a strong one and a mighty creditable band.

In addition to those who came down from Red Lake Falls in cars, many others came down the night before making a splendid showing from the upriver city, and most of them were so pleased with the program, especially the races, that they are back again today.

Surely it is a live band and a very friendly one from Red Lake Falls. "We've got the Crookston habit," said Clem Brunelle last night "and it looks as though the attack was chronic. No cure for it except to come oftener."

When the Red Lake Falls is pulled off, a big auto tour from Crookston will be advertised and reservations are going to be made on adjacent basestops as the Red Lake Falls fair grounds won't hold all the Crookston people who have asserted their intention of going up.—Crookston Times, Saturday.

BOOSTING FOR MINNESOTA.

Ernest Buse, First Settler at Fergus Falls, at Old Settlers' Meeting.

Ernest Buse, now of Red Lake Falls, and the first settler in Fergus Falls, at the old settlers of Otter Tail county at their re-union that the best advice he could give Minnesota people was to stay in Minnesota. Mr. Buse has been all over the west and says if he had not been his advice is very good.—St. Cloud Times.

BOTH MAY BE KEPT

Former Attorney General Simpson Says that Woodmen May belong to Both Societies.

The Minnesota Woodmen have reflected a temporary organization by selecting the following officers to go on the articles of incorporation:

Pres. D. P. O'Neill, Thief River Falls.

Vice-Pres. W. S. Gulkerson, Minneapolis.

Secretary G. M. Peterson, Duluth.

Treasurer C. L. Swenson, Albert Lea.

Field Mgr. J. L. Sundean, Minneapolis.

Director, D. D. O'Neill, Thief River Falls.

Director, F. F. Ellsworth, Mankato

Director, C. M. King, Deer River.

Director, Mich. Williams, Dodge Center.

Director, J. Greteva, Olencis.

Director, James A. Larson, St. Paul.

Director, R. E. Braden, Minneapolis.

Director, E. F. Bacon, Pillagey.

Director, G. B. Bjornson, Minneota.

Director T. O. J. Pease, Anoka.

These officers will not have notive duties but will be the nominal officers until the first state convention is held. It is likely that the first state convention will be held during state fair week. At that time permanent officers will be elected, and these officers will have active duties.

An interesting feature in the development of the situation is the ruling of former Attorney General George T. Simpson, and a great number of other lawyers, to the effect that the Woodmen Bill was left in such form after its amendment in the senate that members who join the state society can still retain their membership in the parent order thus enabling them if they so like to double their insurance. It is understood that the majority of the members who join the State Society intend to follow the parent order, but those who want to remain in the parent order until conditions there become more unsatisfactory may do so according to their ruling of the attorney.

At a conference with the Insurance Department the insurance commissioner expressed a hearty mind open on this subject and pass on it when the application for license is presented to him.

However, if the Minnesota Woodmen desire to keep faithful to both orders and in case the insurance department should take a similar ruling on the subject it is proposed to take the question into the special session of the legislature and there pass up the matter and settle any question of doubt.

Should the plan prevail under which the Woodmen may double their insurance, it is considered only the outcome will be a great advantage to families of subscribers in the state of Minnesota, and this plan will eliminate a large measure the bitterness between th factions in this state.

BAND CONCERT TUESDAY NIGHT

THE SAND BOYS WILL GIVE A FINE STREET CONCERT.

A fine street concert will be given by the Red Lake Falls city band next Tuesday night. This will be the first local appearance of the band boys for several weeks. The boys have been filling several out side engagements of late and their time has been taken up with practice. During the remainder of the season concerts will be given frequently. It was the plan to give a concert this week but owing to the absence of Director Brunelle and two or three of the band boys next Tuesday evening was made the date for the concert.

Fine Horses With Show.

Your editor in the mighty Hand shows Monday afternoon and evening July 28 in Red Lake Falls, will not be complete without a look at the colossal carnave cuavery, even though you are not a lover and admirer of blooded stock, it is claimed by those who filed an hour of genuine pleasure and mush to interest you inspecting the rows of harness and ponies. For the last year agents have been busy all over the country and in the world making purchases for this department, with a result that today that Mighty Hagg shows possess more the largest, best sorted, and most complete collections of representative members of the noble family which wealth can procure, and it is doubtful if anywhere near like the same or even hoish exhibited before. Certain ly ever by any travelling shows.

Ladies and children in particular are invited to visit the horse falls. While all may not be without cost, an uniformed and curteous attendants are always present to see after the welfare of the callers.—Adv.

TAKE WARNING.

Precautions Should be Taken on Circus Day.

Chief of Police Fred Cyr wishes to warn the people of the city that it will be wise to take extra precautions on circus day next Thursday. It is suggested that household ors do not leave their homes unlock ed and unguarded at any time and that the back doors of business houses be locked during the time of the parades. Circus time is sometimes harvest time for thieves.

Notice for Bids.

Notice is hereby given that on Monday, August 4, 1913 at 10 o'clock a. m., the contract will be awarded for the work of filling the approaches to the bridge between section 6 of Lake Pleasant township and section 31 of Red Lake Falls township. The contract will be let at auction to the lowest bidder, sale on the premises. The work is to be done.

At the same time the old bridge will be sold at public auction.

LAWMAKERS NOT WITH GOVERNOR

LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEES OPPOSE GOVERNOR'S UTILITIES PLAN.

St. Paul.—(Special)—It was expected that the house committee named by Speaker Fiters to investigate the question of state control of public utilities would be antagonistic to the scheme as advocated by Governor Eberhart and its first meeting having to do with the issue was taken on the basis of "I told you so." It came out as expected. Last week the senate committee, headed by Senator Hackney, named for the same purpose, with the additional command that it draft a public utilities control bill, held its first meeting at the state capitol and while it never figured in the "I told you so" class it had to be said in deliberations, which were of the disconcerted kind, were anything but in line with Governor Eberhart's way of thinking. The meeting, which lasted nearly an entire day, showed conclusively that the committee, two, named by Lieutenant Governor Meighen, is not in sympathy with the issue. It differs with his executive so that a majority believe that the power and duties of the state board is not demanded, that a special session is not necessary, that it is demanded by the public and that if the governor insists on a special session that it should be held next January instead of in October, as suggested by the governor, which, it was unanimously agreed by the committee, would work a hardship on all country residents.

Getting back to the original proposition, the senate committee, which is composed of Senators J. M. Hackney, St. Paul; H. W. Chesdo, Duluth; J. A. Cosley, Hinckley; Geo O. Sageng, Dalton; W. S. Dwinnell, Minneapolis; F. E. Putnam, Blue Earth, and G. E. Rudstrum, Stillwater, met in anything but an agreeable state of mind. Right here, though, I might digress. Senator Sullivan, who is heart and soul with his excellency, was not present, and Senators Putnam and Cosley showed signs that they were open to conviction. The majority of the committee, however, led by Senators Hackney of St. Paul and Dwinnell of Minneapolis, indicated that they were opposed and had it not been for the good offices of Senators Cosley and Putnam there would new be on the records a resolution declaring that a public utilities commission was not wanted, that there was no demand for the act and that the business and farming interests of the state were opposed to a special session of the legislature. It was pointed out though by Messrs. Putnam and Cosley that any action of this kind would redound to the credit of the governor and inasmuch a lot of people who do not know a public utility from a hole in the ground. The latter comparison, it was agreed, about fitted the prospect from the present time, to say that the governor's advocacy of state control and the knowledge of the general public as to what it is public utilities and how it should be properly controlled, is concerned. The committee finally come to the conclusion that it had only one duty and that was the drafting of a bill, and it reluctantly agreed to accept the task. To this end a spread eagle meeting, at 10, also experts on both sides of the question will be invited to be present and air their views.

With all due respect to Governor Eberhart and his opinion that the public utilities should be assembled under one central head, the senate committee comes pretty near being right in the conclusion that the general public is lot clamoring for the new order of things and that with some people the word public utilities is unknown. As to the date of the special session, if his excellency insists on calling it that is a matter between the governor and the members of the legislature. The idea in the mind of the governor as interpreted by some of the members of the committee, is to call it in October, so as to catch the members at their busiest time and compel quick action. Senator Hackney intimated that the question of state control is of such magnitude that haste is the compiling of a bill should not be permitted. Senator Dwinnell says Wisconsin is paying $600,000 a year in order to maintain the new order of things and that Minnesota should go some careful thinking before it settles itself with a debt of this amount. Then, too, it is pointed out that state control does not mean those utilities in the cities alone, but everywhere, and that when the small towns awake and find they are included that they will rebel. It is a big question, fellows, and I look for some strenuous times before the end is reached.

The chronicling of things political this week would not be complete if I did not mention the victory of Senator In the contest for the location of the new sixth state normal school authorized by the last legislature. It landed on the first ballot. Senator Sageng was the lone negative, he voting for Thief River Falls. Inasmuch as a majority of the commission were picked to favor the latter city, the bunch growing out of charges made by a member of Northern Minnesota papers to the effect that the commission was packed. The victory for Bemidji was a real one. Bemidji, I am told, went wild when the news was received.

There is no inkeh need for a sixth normal school in there is for a second state university, but that need not detract from Bemidji's victory. Ever since 1907 Bemidji has been after an institution of this kind, but was forestalled by Representative Pat Mc-Garry of Cass Lake, who, after a hard fought fight in 1909 landed the coveted plum for his home town. Cass Lake is Mr. McGarry's home, it was said, at the bequest of Thomas Bibby, then a political power and the owner of the Bemidji waterworks, voted the Bibby interest of the legislature following. Then came a bill introduced calling for a new normal school, but it was not until last session that the authorities at Minneapolis were realized. Half a dozen towns, however, were competitors and the legislature, anxious to be relieved of the question, provided for a commission to locate the new field. It was this commission that selected Bemidji last week. Money for the appropriation of the necessary buildings will have to be provided by the next legislature The site is furnished by Bemidji.

Figuring on a decision in the rate cases against the last legislature passed what is known as the Sheridan law. This law made mandatory two-cent railway fares and the earning more than a stipulated sum per mile. Governor Eberhart has come to mind now, though it was in the neighborhood of $6,000. It is said to be real it is the extra session of the legislature which will consider the matter call. The Sheridan law does not become operative until January next.

You might say well try to divorce the Capitol City from the political game to confine it to the foot of the North pole, the latter is easier, but fifty years hence the seat of government, St. Paul, has been associated with the game and it just refuses to be divorced. The Twin City Rate Bureau, a chamber of commerce not to select a press agent, Larry Hudson, better known as "Larry Ho," and ex-Ralph Brown, recently a resident of Omaha and for a time a clerk for Senator Keller, were the candidates. One factor against Larry Ho, and he has managers apparently, the Dick O'Connor and Jim "Red Top" Castle theory was no getting away from the fact that Brown was favorable to Mayor Keller, and that Keller was charged with the finish in favor of neither, and a telegram being sent to an outsider asking for a ruling. Politics in St. Paul has become so common that no one does anything without first inquiring where the other stands in the matter of political allegiance.

The state board of control will in a few days put about $100,000 of state obligations on the market. They represent disposition of warrants and certificates authorized by the last legislature. The governor is also in advance agent of the Dick O'Connor and Jim "Red Top" course there was no getting away from the fact that Brown was favorable to Mayor Keller, and that Keller was charged with the finish in favor of neither, and a telegram being sent to an outsider asking for a ruling. Politics in St. Paul has become so common that no one does anything without first inquiring where the other stands in the matter of political allegiance.

The state board of control will in a few days put about $100,000 of state obligations on the market. They represent disposition of warrants and certificates authorized by the last legislature. The governor is also in advance agent of the Dick O'Connor and Jim "Red Top" course there was no getting away from the fact that Brown was favorable to Mayor Keller, and that Keller was charged with the finish in favor of neither, and a telegram being sent to an outsider asking for a ruling. Politics in St. Paul has become so common that no one does anything without first inquiring where the other stands in the matter of political allegiance.

Minnesota produced over 116,000,000 pounds of butter last year, and those who produced the butter fat have this to say about it: Such a butter the increase in production over the previous year was nearly 18,000,000 pounds of butter. Sometimes we are prone to criticize the legislature for the passage of laws designed to protect the industry and which are against what is called the poor man's butter, but it has to be sold that what benefits one helps all. The payment of over $20,000,000 to Minnesota farmers last year for one article must have helped more than the farmer.

The state board of pardons broke the record last week when it handed four pardons and ten commutations out of sentence to the old soldiers of the Stillwater prison and the St. Cloud reformatory. Seems the soul must seem an abuse of justice, but just the same little clemency is granted in the case of pardon applications unless they are justified.

Good press work is always in order and the spectacular efforts attending the arrival of Sandow, a young German detained at Ellis Island, by Governor Eberhart cannot be criticized. Getting down to cold facts, Atola owes the American restaurant proprietor Antilles, the governor's secretary, who saw to his detention, $1,000 for damages, and for your benefit he worked it for all it was worth.

For Sale.

The Lemieux farm, in the town of Gurnee, containing 160 acres mostly all under cultivation. Fine, large house and new large barn and other buildings; good well. Four miles school house. $35 an acre takes it from Plummer, half a mile from a R. R. DEBUTTE, Administrator.

COMPLETING THE WATERWORKS

WATER SUPPLY BELIEVED TO BE AMPLE—PUMP INSTALLED SOON.

It is believed that the delay in the construction of the city waterworks system, because of uncertainty regarding the water supply, is at an end. The gravel that was put in the large open well seems to be holding the quicksand that was causing so much trouble and the supply of water is believed to be ample.

The pump house is now being constructed and with that job completed with the installation of the pump, the waterworks system will be completed—and that will be n n very short time.

BIG DRAINAGE PROJECT.

Attorney General Says Appropriation for Roseau River is Valid.

Improvement in the Roseau river to prevent floods which render 50,000 to 60,000 acres of state land valueless at present, is contemplated by the state drainage board. E. T. Willard, acting state engineer, has been directed by the board to make a survey of the river from the Canadian boundary to the headwaters and to prepare plans for deepening of the cost of widening and deepening the channel, and straightening it so it will carry off flood waters without overflow. The last legislature appropriated $20,000 for the purpose, and Attorney General Lyndon A. Smith has advised the board that the constitutional objection to large areas of state land will be made valuable as a result of the work, according to State Auditor S. G. Iverson.

IT NOW COSTS TWO CENTS A MILE

LOWER FREIGHT AND PASSENGER RATES ARE NOW IN FORCE.

It now costs only two cents a mile to ride on the cars, the lower rates having gone into effect on all railroads in the state, except Great Western and Minneapolis & St. Louis, the first of the week. The setback on a trip to Minneapolis and return will be more than five dollars.

Freight rates have also been reduced. This will result in a great saving to the public than the reduction in passenger rates, though not so apparent to the casual eye.

Attempted Suicide.

Ed. Larson, son of the assistant Secretary of State, who was arrested on June 21st, pleaded guilty and paid a fine for assault and battery, has again brought himself into the public by trying to stay himself.

Friday morning at 2 o'clock, night policeman Farr was called to the Eyrie house and was being questioned by Larson in his room with a knife wound in his side. Mr. Farr immediately summoned Dr. Swedenburg who found that Larson had aimed for the heart but struck a rib, and what otherwise would, no doubt, have proved a fatal wound, was but a slight cut in the side and a flesh wound. Larson evidently committed the deed in a fit of despondency as he had been drinking during the past few days and seemed to be blue and down in the mouth. Larson was chauffeur for A. M. Appin. He left Wednesday night for his parents' home in St. Paul.—Thief River Falls Times.

CIRCUS IS COMING

Small Boy is Happy and So Is Dad Under Clever Disguise.

The circus is coming to town next Monday and the small boy is happy and the circus agents are under suppression of unconcern. But when the barkers begin to bark and the band has made its last and noisy noise he will be found wandering toward the circus grounds and offering the excuse, "I don't care for the show, but the boys wanted to go." Kids are mother's special care nuisance the circus comes around and they fall to on hand to share in the responsibility of the care of the calliope.

The examinations for common school certificates are to be held during the three days following the close of the summer school on July 30th, and will be conducted at the Washington school where summer school is now in session. As required by the new state law, all who wish to take the examinations shall be required to pay a fee of fifty cents before beginning to write whether they write one examination or all. The fee is due to be required of those who wish to have their papers examined and if a teacher enrolls, pays the fee, takes a set of questions with the intention of writing and then decides not to write, the fee cannot be returned.

No substitute can be offered for common school certificates except for grade certificate for the first time, but those who did substitute something in the past can now have certificate renewed now without examination in Geometry.

All those applying for certificates or renewals who do not have a permanent mark in professional test will be required to take said examination before certificates are issued. A good mark in professional test is 75 per cent, and in past can be used by a teacher, especially if she desires to teach in other counties than those by which the certificates are issued.

BARGAIN DAY IN LATE AUGUST

LIBERAL PRIZES FOR PRODUCTS FOR THE STATE FAIR EXHIBIT.

Red Lake county farmers are urged to contribute to the exhibit of the Red Lake county exhibit at the state fair as an advertisement of the resources of the county by supplying products of the farm that may be used in the exhibit.

A state fair market day will be held in this city as was done last year. The exact date for this market day will be announced, though it can be definitely stated that it will be held late in August, shortly before the exhibit is shipped to the state fair.

Liberal prizes will be offered for all kinds of products—grains, grasses, vegetables, fruits, etc.—that are brought in that day. E. G. Rose, who is in charge of the arrangements for the exhibit this year, is now busy collecting articles that may be used in the exhibit, but it is desired that there shall be a big rush of articles for the market day, that the variety may be increased and that there may be a fine assortment of fresh vegetable.

ANNUAL SCHOOL MEETING.

Watson, Lemieux and Rubertus Re-elected Members of Board.

The annual school meeting held last Saturday evening was attended by between sixty and seventy voters of the city. Dr. N. M. Watson, Jos. Lemieux and Wm. Rubertus, who, whose terms as members of the board of education expired, were re elected without opposition. Dr. Watson and Dr. Lemieux were elected for terms of three years and Mr. Rubertus for a term of two years.

FANS WILL SEE THIS.

Game Between Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls Teams.

A ball game that will attract a big crowd of fans is one scheduled to be played on the local grounds between the Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls teams on the afternoon of Sunday, Aug. 3. The first game scheduled for Sunday between Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls will be called at the end of the fourth inning on account of rain. At the time the locals had a decided advantage in the scoring.

IT WAS A BIG SHOW

Crookston Fair Offered Much Entertainment—Fine Race Program.

The hundreds of Red Lake Falls people who attended the Crookston fair last week found it a good show. Though owing to the early date at which the fair was held the display of agricultural products was somewhat limited, the fair was in every way a big success.

In the live stock department many fine animals were shown and good entertainment features kept the crowds interested.

The Red Lake Falls Concert band assisted the Crookston band furnish music for Friday's fair. The band boys were taken to Crookston by members of the local auto club. Crookston people have promised that Red Lake Falls made at their fair and the Crookston band and several hundred Crookstonites will be here for one day of the Red Lake county fair in September.

RAILROADS DEVELOP NEW STRIKE PHASE

WAGE CONTROVERSY BECOMES MORE INVOLVED AS CONSEQUENCE OF STAND.

PRESIDENT SIGNS NEW LAW

Federal Machinery Will Be Put in Motion as Soon as Commissioner of Mediation Provided for is Selected.

New York, July 17.—With the passage by congress of the Newlands bill to provide an arbitration medium for settling the wage differences between the eastern railroads and their 50,000 conductors and trainmen, a new phase of the controversy developed through announcement by the railroads that they will ask the board which considers the demands of the employes to take up also the grievances of the roads against the men.

Overshadows Erie's Stand.

This angle of the situation overshadows for the moment in interest, even the most determined stand taken by the Erie system that it will not in any event submit its cause to arbitration.

Chairman Elisha Lee of the conference committee of managers states that the railroads will demand arbitration, which will take into consideration all questions of difference between the employer and the employed.

President Signs Bill.

Washington.—New federal machinery for the adjustment of railroad wage disputes was authorized when the president signed the Newlands-Erdman bill just as it was agreed upon Monday at the White House conference between President Wilson, congressional leaders and representatives of the big eastern railways and their employes.

This law creates a board of mediation and conciliation, headed by a commissioner to which the eastern railroads and employes of brotherhoods have declared their willingness to submit the wage dispute on account of which 400,000 persons are said to have voted to strike. The union officials agreed to an extension, pending action by congress, and statements issued after them now to make ready to lay their case before the mediators as soon as President Wilson makes the appointment.

Seth Low Mentioned.

Seth Low, president of the National Civic Federation, who has been instrumental in bringing the railroads and their employes together in the present dispute, is prominently mentioned for the position of commissioner of mediation and conciliation. Another two members of the board are to be government officials. It was regarded as probable that Judge Martin A. Knapp, of the commerce court, and an assistant to one of the cabinet officers, possibly an assistant attorney general, would be considered.

TWO PERISH IN BLIZZARD

Young Man and His Wife Were Lost During Three Ten Days Ago.

Minneapolis, July 17.—After a search of nine days the body of Clinton B. Smith, a graduate of the University of Minnesota and a resident of Portland, Ore., has been found at the foot of a precipice on Mount Nelson, Wash., where he and his wife, recently married, had been lost during a week's outing in the mountains.

Information to that effect was received by Mrs. H. D. Newkirk, Mrs. Smith's brother. Her brother, Wm. Grant J. G. Newkirk, left immediately for Portland.

The searching parties had not yet found the body of Mrs. Smith, but believe her to be near her husband.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith were both graduated from the University of Minnesota. He was a member of the class of 1905 and she graduated a year later.

On Sunday, July 6, they went on a mountain climbing expedition to Mt. Helens with W. R. Correll and a Miss Johnson. A sudden blizzard came up and they became separated from other members of the party.

Girl Saves Fast Train.

Fort Smith, Ark., July 17.—Miss Mary Lauters, 17 years old, averted a south bound fast mail train on the Kansas, Oklahoma railway from plunging into a burning bridge near Cedarville, Ark., by flagging it a short distance from the structure. Railroad officials believe that wreckers set fire to the bridge in an attempt to derail the train while it was there, they said, attempts had been made to burn the structure.

Ulysses Goes to Wed.

San Diego, Cal., July 17.—Ulysses Grant of his city and Mrs. America Workman of Los Angeles, have made a definite announcement of their wedding plans. The wedding ceremony, they said, would be performed next Saturday in a San Diego hotel. They will embark on a honeymoon voyage to Honolulu and the Orient tomorrow, but from the opposite direction, the route followed by General Grant in his tour of the world in the late 70's. Mrs. Wells' early home was at Marshalltown, Ia.

Excessive Heat Continues.

Kansas City, July 17.—There is no relief from the excessive heat in Kansas and western Missouri except that the hot winds seem a little less severe. In some parts of Kansas the mercury climbed past the dog's mark. Clay Center again was the heat center, a temperature of 118 being recorded there. Hot winds and a temperature of 109 were reported at Salina. Atchison reported 104, the hottest day in two years. In Topeka, where no rain has fallen in 14 days, 103.

PEACE SIGNS AGAIN REMOTE

BALKAN STATES IN MELTING POT ONCE AGAIN.

King Constantine's Troops Burning to Avenge Massacres of Enemy—Fearful Atrocities.

London, July 15.—The Balkan states appear to be in the melting pot. There is no sign of peace at present. Greece and Servia have declined so far to accept the mediation. The Turkish army is advancing by forced marches from Tchataldja and Bulair, apparently with the consent of Greece and Roumania to attempt the recapture of Adrianople and Thrace.

Roumania is said to be proceeding to occupy a much larger extent of Bulgarian territory than she previously declared, and Greece is burning to avenge the Bulgarian massacres, concerning which horrifying details continually appear in official reports issued from Athens and Saloniki. According to these reports, cars and fingers of Greek women still wearing marriage rings were found in the pockets of Bulgarian prisoners.

There is still talk of Russian intervention, and it is reported from St. Petersburg that the powers in control have settled the sublime point that they will not permit military operations beyond the Enos-Midia line affected by the London treaty, but the European concert is slow in moving.

GREEKS ARE ALSO ACCUSED

Bulgarians Charge Atrocities—Servo-Turkish Agreement is Reported.

Sofia, July 16.—It is confirmed that General Ivanoff has effected a splendid retreat.

Semi-official statements have been issued accusing the Greeks of setting fire to the town of Serres and declaring that the Bulgarians attempted vainly to get the fire under control. Other statements charge the Greeks with wholesale massacres and atrocities at Seres and elsewhere in Macedonia.

Turkish Armies Advancing.

Constantinople.—The Turkish delegates in the Balkan financial commission at Paris have been recalled. The Turkish armies are continuing their advance and have arrived at the Sillyri-Bulgrade forest line. Ruver Bey's troops have occupied Rodosto.

It is understood that a Servo-Turkish agreement has been reached, but is awaiting ratification from Belgrade before being signed.

FOUR PERSONS ARE KILLED

Passenger Train Crashes Into Interurban Car at East Cambridge, Ohio.

Cambridge, O., July 15.—Four persons were killed and a score injured when a Baltimore & Ohio passenger train, the Wheeling-Chicago express, went bound, crashed into a Cambridge & Byesville interurban car at a crossing in East Cambridge and demolished it.

The dead: Fred Ralney of Cambridge, Ohio; Dola Fairchild, Cambridge, Ohio; William Hutter, Middletown, Ohio; Edward McNesty, Columbus, Ohio.

The accident occurred during a terrific rain storm. The conductor of the car had gone to the crossing and signalled the car to come ahead. He said he then saw the headlight of the onrushing train, but believed it was a flash of lightning.

Roosevelt and Sons Hunting.

Grand Canyon, Ariz., July 16.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, his sons, Archibald and Quentin, and his nephew, Nicholas Roosevelt, left on an hunting trip into the "big game" country of northern Arizona and southern Utah. They will visit the Kaibab and Navajo Indian reservations and travel into the heart of the Arizona desert. Colonel Roosevelt will pass some time at Grand, visiting his new friend, Lorenzo P. Hubbell, chairman of the Arizona state Republican committee.

Pearl Harbor Work Investigated.

Washington, July 15.—Report advices from outside the navy department will be invoked by Secretary Daniels in arriving at a decision as to the completion of the Big Pearl Harbor dry dock in Hawaii, Mr. Daniels has spent two days in listening to the report of civil engineers and department officials on the difficulties in the way of carrying out the original plans for the construction of the dock as the result of the upheaval of the foundation

14 DEAD; 150 HURT IN ELECTRIC WRECK

OFFICIALS BLAME CONDUCTOR OF ONE TRAIN AND MOTORMAN OF OTHER.

REVISED LIST OF FATALITIES

All Victims Except Two Identified—Coroner's Inquest Begins at Los Angeles—Several of Injured May Die.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 16.—Fourteen persons are dead as the result of the wreck at Vineyard station, three miles south of Los Angeles, and 150 injured. Several others of the injured, whose number is declared to exceed 150, are in a precarious condition. Two bodies, those of a man and a woman, have not been identified. The revised list of the dead follows:

The Death List.

Edna Alter, secretary Associated Charities, Pasadena, Cal.; Ollie W. Ashley, Bakersfield, Cal.; Jacob Barman, Los Angeles; Merle Dunn, Los Angeles; Y. Connigushi, Japanese, Los Angeles; Sidney Johnston, Youngstown, Ohio; Miss Veronica Miller, Los Angeles, formerly of St. James, Minn.; Edward Murray, Toronto, Can.; J. Carl Murray, Los Angeles; Mrs. C. G. Norman, Los Angeles; Irwin Pitts, Los Angeles; William Taylor, Pasadena, Cal.; unidentified man, $5,000 in gold coin; unidentified woman about 22 years old.

Los Seriously Injured.

Among the seriously injured are: C. B. Craig, Detroit, Mich., internal injuries; Mrs. Irene Craig, Detroit, Mich., body crushed; Miss Ingeborg Swenson, Chicago, knee injury; Wilbur Arny, merchant, Torreon, Tex., both legs broken; Juliette Morris, Toronto, Can., nose broken; I. D. Deaton, Pasadena, Cal., face lacerations.

Officials of the Pacific Electric say that the blame for the disaster lies between Conductor Smith of the terminal of the standing train and Motorman Joseph Forrester of the one that crashed into it. The conductor insists that he waved a red lantern in front of Forrester's train in plenty of time for the latter to have stopped, and he heeded the signal.

Didn't See Train.

Forrester, who was found at his home, only slightly injured, declared he did not see the lantern until within 500 feet of the standing train. At that distance, he asserted, was too short and his brakes failed to stop the train. Officials of the road insisted that the distance was not too short. The motorman's train weighed about 256,000 pounds, including the passengers packed in the cars and aisles. Before the state railway commission, of which Frank Lyon is chief, the fact that cars of the same type, weighing 50 tons each, within less than 500 feet Forrester's train was of three cars only, as was the train into which he ran.

Thus the blame lies between a conductor, a motorman and the brakes. A coroner's jury was impanelled and the inquest has begun.

Wisconsin Mason Dies.

Sheborgan, Wis., July 16.—A. J. Bolinth, president of the Rosenberg association of Masons and a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, died here. He was 64 years old.

Engineer Dies Under Engine.

Chicago, July 16.—Three men were killed and a dozen persons were injured in two railroad wrecks on the Michigan Central near here. J. Mason, engineer, of Detroit, was buried under his engine and crushed to death when a train of empty baggage cars, running from Chicago to Buffalo, left the rails. His fireman, Clayton W. Cole, was terribly scalded to death. A few hours later, two passenger trains on the Grand Rapids division collided head-on on the Grand river bridge. One was killed.

MULHALL ON STAND ALL DAY

HOUSE AND SENATE IN ACCORD AS TO WITNESS.

Tale of Professed Lobbyist's Political Activities Are Read into the Records.

Washington, July 16.—Martin M. Mulhall, professional field agent, strike breaker, lobbyist and political worker for the National Association of Manufacturers, continued his story before the senate lobby investigating committee.

Mulhall was on the stand for six hours in that time nearly 600 letters, telegrams and scraps of memoranda were identified by him with hardly more than a glance. He remembered, apparently, the first names of members of congress, of lesser politicians, of labor leaders and underlings, of secretaries to congressmen, and of all the men he had worked with through a year of most active campaigning in many parts of the country.

Some threatened rupture between the senate and house committees apparently ended with a friendly agreement subscribed to by both sides. Under this arrangement the senate committee will retain the examination of Mulhall before he is turned over to the house; it will also put into the record all the Mulhall correspondence it cares to.

Copies of all the letters and memoranda put in the record will be furnished every member of the Garrett committee and they will have opportunity to study the case before they get to probing.

In the meantime James E. Emery, a Washington attorney for the National Association of Manufacturers, who is to succeed Mulhall in his committees, will be allowed to appear in the house wing with papers he was ordered to produce.

The senate committee devoted itself chiefly to reading into the record the tale of Mulhall's political experience. There was an occasional reference to strikes and to the "blacklist" had figured, and an allusion now and then to the labor meetings of labor unions, but for the most part it was a story of politics, as Mulhall played the game.

Mulhall's correspondence told of the efforts to re-elect Congressman Chapman Littlefield of Maine and defeat Congressman Hamilton Fish from that district, Daniel J. McGillicuddy, lieutenant governor of Massachusetts and National Association of Manufacturers agent in that state against Lieutenant Governor Mahaiah Bell in a primary election. Mulhall said it was a "dirty" animation that he had been told that Bell was "paid in that campaign."

PLOT TO MURDER GOMPERS

That is Intimation of Man Who Claims to Testify.

Thomaston, Me., July 16.—Dr. Geo. A. Crockett has expressed a desire to appear before the senate committee and intimated that he could inform the committee of an alleged plot to kill Gompers in Vinal Haven in 1906.

Biggest Sale of Foxes.

Edmonton, Canada July 16.—One of the largest sales of live silver foxes ever been completed by Jack Lossard, who has been in Yukon, 150 miles from Athabasca Landing, collecting foxes. With the assistance of an Indian and half-breed trapper he succeeded in acquiring 48 reds, blacks and silvers. The aggregate price, when sold sliver, was $23,000.

Michigan-Lake Superior Co. Fails.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., July 16.—The Michigan-Lake Superior Power company has failed to pay $5,285,000 due on the bonds held by the trust company of Philadelphia, as ordered last Friday by the United States court here and a public sale of its property has been ordered by Master in Chancery J. S. Lawrence of Grand Rapids, Mich. The trust company holds a first mortgage and claims title to all the power that is made for ten years by the power company. The sale of the property will take place Aug. 26 in this city.

Motorcycle Tour Is On.

Hutchinson, Kas., July 16.—Five hundred motorcycle riders started from here on a tour of the Rocky mountains. The riders embrace clubs from Kansas, New England, Indiana, Nebraska and the south. The tour is for pleasure. Dr. R. J. Patterson, national president of the Federation of American Motorcyclists, is at the head of the trip. One division of young women riders, composed exclusively of Kansas girls, will make the tour. The cyclists were started by Governor Hodges.

Washington, July 16.—Martin M. Mulhall, professional field agent, strike breaker, lobbyist and political worker for the National Association of Manufacturers, continued his story before the senate lobby investigating committee.

Mulhall was on the stand for six hours in that time nearly 600 letters, telegrams and scraps of memoranda were identified by him with hardly more than a glance. He remembered, apparently, the first names of members of congress, of lesser politicians, of labor leaders and underlings, of secretaries to congressmen, and of all the men he had worked with through a year of most active campaigning in many parts of the country.

Some threatened rupture between the senate and house committees apparently ended with a friendly agreement subscribed to by both sides. Under this arrangement the senate committee will retain the examination of Mulhall before he is turned over to the house; it will also put into the record all the Mulhall correspondence it cares to.

Copies of all the letters and memoranda put in the record will be furnished every member of the Garrett committee and they will have opportunity to study the case before they get to probing.

In the meantime James E. Emery, a Washington attorney for the National Association of Manufacturers, who is to succeed Mulhall in his committees, will be allowed to appear in the house wing with papers he was ordered to produce.

The senate committee devoted itself chiefly to reading into the record the tale of Mulhall's political experience. There was an occasional reference to strikes and to the "blacklist" had figured, and an allusion now and then to the labor meetings of labor unions, but for the most part it was a story of politics, as Mulhall played the game.

Mulhall's correspondence told of the efforts to re-elect Congressman Chapman Littlefield of Maine and defeat Congressman Hamilton Fish from that district, Daniel J. McGillicuddy, lieutenant governor of Massachusetts and National Association of Manufacturers agent in that state against Lieutenant Governor Mahaiah Bell in a primary election. Mulhall said it was a "dirty" animation that he had been told that Bell was "paid in that campaign."

PLOT TO MURDER GOMPERS

That is Intimation of Man Who Claims to Testify.

Thomaston, Me., July 16.—Dr. Geo. A. Crockett has expressed a desire to appear before the senate committee and intimated that he could inform the committee of an alleged plot to kill Gompers in Vinal Haven in 1906.

Biggest Sale of Foxes.

Edmonton, Canada July 16.—One of the largest sales of live silver foxes ever been completed by Jack Lossard, who has been in Yukon, 150 miles from Athabasca Landing, collecting foxes. With the assistance of an Indian and half-breed trapper he succeeded in acquiring 48 reds, blacks and silvers. The aggregate price, when sold sliver, was $23,000.

Michigan-Lake Superior Co. Fails.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., July 16.—The Michigan-Lake Superior Power company has failed to pay $5,285,000 due on the bonds held by the trust company of Philadelphia, as ordered last Friday by the United States court here and a public sale of its property has been ordered by Master in Chancery J. S. Lawrence of Grand Rapids, Mich. The trust company holds a first mortgage and claims title to all the power that is made for ten years by the power company. The sale of the property will take place Aug. 26 in this city.

Motorcycle Tour Is On.

Hutchinson, Kas., July 16.—Five hundred motorcycle riders started from here on a tour of the Rocky mountains. The riders embrace clubs from Kansas, New England, Indiana, Nebraska and the south. The tour is for pleasure. Dr. R. J. Patterson, national president of the Federation of American Motorcyclists, is at the head of the trip. One division of young women riders, composed exclusively of Kansas girls, will make the tour. The cyclists were started by Governor Hodges.

BRYAN EXPLAINS SALARY ATTITUDE

RESOLUTION INTRODUCED BY REPUBLICANS WHO LAUGH AT DEMOCRATS.

CRITICISED FOR LECTURING

Commoner Says He Lectures to Keep His Bank Account Intact—His Statement Follows—Says Salary Inadequate.

Washington, July 17.—Washington was interested chiefly in developments following Secretary Bryan's statement that he had to spend his vacation on the lecture platform because he could not live on the secretary of state's salary of $12,000 a year.

The lobby investigation, the tariff and the Mexican situation were forgotten, temporarily at least, while everybody talked about the resolution introduced by Senator Bristow calling on the president to advise congress what would be a proper salary to enable the present secretary of state to live with comfort and to enable him to give his time to the discharge of his public duties."

Resolution Goes Over.

When the Bristow resolution was up early Republican Leader Gallinger, Democratic Leader Kern and other senators immediately objected to its consideration and after a few brief exchanges it went over. It was fully discussed, however, in the house and cloak rooms at both ends of the capitol.

When Mr. Bryan's attention was called to some criticisms that had been published in regard to his lecturing, he issued an interview.

Mr. Bryan's Explanation.

"I am glad to have the criticism brought to my attention," he said, "since it is criticism of public officials. Criticism is helpful. If a man makes a mistake, criticism enables him to correct it; if he is unjustly criticized the criticism helps him. I have had my share of criticism since I have been in public life, but it does not prevent my doing what I thought proper, and I have no fears whatever that any unbiased person will criticize me when he knows the facts.

"For 17 years the sources of my income have been writing and lecturing. For the past year I have made more public speeches, without compensation and where I have paid my own traveling expenses, than I have where compensation was received. My earning capacity has been large and I have made not only an income sufficient to pay my living needs, but have saved on an average, some thing more than $10,000 a year.

Gave Up Appointments.

"In accepting the office which I have held, I gave up the opportunity to add to my accumulations for I do not expect to resume during my term the amount I have laid aside—that is, I am willing to forego whatever advantage I might derive from the acquiring of $40,000 more for the privilege of serving the country in this office during the coming four years. I will do more, if necessary, but I do not believe that the chief people will ask it of me. Therefore, until I see my way clear to supplement my expense I expect to lecture enough to bring my income up to my expenses, those lectures to be delivered during the time that other officials give to their vacations. In addition to my supplementing my salary, I hope that my friends who are able to do so without them would not do so if they did not feel that they received their money's worth, but I would be glad to spend my vacation resting instead of lecturing if I could feel that I was doing as much for the people as I have laid aside for the support of my family."

Senator Shafroth, of Colorado, declared that a salary of $12,000 a year for him he did not desire an increase of salary.

Rental of $4,000.

Secretary Bryan's home in Washington is the old residence of General John A. Logan, for which he pays $300 a year. Former Secretary Knox, who rented a house in Diplomatic Row, on fashionable K street, paid $7,000 a year, though during his term of office he received but a salary of $8,000. Senator Root, when secretary of state was increased while he was a senator and he was debarred from enjoying the increase by a constitutional provision.

The Republican Washington point out that many of Mr. Bryan's predecessors in commissioned record have been wealthy. John Hay's house on the Avenue of the Presidents was one of the finest residences in the city.

Secretary Bryan has the use of certain valuable family equipage which he enjoys to the fullest extent, but he often prefers to drive his own automobile.

Trial of Von Klein Opens.

Portland, Ore., July 17.—On the charge of stealing $2,300 worth of diamonds from Ethel Newcomb at the Lewis and Clark fair in 1905, E. Von Klein, alleged "marrying swindler" is on trial in Circuit Judge Morrow's court. The day was devoted to the selection of a jury. Von Klein also is under indictment for living polygamously with Miss Newcomb, the charge being that he married her in San Francisco shortly before coming to Portland, when he had a wife living in the east.

Ulysses Grant to Wed.

San Diego, Cal., July 17.—Ulysses Grant of his city and Mrs. America Workman Will of Los Angeles, have made definite announcement of their wedding plans. The wedding ceremony, they said, would be performed next Saturday in a San Diego hotel. They will embark on a honeymoon voyage to Honolulu and the Orient tomorrow, but from the opposite direction, the route followed by General Grant in his tour of the world in the late 70's. Mrs. Wells' early home was at Marshalltown, Ia.

BERLIN A COMFORTABLE CITY

Offers Opportunity for Passing a Winter Unequaled by Any Other Place in Europe.

Berlin.—This city is the most comfortable city in Europe. This plain statement of a plain fact doesn't mean that Berlin is beautiful as is either Paris or Vienna, but simply that as a place in which to pass a winter or to reside the entire year it offers opportunities which do not exist in Europa.

Berlin proper is not imposing, its historic interest is scanty, but the new Berlin, Greater Berlin, is a brilliant city of villas and large parks, where the streets are curved, where every view terminates the eye, where flowers rule and great spaces delight. Two years ago Berlin West, say Charlottenburg, in the vicinity of the zoological garden, was considered a suburb; today it is in the heart and not the stuffy old town, with its dingy houses and not cool fragrant streets.

And course, Unter den Linden will always be the heart of Berlin for the tourist, not alone because of the big hotels of Friedrichstrasse, Leipzigerstrasse, and the shopping district, but because the royal palace, the museums, the new cathedral, and the Lustgarten are all at the other end. But leave it at the Brandenburg gate and the Tiergarten, and e crow cannot fly any straighter than the road that leads past the Charlottenburg Chaussee; then walk leisurely through this delectable region till you reach the Charottenburg bridge, then go on the other side, stresses to the bend or junction, Halen, and with the exception of certain parts of the Grunewald, Texas you will not find a finer street in the world. There is the long Hlensdorf strasse to pursue; or you may follow the Berlinerstrasse to the end palace with the monument of Emperor Frederick III, on the Lutzenplatz. Or cut through the Tiergarten at the station and come out at the zoo, with its fantastic animal houses and fine walks, and you are on Hardenburgstrasse in front of the Hansaviertel Hansa monorial church of Emperor William—with a hideous chime of bells (Berlin churches are ugly).

The view straight up this avenue is inspiring. Some stately buildings adorn it, and at the Steinplatz there is another vast square flanked by apartment houses that set you to wondering over the ingenuity of Berlin architects and builders in devising for varying of styles, so as to mingle modern and German Baroque without offending the taste.

THINKS JAR OF JAM A BOMB

New York Judge Finds Mysterious Bundle, Which Police Sank in Water.

New York—Strawberry jam could be a terrible thing, as this police sergeant used to make—the kind that we were blinded, and then we got licked for the next fifteen days.

When Judge Thompson of Brooklyn returned from his vacation he found on floor an inkbog pasteboard box about 18 inches long and 12 inches wide in which were what appeared to be two metal cylinders. His curiosity stopped there and when the speed limit gran grace he darted downstairs and called up the police station, explaining that he had found a bomb.

Two police launches were sent to the house. At arms' length they carried the bomb to the police station and soaked it in water, where the contents of some of his fellow-policemen began to be examined by experts.

Visions of an honor medal appeared to Ward as he began to open the suspected bomb. Everybody was watching him. He severed the strings and broke the seals. Then with reverence for the "bomb" was two innocent jars of strawberry jam.

BOLT PICKS OUT A VICTIM

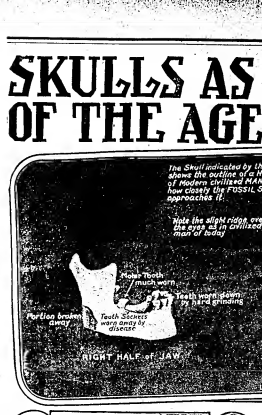
Stuns One Man in Room 3 Without 'n Any Way Affecting His Companions.

Seaford, Del.—Accompanied by deafening electrical disturbances, a violent rain and thunderstorm swept over lower Delaware leaving much damage in its wake. A bolt of lightning struck the Seaford high school was shattered and the bolt roared through the building, shocking residents of adjoining houses. A bolt of lightning entered a home at Laurel and struck Frederick Lonesco J. Milton Barnes, collector for the Diamond State Telephone company, but left uninjured several other persons in the room. Barnes was revived with great difficulty, but suffering no bad results from the experience. Many outbuildings were destroyed and much live stock was killed in the rural districts.

Dies a la Cleopatra.

Cincinnati.—Mrs. Caroline C. H. Bishop, president of the C. H. Bishop Floor company, watched the death struggles of a cat he had chloroformed. That incident, it is believed, suggested to him a way out of his own difficulties. Bishop was found dead in his home, 1005 Walnut street, and he had used chloroform to bring about the end. In a note to his wife he said business reverses and bodily infirmities had overtaxed higher than he could withstand and that "this is the only way out for me."

SKULLS AS MILESTONES OF THE AGES



THE ETHELSHAM FIND OF 15,000 OR 50 YEARS AGO?

POSITION OF SKELETON WHEN FOUND

THE village of Hailing, situated on the banks of the Medway some four miles above Rochester, stands on a low, sandy spur jutting into the broad, fertile valley of a prehistoric river, henceforth its name of Hailing will be as full of meaning to geologists and anthropologists as that of Cuiler Hill or Tilbury of Neanderthal.

At first sight the finding of a human skeleton—strangely like the human skeleton of the present day—some six or seven feet below the surface does not appear an epoch-making event, but when the conditions under which it was found are carefully considered, it is just this striking similarity to the living type that renders the Hailing man so interesting and valuable. An array of details has been presented which assures the investigators that they have here the remains of an individual who long preceded the builders of Stonehenge, a man who dates back at least to what is vaguely known as the early neolithic period, but who more probably lived his strenuous life under the severe conditions obtaining towards the end of the paleolithic age, together with the mammoth, the woolly rhinoceros and other aggressive creatures of the pleistocene.

The famous skull discovered by Mr. Charles Dawson in the Weald of Sussex last year belongs to the first chapter of the history of the future; the discovery made recently at Hailing yields materials for a much later chapter—the one giving an account of Englishmen towards the close of the pleistocene period. Between the Sussex man and the Hailing man lies an immensely long stretch of time—the time necessary for carving out the greater part of that wide and deep hollow between the North and South Downs. In that time men shed the best of his anthropoid features and assumed his modern form—for the Hailing man is son of ourselves, and the Sussex individual most certainly is not. The importance of the present discovery is that, until now, we know very little of our British predecessors at the close of the pleistocene period.

The Medway has played a part in carving out the Weald of Sussex; it has cut the "bottle-neck" gorge in the North Downs at Rochester to reach the valley of the Thames. On its western bank, some four miles above Rochester, stands the little village of Hailing—where the recent discovery was made. Between the village and the river lies a stretch of marshland nearly half a mile in width, but as the village is approached the land rises abruptly from a narrow 15 feet above the level of the river. The terrace extends along both sides of the valley. It is composed of stratified brick earths. In this terrace, between the marshland by the river and the village of Hailing, the skeleton was exposed.

The discovery was due to a fortunate mischance. Owing to the formation of some deep fissures in the friable earth occurred, revealing the greater part of a skeleton lying in situ as shown in the diagram. This landslip also disclosed a fact of great importance, namely, that the strata above were unbroken and level as when deposited in the course of many thousands of years. There can thus be no question as to the antiquity of the remains, the undisturbed condition of the ground precluding the idea of burial at a date later than that in which they were deposited.

The remains lay in a stratum of what is geologically known as brick earth, though it will be readily inferred that bricks have nothing to do with it. It is but the main wash of centuries, the fine particles being interspersed with larger, which suggest pieces of brick. Overlying this stratum was a layer of sand with a layer of more recent brick earth above it, then red loam, and finally the vegetable top soil—altogether four strata, averaging about six feet in total thickness.

The top of the stratum in which the remains were found appears to have been the land surface of the age in which the man lived. This is shown by the fortunate discovery, some 30 yards away, of the charred and blackened remains of prehistoric fire hearths, fragments of burnt bones and wood, worked flints and many animal bones. The worked flints have been submitted to expert examination at the British museum, where the balance of opinion appears to be in favor of assigning them to the paleolithic period, or, at any rate, to the time of transition between that and the neolithic age, which would place their age at some 15,000 years. Geological evidence, however, points to still further back, for the corresponding deposits on the opposite side of the Medway have yielded fossils of pleistocene times, when the hairy mammoth, arctic fox, reindeer and woolly rhinoceros roamed the land. The Hailingers, therefore, in that we have here a paleolithic encampment, and that the skeleton was one of the party, who, judging from the position of the remains, was interred a short distance below the then surface, while some religious significance is suggested by the body being buried with the head to the east.

How did the human remains come to lie in this stratum of brick earth? Dr. Edwards observed, from the position of the bones which remained fast in place, that the skeleton lay on its back, that all parts of the skeleton were represented, and that the whole did not occupy more than an extent of three feet in length—evidence that the body was in the "contracted" posture at death. A complete skeleton, much weathered and fragmentary, and in a contracted posture, could only be explained by supposing that it had been buried. The solution of the problem became apparent later. At some distance from the site of the skeleton there were found extensive remains of ancient fire hearths. These lay immediately over the stratum containing the skeleton, and under the overlying of fourth stratum. This level represented the land surface, and the skeleton was probably one of the men who sat round the hearths on that old land surface. That is the explanation Mr. Cook suggested at a recent meeting of the Royal Anthropological institute, when he gave an account of his discoveries. Mr. A. S. Kennard, who is our highest authority on the age of valley deposits, regards the strata over the Hailing man as late pleistocene in date. Dr. Cook described the flint implements found on the old land surface, but they belong to a type which was used by paleolithic as well as neolithic men.

The remains of the skeleton were forwarded to Professor Keith of the Royal College of Surgeons, for expert examination, and, as he explained to the writer, a close scrutiny revealed the surprising fact that we have here a type of man who, in many particulars—brain capacity, conformation of skull, long oval face, pointed projecting chin, stature (five feet four inches) and general build—is practically identical with people one meets in the street every day, and this notwithstanding the great interval of time that must have elapsed and the vastly different conditions of life now prevailing. Indeed, he found that the brain capacity (some 1,500 cubic centimeters) even exceeds the present-day average. In this respect the skull is analogous in that of the Tilbury fossil man, to which Professor Keith is inclined to assign an age of 30,000 years, judging from the position in which it was found, beneath 21 feet of strata. He is also of opinion that the Tilbury man and his Hailing neighbor were members of the same race, averaging over five feet in height, strongly built, with well-formed skulls and a striking absence of heavy ridges over the eyes, a race which Huxley described as the "river-bed" type, from its apparent hauntе (for type he knows to have lived in paleolithic times, since a skull was lately discovered in company with pleistocene fossils buried in a Derbyshire cave. The later portion of the paleolithic period is estimated in extend back from some 30,000 to at least 150,000 years.

This race of men was immeasurably superior in cranial development to the race represented by the Piltdown skull, supposing this to be human, and consequently hundreds of thousands of years intervened between the two. In comparing the great brain capacity of the Hailing man with that of the neolithic skull discovered near Walton-on-the-Naze, which is estimated to be at most not more than 4,000 years old, we do not find the development expected, since the latter possessed a brain capacity of but 1,200 cubic centimeters, whereas the skull of the Galley Hill man, regarded as the oldest British example (excepting the Piltdown) yet discovered, has a brain capacity of between 1,350 and 1,400 cubic centimeters. Professor Keith, in his address on "The Ancient Types of Man," notes that in an average modern man of the Galley Hill skeleton's stature "one should expect a brain of 1,450 to 1,475 cubic centimeters (and) there are many men in England today with smaller brains than the Galley Hill man." These remarks will apply with still more force to the Hailing man. Regarding such primitive types as the Neanderthal, Gibraltar and Piltdown skulls, their antiquity must be measured by many hundreds of thousands of years, if we are to understand that a process of evolution has developed such high paleolithic types directly from these progenitors.

ANCIENT FARM PLAN

Agricultural Co-operation as Practiced in Italy.

Merchants Near Florence Are Still the Landowners and Peasants Work on Shares—Landlord Sustains His Tenants.

Florence, Italy.—At the beginning of its investigation of co-operative banking societies the American commission on agricultural co-operation, assembled by the Southern Commercial congress, had the advantageous experience of first visiting a part of Europe where co-operative banks had not made much headway.

Agricultural co-operation is practiced in only one form in the country about Florence—societies for the purchase of agricultural machinery, fertilizer, seeds, etc. This is chiefly due to the fact that in the early days the merchants of Florence were the landowners, and their estates were farmed on a share basis by the peasants.

If crops were bad the landlord furnished food for the peasant farmer until the next harvest. The system of land tenure still prevails, and study of the systems near Florence has shown the commission that co-operative credit institutions are only possible where the need is great.

Comparing Italian conditions with American, one of the Florentine exports who appeared before the commission suggested that in the United States the solution of the problem of farm finance might be found in an enlargement of the operations of existing banks. Mr. Marzilli, president of the Savings bank of Florence, described a practical case in point about Florence whereby the farmer gives a mortgage in a bank and receives in return an open account for a certain amount of credit. Thus a farmer who considers that he needs a credit of $10,000 to operate his farm gives a mortgage for that amount to the bank. As he needs the money he draws on the bank. He pays interest only on the amount on which he borrows.

For the long-time loans of the farmers the savings banks are allowed to invest up to 30 per cent. of their deposits in farm mortgages. These mortgages are of two classes—for periods up to ten years and for periods of from 10 to 40 years.

The shorter-term mortgages loans are repaid by the borrower in ten fixed sums, as in the United States, but about Florence—and as regards the amortization—that is, small annual payments made upon the principal of the loan. The banks are only permitted to charge borrowers one-half per cent. more than they are required to pay depositors. At the present time the prevailing rate is five per cent., though generally it is four per cent. Money is only loaned up to 50 per cent. of the appraised value of the land.

There is also a mortgage bank in Florence, the Monte di Pascbi, founded by one of the early dukes of Florence. This bank issues mortgage debentures at three and one-half, four and one-half and five per cent., and of the debentures now outstanding are at five per cent. They are in certificates under par, which is the usual condition in Italy, and their market price compares favorably with government bonds.

The co-operative societies for purchase among the land owners have been successful. The farmers themselves do not belong to these societies, but the landowners do all purchasing of farm machinery and fertilizer. These societies are also active in educational work, and maintain agricultural experts, who travel about from village to village instructing the farmers in scientific agricultural methods.

CONWAY ACQUIRES NEAT ROLL

Ticket Agent Who Collected Refund Checks Is Rewarded by Supreme Court Ruling.

Huntington, W. Va.—When the United States supreme court sustained a two-cent passenger fare law of West Virginia it virtually placed in the pocket of John J. Conway of this place approximately $5,000.

When the law was enacted by the last Virginia legislature, in 1911, the railroads appealed to the courts and continued to charge three cents a mile, giving passengers coupons entitling them to a rebate of one cent a mile if the courts decided the two-cent law was constitutional.

Conway, who was a Chesapeake & Ohio railroad ticket agent, noticed that many persons threw the coupons away, and realizing that they may some day be good, he began collecting them. The decision found him with about $5,000 worth of perfectly good coupons in his possession.

WIND TOO SWIFT TO MEASURE

The highest velocities of the wind have only been estimated, never measured, for there are no instruments that will measure them. A Robinson anemometer was blown away when registering 120 miles an hour in Jamaica on November 18 last. The highest velocity on record is 186 miles an hour, measured by an anemometer at Mt. Washington, January 11, 1878.

But real tornadoes blow far faster than that. In the annual report of the chief signal officer for 1874 an effort was made to estimate the velocity of the wind in a tornado of that year, measuring it on some of its effects. A grain board was driven through a telegraph pole, another was driven three inches into the trunk of a tree and from these data it was calculated that such effects could have been produced only by a force little less than a cannon ball or somewhere between 600 and 850 miles an hour!

A wind-proof anemometer is needed.

Fox Skin Brings $2,000.

Twenty-five hundred dollars for an unbroken black fox skin was the record price at Seattle, Wash., a few weeks ago.

All furs are advancing enormously, and the trappers yet at the northern woods are coming home to a rich haul. Silver fox leads in percentage of increase in the last year, being quoted 120 per cent. higher than last year. Skunk and muskrat are 70 per cent. higher than last year. Pure that 40 years ago sold at four dollars are now scarce at $50. There is no kind of fur but that is worth money, and the many farms in raise fur-bearing animals are a sign that the natural supply is being rapidly exhausted.

CHINESE HUSBANDS

American Wife of Celestial Finds Him Ideal.

George Gould's Sister-in-Law Praises Spouse Who Cost Her Family and Friends Says Men of Her Own Race Are Bores.

San Francisco, Cal.—"The world may give the laurel to the American husband, but I am glad I married a Chinaman. Of course, I can only speak for myself and though I would never take the responsibility of advising anyone to marry as I did, yet I have certainly found that the Chinese make ideal husbands.

"In missionary experience I found that there happiness is the rule, not the exception. Divorce or separation are very rare. My home life is at least the equal of any American home I have ever know."

Mrs. Woog Sue Yon Clemens is a cultured, well-educated white woman, the sister of Mrs. Howard Gould, who six years ago became the wife of a Chinese merchant. Her home today is a little shop in the heart of San Francisco's Chinatown.

"I find the American men great bores. They have no conversational resources outside of their individual interests. Their women are kept at their wits' end amusing and entertaining them.

"But the Chinese are very versatile and the most striking people in the world. To them everything has a meaning. For instance, this is a real brotherhood lodge. There are no edges to friendship, so the Chinese never eat at square tables. It seems a small thing, but there is a certain fineness and sentiment among the better class of Chinese which characterizes everything they do. Indeed, I have only one regret, that I did not have the courage to take this step in my early youth."

Mrs. Woog has adopted the Chinese dress, which she likes as she likes everything Chinese.

"To me there is nothing unusual in what I did," she continued. "The Chinese are the kindest people in the world and their regard for women is most reverent. Their ideal never permits a man to disrespect a woman who respects herself. I think this is more than we can say of our countrymen.

"The Chinese woman is the mistress of her home and she is as much a coquette, as much a disciplinarian of whatever does not suit her, as her American sisters. What is even more, she husband can not endure to see her in physical labor."

Mr. Woog is a suave, good-humored, easy-mannered oriental.

"I have not seen my mother for six years. My family bitterly opposed my marriage and I learn of them only through others. I did not try to keep any of my friends. I know I was ostracized when I married my husband. But I do not think my loss is to be compared with my gain. The little stores, hung with the treasures we dig from the ruins, bounds my world. But it is very rich, for it contains a friend. When husband and wife are perfect comrades they do not need others. Only the unhappy are dissatisfied; we are supremely happy."

It costs only two cents a mile now to ride on the cars and you may take your summer vacation if you haven't spent the money appropriated for that purpose.

People are wondering what the anxious Illinois women who have been given the vote will do with it. There should be no alarm. They probably won't do worse.

The high cost of dying has been reduced, but most people will want to know what will be the effect of the tariff bill soon to be passed before doing anything desperate.

The health expert who has for years urged people to "wear no woven clothes," should not take too much credit to himself. The Paris fashions man is the great physician.

Hay fever will probably not be so prevalent this year as usual, for the hay crop will be rather light and will be well cared for that it may not catch any disease that's going round.

It might be easier for this country to grant Mexican recognition if the European powers that are asking that nation be taken could point out what there may be in Mexico that is recognizable.

The fact that twice as many crimes are committed by unmarried men as by married men—and that is now given out as a fact—indicates that women should make very efficient police officers if not intelligent voters.

Those senators who spend three months in Washington and spend the remainder of the year preaching law and building political fences should not be too severe in the criticism of Senator Borah for his decision to spend his vacation on the lecture platform.

President Wilson is no doubt doing a public service by unveiling for the deportation of authors of popular novels by appointing them to foreign posts. It is suggested that Jack London be given the post nearest the point about which the Mexican revolution revolves.

Tammany's charge that Governor Sulzer of New York is corrupt, will not be considered seriously until Tammany has made out a good case, for Tammany is always on trial and will continue to be considered guilty until innocence is established. And that will be some job.

Frank Day's paper, the Fairmont Sentinel, says that the state senate should be made up of one senator for each county. It is indeed unfortunate that the state constitution when drafted did not so provide, for that same thing would have been no reapportionment problema to solve.

CO-ADJUTORS' REMARKS.

Hinckly Times: The iron range railroads are to be congratulated upon their attitude toward the Minnesota rate law. They accepted this law without a murmur and during all the years that it was being fought in the courts by other companies was lived up to on the range. The result is that the companies have no apologies to make and no refunds to disgorge.

Browns Valley Interlake Tribune: Minnesota is really doing no small road work this year that the roads are in poor condition. In making them so that they will be easy to ride on the outset, but all this work is laying the foundation of a good system of roads, and therefore few years will witness some wonderful changes for the better in the roads of this state.

St. Peter Free Press: In Minneapolis a commission is trying to get up a modern city charter and it has a dickens of a time in coming to an agreement. One member wants public ownership and the other is afraid of it, the third favors city attorney referendum and the fourth strongly opposes it, and so it goes all along the line. The great trouble here as elsewhere seems to be an overabundance of experts.

Crookston Times: The man who bought 160 cattle to range the Gettysburg reunion would have done much better to put in sporting goods.

Cass Lake Times: Still, you don't know how bad New York might be if she didn't have any police force at all.

MINNESOTA'S FAIR IMPROVES WITH AGE

1913 Promises to Be a Banner Year in the History of the Gopher Institution.

MORE BEST FEATURES.

Exhibits, Indians, Cowboys, Fire works, Horse and Auto Races, Music, Education and Inspiration.

"Bigger and better than ever" is a slogan that seems to be the one that can be most appropriately applied to the Minnesota State Fair and Exposition of 1913. Large plans have been surely laid to bring this about by the managers of the world's biggest state fair insist that nothing but best weather during the week of Sept. 1 to 6 can prevent this year's show from surpassing, in every department, the predecessors and other such expositions in the United States. Now had weather will not prevent the exhibition of educational features and amusements from being topped off then ever before, and with the exception of some of the amusements the management will go on just the same, no matter what the performance of the weather man may be.

Of Educational Value.

The Minnesota State Fair last year offered more money in premiums than any other fair in the United States, and this year the managers have increased these offerings, making a grand total of $91,889.00. These liberal prizes, hung up in fifteen departments, insure the appearance at the fair this year of championship exhibits in every line of work and play.

In addition to the regular exhibits, there will be scores of practical working exhibits, from which the visitor can learn the operation of the latest machines, the most scientific methods of raising and handling live stock, poultry, bees, etc., and can get information in all the matters that make farming profitable. The managers are adding everything possible to make the State Fair what it should be—"the people's school for a week."

Farm Boys' Camp.

The Second Annual State Fair Farm Boys' Encampment will be a big feature of the 1913 exposition. The number of boys will pay the expense of 104 farm boys. One will be selected by a local committee in each county of the state, and two have been chosen by the managers from each congressional district. These young agriculturists will be entertained and instructed during the entire week, and will go home with new information and inspiration.

Unusual Entertainment.

As in all its schools, amusements have a big share in the Minnesota State Fair's success. Contracts are being made for the greatest list of entertainment features ever seen at any fair in America. Without overstraining, it can be said that the fair- goer this year will get more than the amount of amusement for the money that he can get at others else. Some of the headlines are:

Horse Races,

Twenty-seven thousand five hundred dollars' worth of horse racing. The fastest race horses from all over the country will compete over the famous Hamline track during the first five afternoons of fair week. In addition to the races, each afternoon's program will include a large variety of high class vaudeville numbers, plenty of good music and exciting special track features.

Automobile Program.

Saturday will be Automobile Day, and on that afternoon the speed demons of the automobile racing world will be seen in competition and each striving against the world's records. An effort is being made to secure all of the brightest stars in the racing firmament, and if present negotiations are concluded, the list of entries will include Ralph Mulford, Joe Nickerat, "Wild Bill" Endicott, Tetzlaff, Louis Disbrow, and others nearly as famous.

Frontier Days' Show.

Each evening during fair week there will be seen, in front of the grand stand, the world's greatest Frontier Days' Show. The best of this famous show that has been successful from Cheyenne, Wyo., for several years, will be moved to the Minnesota State Fair grounds, and everything exciting and instructive in the life of the "Wild West" will be vividly reproduced.

Society Horse Show.

In the Coliseum there will be held during the first five evenings of the fair, a brilliant Society horse show the program of which will include regular horse show numbers and special entertainment features.

The Best Music.

Music of various kinds will be forthcoming. Secretary Simpson is a great believer in the entertainment values of high class music and there will be at least six bands and three orchestras at work during the fair week.

Struck Natural Gas.

Swan Carlson was in from his claim on the west side of Red Lake Monday and told of the discovery of natural gas on his place Saturday evening while drilling a well. The story told by Mr. Carlson is to the effect that the Outland boys were drilling the well and had gone to a depth of 100 feet. He was suddenly called to the scene of operations and found a roaring stream of gas with some water and rocks ascending some thirty feet or more in the air. He rendered it the best possible care and applied a match to the end of the well tubing with the result that a mighty blast shot up and kept on burning until smothered with a hack-et. Before the fire was extinguished however the pipe had become red and it was not just a pleasant job to put out the fire and close the pipe.

Other reports have come in from that region to the effect that gas has been found in well drilling, but this is the first case where an actual fire test has been reported, or where the gas escaped with any great force. The entire community is anxiously waiting for further investigation along this line.—Holt Northern Light.

SYNOPSIS.

Bill Cannon, the bonanza king and his daughter Rose, who just passed up Mrs. Dominick Byan's dinner party in San Francisco to be with her father, arrive at Antelope. Dominick Ryan calls on the Cannons in a half hysterical condition for his wife, and Rose goes to the Ryan home. Mrs. Ryan is unconscious and her daughter-in-law does not feel inspired to help her. Dominick's father, Terence Ryan, a successful lawyer, is a semi-invalid. Dominick and Nancy, they have frequent quarrels, and Nancy is not a favorite with Dominick's family. Dominick discovers in a letter from his mother that she has been in financial difficulties for years. Dominick at last is able to join his wife in Carson City, where she has gone to establish residence for a divorce. Dominick's father and mother are estranged. Dominick's father has been in love with Rose Cannon for years. Dominick gets letter from wife, saying she has met Jack Duffy, an old friend, and is going to Reno for a divorce. Mrs. Ryan's mother, Esther Byan, is made manager of ranch, and Rose goes to Carson City to be with her mother. Dominick's father has a conference with Rose. Dominick's father tells Rose that Dominick is unhappy. Rose tells her father that she is not in love with Dominick. Rose tells her father that she would never marry Dominick. Rose tells her father that she would never marry anyone. Stranger sees Rose in restaurant, and they meet and follow each other. Rose's father tells her that Dominick is divorced. Rose tells her father that she is going to marry Dominick. Rose tells her father that she will go to Reno.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Storm Center Moves.

As soon as Berny had left his office Bill Cannon wrote a note to Mrs. Ryan, telling her of the interview he had just had with her daughter-in-law. He did not mention the check, simply stating Berny's decision to accept their proposal and leave her husband. The matter was of too intimate a nature to trust to the telephone and he sent the note by one of his own clerks, who had instructions to wait for an answer, as the old man did not know what Mrs. Ryan might already have heard from Dominick.

It threw its recipient into a state of agitated, quivering exultation. Mrs. Ryan had heard nothing from her son, and her hopes of the separation had sunk to the lowest ebb. Not so pronounced as Cannon, she called up Dominick at the bank, asking him if it were true that his wife had left him, and he described him simply to tell her "yes" or "no." The young man, hampered by the publicity of his surroundings and his promise to Berny, answered her with the utmost brevity, telling her that there had been a chance in his domestic life, but that he could not enter into details now. He begged her to ask him no further questions as he would be at home at three o'clock that afternoon, when he would explain the whole matter to her.

She wrote this to the Bonanza King and sent it by his waiting messenger. The old man felt relieved when he read the letter. He was confident now that Berny had not deceived him. She had told the truth, and was leaving the town and her husband, for what reason he could not yet be sure, but there seemed no doubt that she was going. They would ignore the subject before Rose, and in the course of time, Dominick would break down the unflinching resistance she had threatened to make to his suit. The old man felt buoyant and exhilarated. It looked as if things were at last going their way.

He sent a message to Mrs. Ryan, asking her to let him know as soon as possible what Dominick said, and waited in his office in a state of tension very foreign to his usual iron stability. It was four o'clock before word came from her in the form of a telephone message, demanding his presence at her house at the earliest possible moment. He responded to it at once, and to the sitting-room of the Ryan mansion heard from Dominick's own lips the story of his false and tragic marriage.

The old man listened, unwinking, speechless, immovable. It was like one thing he had never thought of, a solution of the situation that was so completely unexpected to him as death would have been. He sold nothing to Dominick about the money he had given Berny, did not mention having seen her. A sharp observer might have noticed that he looked a little blank, that the first shock of surprise over, there was a slight expression of wandering attention in his eye, a suggestion of mental faculties inwardly focusing on an unseen point, about his manner.

He walked home, deeply thinking, absorbed a little by the case with which Fate unties the knots that man's clumsy fingers work over in vain. And was glad. They were free—the boy and girl he loved—to realize his and their own dreams. It would need no years of wooing to melt Rose from stony resistance. Nobody had been sacrificed.

He felt a sense of gratitude toward Berny. Down in his heart he was conscious of a stirring of something that was kindly, almost affectionate, toward her. It did not require a great stretch of imagination to see himself and her as two knowing, world-battered rogues who had combined to let youth and innocence have their happiness. He could almost feel the partnership with her she had spoken of, a sort of bond of friendship and sympathy, a kindred attitude in matters of ethics. They had a mutually low estimate of human nature, a book cool, unscrupulousness, a daring courage that never faltered. In fact, he was sorry he had not given Berny the whole fifty thousand dollars.

"She could have got it out of me," he said to himself, pondering pensively. "If she'd stuck out for it she'd have given it to her. And she might just as well have had it."

That evening for the first time in nearly three years Dominick Ryan dined with his mother in the great dining-room of the Ryan mansion. Conversation was out with Jack Duffy, so Mrs. Ryan had her boy all to herself and he seemed quite explained. He dwelled on him as he sat opposite her, the reddened light of the candles falling on his bowed head.

After dinner they went into the sitting-room, the museum where the married cherry furniture where the family always retired when important matters were afoot. Here, Mrs. Ryan knew they sat, before the fireplace with the portrait of the late Cornelius Ryan looking benignly down on them. They had not sat late much. The subject of the young man's marriage had been thoroughly gone over in the after noon, so that the mother was spared the retort from him further particulars, and he could be as conversant with all that miserable chapter of his life as if she had lived it herself.

To-night they were both in the quiescent state that follows turmoil and strife. They sat close together, staring into space, now and then dropping one of the short disconnected sentences that indicate a fused, understanding intimacy. The young man's body was limp in his chair, his mind filled in the restorative lethargy, the suspension of activities, that follows a struggle. His thoughts shrank shudderingly from the past, and did not seek to penetrate the future. His resting in a torpor of relief, through which a dreamy sense of happiness was latent, was in its fullness, most delicate whispers.

His mother's musings were definite and practical. She could now make that settlement, share and share alike, on both her children that she had long desired—Cornelia's would be a dowry on the wedding day and Dominick's —well, Dominick had had hard times enough. She would go down to-morrow and see her lawyer about it.

At the same hour, in the house at the other rich man, the Bonanza King, having left Rose, came from the room with violent words that did not indicate bad humor so much as high feeling. He told his wife the story. He told it shortly, barely more than the main facts, and when it was concluded, forbore to make comments. Mrs. Frank, who loved joy that had possessed both himself and Mrs. Ryan without reaching the cause. He did not know what to say to Rose. There were mysterious complexities in her character that made him decide to confine his statement to a recital of facts, eliminating those candid expressions of feeling which he could permit himself when talking to Mrs. Ryan or Berny.

As soon as he had told it all he rose from his chair as if sending the interview. His daughter rose, too, pale and silent, and he put his arm round her shoulders and pressed her against his chest in a good-night hug. She kissed him and went up stairs to her own rooms, and he returned to his arm-chair at the end of the dining-table. Here, as was his wont, he sat, smoking and pondering, turning over in his head the various aspects of the curious story and its unexpected outcome. Once, to the memory of Berny weeping into his handkerchief recurred to him, he stirred uneasily—and muttered to himself:

"Why didn't the damned fool stick out for the whole fifty thousand? I'd have given it to her as soon as not."

Meantime the storm center, the focus round which the sighs and anguishes and fears of this little group had clotted, was speeding eastward in the darkness of the early night. Berny sat in its corner of her self-ties with her luggage piled high on the seat before her a pillow behind her head to the slightly slant light, intensified by reflection from glazed woodwork and the surfaces of mirrors, she looked less haggard, calmer and steadier, than she had looked for many weeks. Relief was at her heart. Now that she had turned her back on it, she realized how she had hated it all—the flat, the isolation, the unsuccessful struggle, Dominick and his superior ways.

The excitement of change, the desire for the new, the unfamiliar, the untried, which had taken her far afield once before, sang in her blood and whispered its siren song in her ears. She had missed a fortune, but still she had something. She was not plunging penniless into the great world, and she pressed herself hard against her chest where the fifty-thousand dollars were stowed inside the lining of her bodice. Thirty-five thousand dollars! It was a good deal if it wasn't three hundred thousand.

As the train thundered on through the darkness she saw before her the little flat, great cities, and after the clerk of liberty, the call of the nomad and the social vagabond, the call of the noisy thoroughfare, of the bright lights of the night and the warm street from him further particulars, that she would be as conversant with all that miserable chapter of his life as if she had lived it herself.

To-night they were both in the quiescent state that follows turmoil and strife. They sat close together, staring into space, now and then dropping one of the short disconnected sentences that indicate a fused, understanding intimacy. The young man's body was limp in his chair, his mind filled in the restorative lethargy, the suspension of activities, that follows a struggle. stone, and they were fast and late.

That feat! There was never anything to compare with it before or since. Those white, watery eyes, floating on a golden food were a dream, first imported from elysium. It was almost profane to taste it, so like a vision of eternal happiness it seemed. But we did taste it, and the luxury of it skipped past the palate and melted into the big tank, where it inspired thoughts of the loveliness of things.

And those taste—little, crisp, white shells filled with delicate bits of reserves of some kind. My, what gems of joy they were! We remember particularly the pelican feats. They were winsome little desserts; as simple and modest as lilies of the valley, and sonnitimes we thought they were related to the worm as modest and just. Oh, the sad day when they were supplanted by loes, meringues, crackers and rotten cheese. No wonder pessimism spreads itself so vauntingly!—Ohio State Journal.

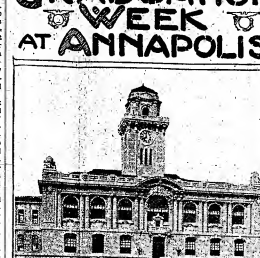
GRADUATION WEEK AT ANNAPOLIS



ACADEMIC BUILDING, NAVAL ACADEMY.

CADET no longer—long live the officer!

When the cheers died away Friday, June 5, Annapolis had passed through one of the most brilliant weeks since the Hon. Georges Bancroft, secretary of the navy under James K. Polk, founded the Naval Academy in 1845.

Friday terminated the cadet week of work and play. When the cadets were lined up, following the commencement exercises, officers replaced the garb of the cadet. The day marked an epoch in the lives of those boys who have spent four long years of study, a day the pleasant memories of which the years will not dim.

Official Reception.

At 10 o'clock the board of visitors arrived and the entire morning was devoted to an official reception. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon the board of visitors gathered at the superintendent's quarters, where another reception was tendered them. Then the cadets were lined up, resplendent in their dress uniforms, to go through the evolutions of parade. After the parade the awards were made.

The professional prizes, open to any member of the graduating class, last year went to Midshipmen Howard E. Saunders, Texas; Chas. of 1871 is award for practical and theoretical engineering, cup offered by National Society Sons of Revolution for excellence in practical gunnery, cup offered by Col. Robert M. Thompson of New York and graduate of class of 1868 for practical target practice.

On Monday night the Masqueraders, an organization made up of midshipmen, presented their annual play.

On Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock there was a review and the admiral's drill by the first battalion. At 10:45 an auxiliary drill by the second battalion. At 2:30 the board of visitors inspected the cadets' living quarters. At 6 o'clock dress parade. At 8 o'clock the superintendent gave a dinner to the board of visitors, and another performance by the Masqueraders was held at 8 o'clock.

Wednesday morning at 9:15 the cadets took part in the graduation activity drill, and in the afternoon at 2:30 to another competitive drill in seamanship. At 6 o'clock the ball was formed for dress parade. At night the cadets entertained their mothers, sisters, sweethearts and friends at a garden party given by the members of the graduating class by the cadets interested.

On Thursday a competitive infantry drill was held in the morning at 9:15, torpedo and gun drills and exercises in practical engineering at 2:30 and 4:30 in the afternoon. After the dress parade at 6 o'clock the presentation of colors for general excellence took place. The right to carry these colors is an honor which is keenly fought for by the cadets. The annual alumni dinner was held at 8:30 on Thursday night and from 9 to 1 the members of the first class entertained their friends at their garden.

On Friday graduation exercises took

Work of Artistic Paupers.

The walls of Marshall (Eng.) workhouse are covered with paintings, the work of casual inmates. A proposal to whitewash them has been met with a guardian recently, but was defeated. One of the artists is a man of the old-servoty years of age. At one end of the dining-hall are drawn large panels illustrating Biblical subjects, and each occupied a week in painting. Half of another wall is covered with floral painting slaves. On other, walls are numerous sea views and landscapes, barocial castles, churches, and scrolls. The workhouse walls have been similarly treated, the pictures being copies of English, Welsh, Scottish, and Irish picture postcards.

Mental Originality.

Anatole France has coined a phrase which may have the ring of truth in it. "What is madness, after all," he says, "but a sort of mental originality." He writes that Charles Dickens always liked madmen, and quite among the madmen good Mr. Dick, in "David Copperfield," whose innocence is described with such tender grace. "I believe writes the great Frenchman of letters; "that Dickens had more feeling than any other writer. I believe that his novels are as beautiful as the love and life that created them. I regard 'David Copperfield' as a new gospel. I love Mr. Micawber, Mr. Dick, and Traddles' madness, because the only reason left to him in the reasoning of the heart, and that is hardly ever received. What matter if he does fly too high, too far, if his wings are made of human tears? Dickens is dear to me because he has been in his prison and has suffered. He knows the sad secrets of the heart, and he would take the poor man there to give him a good time, for, too, he knows."

FREEDOM IN BURMA

No One Interferes in the Affairs of Another.

Remarkable Trait of Burmese Character Is Their Unwillingness to Interfere in Other People's Business—Each Acts for Self.

London.—A remarkable trait of the Burmese character is their unwillingness to interfere in other people's affairs. Whether it arises from their religion of self-culture or no, I cannot say, but it is in full bearing with the Every man's acts and thoughts are his own affair. Even the turnaway cook-man is free to go his own way, to think his own thoughts, to act his own acts, as long as he does not too much annoy his neighbors. Each man is responsible for himself and for himself alone, and there is no need for him to try and be guardian also to his fellows. And so the Burmese likes to go his own way, to be a free man within certain limits; and the freedom that he demands for himself he will extend also to his neighbors. He has a very great and wide tolerance toward all his neighbors, not thinking it necessary to disapprove of his neighbors' acts because they are not to be the same as his own, never thinking it necessary to interfere with his neighbors or to feel that his own is not broken.

Nor does that what habits are dif ferent to our habits must be wrong, and being wrong require correction at our hands, be very far from such thoughts. He never desires to interfere with another's habits, and in fact this own ideas are best, he'll content with that knowledge, and is not ceaselessly desirous of proving it upon other people.

And so a foreigner may go and live in a Burman village, may settle down there and live his own life and have his own costume in perfect freedom; may dress and eat and drink and pray and die as he likes. No one will interfere. No one will try and correct him; no one will be forever insisting to him that he is an outcast, either from civilization of from religion. The people will accept him for what he is and leave the matter there. If his fellow men keep the ways and laws of the Burmese habits and Buddhist forms.

Typical Burmese Architecture.

so much the better; but if not, never mind.

It is, I think, a great deal owing to this habit of mind that the manners of the Burmese are usually so good, children to civilization as they are. There is among them no rude inquisitiveness and no desire as a rule to circumscribe your freedom by either command or act. Surely of all things that cause trouble nothing is so common as the interference of one man with each other's ways, as the constant giving of advice. It seems to each of us that we are responsible not only for ourselves, but also for every one else's ways, and so we are constantly on the watch to correct and criticise. It is a habit we always to a hurry to express our disapproval and to tell the actor in our way of thinking. We are forever thinking of others and trying to improve them; as a nation we try to coerce weaker nations and to correct and improve them; and as individuals we do the same. We are sure that other people cannot but be better and happier for being brought into our ways of thinking, by force, if necessary. We call it philanthropy.

CLOCK SAVES LIFE OF YOUTH

Sound of Alarm at Unusual Hour Leads Rescuers to Befriended Suicide Just in Time.

New York.—An alarm clock, which began a long-continued ringing at the unusual hour of 2:30 in the evening in one of the rooms occupied by Meyer Rosenbaum and his son, Benjamin, on Forsyth street, caused Max Rubin, a tenant in the house, to investigate. Rubin found the boy lying semi-conscious on the floor with a gas stove "dobs in his mouth. Rubin gave the alarm, and a policeman restored the youth to consciousness.

Young Berman told Detectives Wood and Egan on the way to the station street police station that he had been out of work two months and hungry two days. His story was overheard by a man in a restaurant, to which the detectives took him for a meal. The stranger said he was Philip J. WAR REMINISCENCES

62D OHIO AT FORT GREGG

Thirty-Six Men Were Lost Directly in Front of Fort, Losses Other Regiments Suffered.

The First division, Twenty-fourth corps, was near Hatcher's Run the evening before the battle at Fort Gregg, and all night in line in a close fer field.

Colonel West commanding the Thirty-second Ohio, about ten o'clock that night asked that I be detailed from Company K to report to General Osborn's headquarters, where one from each regiment of the brigade was escorted outside of the lines to find out if it was possible for men to cross a swamp reported in our front, writes T. R. Shaw of Colo., in the Indianapolis tribune. After about four hours' time, having located the enemy's works and getting the information wanted, I reported to General Osborn's headquarters. The general then wrote me a pass, excusing me from duty for five days.

About that time a terrible cannonade began toward Petersburg and lasted until daylight. About eunup the Sixty-second was ordered in line to advance at the first brigade, First division, Twenty-fourth corps. I took my place in the ranks, and the double-quicked about five miles, when we formed in line of battle and were ordered to deploy as skirmishers. Our right was on the rebel line of works we formed on, and the left miles away.

We moved with a man of any corps ahead of us, except a disorganized army of cavalry. We passed through the stumps, which we drove before us, regardless of the shells and bullets that were flying about Fort Gregg at this time, it being beyond a ridge, but there was a three-gun battery at a bend in the line of works that shelled us, and as we got about it gave a yell and charged. The flank advanced until they could get a crossfire on the battery, and then we who we drove everything over the ridge and came to the ditch around Fort Gregg.

We kept driving their men, until we finally made a rush for an old road in our front running parallel to the fort and a few hundred yards for a skirmish line, where we swapped the fort, and kept the pioneer down until some time after noon, when we were recalled. The troops were then passing for the rear. As I was near Colonel West a staff officer told him to withdraw his men behind the ridge and let them go to dinner, and they could not get in the rear of us to the (Sixty-second Ohio) had done enough. But when the charge was formed Colonel West called to me that he wanted to follow him to fall in. Most of the regiments had passed to the rear advanced up to the front of the fort.

Captain Griffin quotes Capt. L. L. Carr as saying that on part of Osborn's charge struck Fort Gregg. Now, the Sixty-second Ohio had been directly in front of the fort. The Thirty-sixth Ohio, on the right, was also the Sixty-seventh Ohio. None of Turner's men were where any of these regiments. Captain Griffin says the colors of the Twelfth West Virginia and the One Hundred and Seventh Ohio were planted on the south side of the fort. They were seen in that position, and the reason they (the Twelfth West Virginia and One Hundred and Sixteenth Ohio, Osborn's division) went in at the northwest angle was in a hand-to-hand conflict at the south, and, as the captain admits, held the colors at that point. The Twelfth West Virginia, the One Hundred and Sixteenth Ohio and others went in at that corner of the fort, while Osborn's men went in at the same time at the front.

Optimism.

Admiral Schley once tried to have certain reforms instituted in the navy. He encountered opposition at the hands of the optimistic or lazy spirit, however, and so rebuked a headquarters optimist with a story.

"You remind me, sir," he said, "of old Jimmy Trueheart's darky. He was a laborer. Noon sounded one day, and the darky sat down with his pocket for his lunch. But the pocket was empty.

"'Boys,' he said, 'I've lost my lunch.'

"Then he gave a cheery laugh.

"'I've learned a great thing I've lost it, too,' he said.

"'Why, so, Mate?' a man asked.

"'Because,' said old Jimmy, 'I left my teeth at home.'"

The Very Kind.

"What's your name?" asked the recruiting sergeant.

"Fish," replied the applicant.

"You'll do. Will make you a 'sword' fish."

Foolish Question No. 77,832.

Dr. Kindell of the Fiftieth Illinois, while in camp at Rome, Ga., in 1864, received almost daily the same foolish question, but a new one was sprung on him by a visitor from Cincinnati. He came to the doctor with an inflamed eye. The doctor fixed him up and sent him to the hospital into the eye three times a day. The young man and the other patients, assembled in a few minutes, slightly disturbed.

"Doctor," said he, "shall I drop this in my eye before or after meals?"

Gone—But Not "Lost."

The sergeant of a band commanding one day let a sword which he was polishing fall into the sea. He was much perturbed, and said to his master:

"Arrah, an' phat'll you'r honor, can anything be said to be lost when you know where it is?"

"Certainly not," replied the officer.

"Why, then, by me, sowl and St. Patrick, your sword is at the bottom of the sea."

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

STATE BANKERS IN ANNUAL MEETING

CURRENCY BILL BEFORE CONGRESS IS SUBJECT OF DISCUSSION.

RESOLUTIONS ARE ADOPTED

Important Views Are Embodied in These—Farming Development is Not Slighted by State Financiers—New Officers.

Duluth.—Reflecting a spirit of constructive criticism, the Minnesota Bankers' association indorsed the work of the committee of the American Bankers' association that went to Washington and succeeded in having changes made to the original draft of the currency bill, and made it clear that while the Minnesota association is irrevocably opposed to the bill as it stands, it is to sympathy with the effort for currency reform and not disposed to take an attitude of hostility while the measure is still in the formative process.

Slat of Resolutions.

The resolutions as adopted provide for the increase of the membership of the committee on agricultural development and education to one from each of the ten congressional districts and one at large. Each district member is to name four other bankers in his district to act with him as a subcommittee. The resolutions also provide for sending Joseph Chapmen, of Minneapolis, and three other members of the agricultural development and education committee, to Kansas City to a national agricultural conference Aug. 26 and 27; for the support of the one-cent postage bills for mercury letters, now pending in the house and senate, for indorsement of Joseph Chapman for vice president at large of the American Bankers' association.

The paragraph relative to the currency bill reads as follows:

"We recognize that a proper national currency and banking law is imperatively needed. Resolved, That we suppose the earnest endeavors of congress to enact such a law, and believe that for the welfare of the country a proper act be put into effect at the earliest moment consistent with the due consideration of the subject.

Commend National Association.

Resolved, That this association commends the efforts and proposals of the currency committee of the American bankers' association for the improvement of the terms and provisions of the banking and currency bill lately introduced to congress, and that the executive council of this association be requested to carefully consider the bill and all amendments thereto, particularly with respect to their application to, and effect upon, the commercial and agricultural conditions in Minnesota and the northwest, and to submit their recommendations to the members of congress from this state."

New Officers Elected.

The new officials of the Bankers' association are: President, J. S. Pomeroy, Minneapolis, succeeds D. C. Armstrong, Albert Lea, who declined. D. D. Wilford, Maxkato, succeeds J. B. Pommer; treasurer, A. J. Pomford, Watertown, succeeds A. G. Wedge, Jr., Bemidji; secretary, George H. Richards, Minneapolis, re-elected. For vice president of the American Bankers' association, for Minnesota, W. A. Shaw, of Cleer Water, succeeds W. H. Putnam, of Red Wing. For member of the executive committee of the American Bankers' association, J. B. Gelerouult, of Alvin, succeeds George F. Orde, of Minneapolis.

How the dairy cow can turn worn-out or wild land into valuable farms was explained by W. F. Schilling, Northfield, president of the Minnesota State Dairymen's association.

Aged Indigent Refused Aid.

Wilson.—Crippled and barely able to walk with the use of crutches, Gus Weber has appealed in vain for several weeks to different counties of the state to be taken to a hospital, but he is declared ineligible. Weber came from Germany four years ago and has resided in no place long enough to become a public charge. The many infect were frozen and physicians have told him that proper care and rest alone will cure them. Weber has no means to be taken into a poor house, the next men went to Wisconsin, but there he was equally unsuccessful, and so has returned to Wilson.

Minneapolis Ex-Policeman Guilty.

Los Angeles, July 14.—James Murphy of Minneapolis, who shot and killed Mrs. Irene Mattie Smith, a chorus girl, to her apartments in this city April 1 last, was found guilty of murder in the second degree. Sentence will be passed July 15. According to the testimony, Murphy, accompanied by his niece, Mrs. Estelle Moore, entered Mrs. Smith's apartments where she was playing cards with Murphy's nephew, Morris Robinson, of whom the older man was said to have been jealous.

Commence Cutting Rye.

Mankato.—The cutting of winter rye has commenced in different parts of the county and the yield promises to be above the average. Barley is also ripening and hay cutting is in full progress. All crops are doing finely.

Scotstown Visits Rosean.

Rosean.—Charles R. Scostrom, assistant public examiner, was here last week checking up county officials. He addressed the teachers at the session of the summer training school, which is being held here.

RAGTIME NOT SO HOPELESS

May Yet Become the Real American Music, Is the View of Some of the Teachers.

Duluth.—That ragtime may yet become the real American music, and that there is hope for its reformation, was the consensus of opinion of many Minnesota music teachers assembled here for their annual convention.

"Ragtime contains one prime requisite of music—rhythm," said Mrs. Agnes Fryberger of Minneapolis. "It has long been associated with vulgar words, but there is no reason why this cannot be altered. Syncopation is recognized by musicians. The rhythm is what makes ragtime appeal to the uneducated musical ear and accounts for its popularity."

The public in its opinion about music usually knows only two expressions; to the masses, music is either pretty or not pretty," said Heinrich Hoevel, Minneapolis, president of the association.

"The different emotions expressed so wonderfully by the great composers pass unnoticed. It should be our aim to awaken the sensibility of the people to the fact that there is something more in music than nice tunes and pretty melodies."

VETERANS OF SPANISH WAR

Company "H" of the Thirteenth Minnesota Holds Reunion.

Shakopee.—The first annual reunion of the surviving members of company H, Thirteenth Minnesota volunteers, Philippine war veterans, was held at Shakopee. The boys were given a public banquet and welcomed by Mayor John Thiem and were banqueted at the Occidental hotel, after which a business meeting was held at the court house. Captain Wood was elected president and Sergeant Frank Albrecht secretary-treasurer. Similar reunions will be held every year, the second Sunday in July, and it is hoped to have everyone present at the next meeting.

The boys met at St. Paul and came to Shakopee with automobiles, after breaking down to a boat on the Minnesota river. Wisconsin and South Dakota were represented and Leon Landers, who is in business in Manila was also present.

DEMANDS 8-HOUR WORK DAY

Government Disturbs Promoters Who Have Figured Contracts on Ten-Hour Basis.

Minneapolis.—Some of the men of the Minnesota valley scenic highway, which the United States government will aid with $25,000, struck a serious snag when held on extended conference with the situation at the state capitol. All contracts for the road have been figured on the basis of a ten-hour work day, but Pearl D. Sargent, acting director of highways in the absence of Pratt, has ruled that contracts must provide for an eight day, to conform with the federal statute of 1912.

A telegram was sent to Mr. Sargent last evening by C. Louis Weeks, assistant attorney general, asking whether the waive this requirement on the ground that the work is for the joint state and local communities, merely for convenience sake. The reply received said the provision cannot be waived.

AUTO HITS GOVERNOR'S PARTY

Chicago, July 16. — William Widell, of Mankato, Minn., a member of Governor Eberhart's staff, was slightly injured when a 6rs automobile dashed through a procession of automobiles carrying Governor Eberhart and his staff and members of the Knights of Pythias and Butchers' Frolictive association.

The governor and his escort were on the way to take a train for St. Paul. The governor's machine was next to the one carrying Mr. Widell. Mr. Widell was thrown against the top of the automobile and was slightly cut and bruised. None of the other occupants of the car were injured. Mr. Widell was able to take the train.

Governor Eberhart and his staff were returning from Gettysburg.

View Case Lake Normal Site.

Case Lake.—The state commission that is considering the site of the sixth normal school has visited Cass Lake, where they were met and urged by arguments presented by Cass Lake citizens and others. After luncheon the visitors were taken for a trip around Pike bay, through the Minnesota National forest and also the Cass country west and south of town, and then were given a fish dinner at the lake. stopping for 6 o'clock dinner at Star Island Inn.

Wants Prisoner to "Help Out."

Milwaukee, Wis., July 14.—Authorities of the Stillwater, Minn., prison, who are seeking the return of Charles Ahlberg, known as "Shiloh, the Sailor," to complete a life sentence for 20 years, who was sent to the Milwaukee house of correction here for 90 days, may be asked to allow him to remain in Milwaukee another 60 days to help out on the hones of correction. The police volunteered his parole from the Minnesota prison and was arrested in Milwaukee.

Youth Crushed to Death.

Minneapolis, July 14.—Raymond B Meiserny, 21 years old, oldest son of Alderman Maurice F. Meiserny of the Seventh ward, was crushed to death by a train between Plato and Norwood, Minn.

Farfisault in Storm's Path.

Faribault.—A damaging storm last week resulted in the destruction of several small buildings in the western part of the city, the uprooting of trees and the tearing off of roofs. The city electric light plant being put out of

RAILROAD AGENTS MEET

Great Western Station Hustlers Hold Semi-Annual Meeting at Red Wing.

Red Wing.—The semi-annual get-together and luncheon of the Great Western Station Agents' association, which took place in this city, was one of the most successful in the history of the organization.

The delegates began arriving Friday evening and every train brought more during the day. A hundred and thirty members and their wives and daughters were at the luncheon which was served in the St. James dining room. Sunday evening the visitors were taken for a launch ride up the river.

After the luncheon a short program of talks was given. E. H. Post, president of the Red Wing Manufacturers' association, gave the address of welcome. Former Mayor Pierce extended a welcome and said that he hoped they would not think it a come down to Red Wing after having met in some of the country's largest cities. He spoke in a humorous vein of the trouble which the railroad companies were having with legislation all over the country and said he expected that we would be compelled to vote for 2 cents a mile in the near future.

SPECTACULAR FIRE OF STRAW

One Overcoms and Others Stifled By Fire That Destroys Mountain of Flax Straw.

St. Paul.—Doc Gremon was overcome by smoke in the heart of the hottest flames and the majority of the others were scorched and stifled and almost asbhocated in their struggles to get out, when the Northern Insulating compoey plant, which practically destroyed a huge pile of flax straw, was fought at $60,000. The mountain of baled straw, covering nearly an acre of ground and standing about thirty-five feet high, was about 200 to 250 in the afternoon until late Moodjey.

The fire started at the southern portion of the huge pile and the flames were leaping high when discovered by Wilfong Sheehey, 1344 Iglehart, watchman. Six companies, fighting valiant engines, were immediately sent by the fire department and Chief Niles and the auto squad lieutenants were on the scene.

About 5,000 feet of hose was used and the city firemen mounted their ladders to the summit of the stack and played a continual stream of water from every line into the blaze.

The huge heap of flax straw contained about 1,000 tons and was the surplus stock of the company, which is a subsidiary branch of the Behn Manufacturing company.

GOVERNOR AND STAFF BACK

Officers That Served in Civil War Return to Present Day Vocations.

St. Paul.—The light of military effulgence that shone bright at Gettysburg, burned softly in the refined atmosphere of the Minnesota commandery hotel at Buena Vista, Md., and gleamed in the wash until New York's dazzling glow was pressed into effacement, was still aglow when Governor A. O. Eberhart and staff got back Monday from a triumphal tour of the east. The governor, eight colonels and three majors are back in the furniture store, the physicians' practice elsewhere, stripped of the panoply of war and occupied with the arts of peace unhinged.

Never did Minnesota put up such a front, from the banks of Gettysburg, old Gettysburg town, to the Hotel Astor and Hotel Plaza in New York, collective, or diminished only by the absence of the press of business that called back the few before the tour was completed, the staff in full array, lined up.

Iron Ore Company Enlarges.

Grand Rapids.—A deal was completed on Saturday whereby John Lofberg and John Hofer of this place transferred to the Interstate Iron company 200 acres in the Prairie river district, just east of town. The purchase is supposed to be non-ore bearing, and is wanted for dumping ground for mining operations in the vicinity. The company has also secured the title to 500 acres on the south side of the Mississippi just west of town, and on this purchase is surveying, drilling and testing.

Receives $8,000 for Injuries.

Rochester.—Eugene Price of this city, who was injured several months ago at Rock Island, Ill., while braking on the Rock Island road, has received about $6,000 from that road to compensate him for his injuries.

Minnesota Party Entertained.

Albany, N. Y., July 14.—Governor Eberhart of Minnesota and his staff returning from the Gettysburg celebration, visited Albany Friday night. As guests of the Albany chamber of commerce the visitors were given an automobile ride and visited the state education building and the capitol, where they were welcomed by Governor Sulzer. Governor and Mrs. Eberhart were dinner guests of the governor and Mrs. Sulzer at the "People's House."

Faribault Chautauqua Successful.

Faribault.—A successful Chautauqua was held in this city. The attendance the latter half of the night days was good and on the last two nights many were unable to secure seats.

Faribault—The harvesting of barley and rye has commenced in this county. The crops in general promise to be good. Small grains are looking fine. Corn, which was planted rather late, is as far advanced as in any year.

NEWEST DRAPERY IN VEILS

CRAPE veils for mourning, either in black or white, are not more than a yard or a yard and a quarter in length. When a longer veil is desired —which is not often the case—chiffon bordered with crape is used instead of all crape. The new draperies require a veil almost or quite square and deep crape is used. Strips of crape are blended with the same material, which extends all around the four sides. There are several new drapes, but the two most artistic ideas show the veil falling in a double or triple box plait from the back of the turban, or draped to fall in two points at the back from bonnet shapes. In the latter case the veil provides the trimming for the bonnet.

Longer veils of chiffon with crape borders are used on both bonnets and turbans. A misty scene of the smartest styles these long veils provide the drapery for the shape, enveloping it softly, and fall in ample folds about the figure. There is for those who desire the extreme in mourning modes.

Other novelties to be noted are the use of black and white crepe together and of all white crepe for any portion of mourning. The most striking and beautiful mourning millinery to be seen on Fifth avenue is the white ones. Shapes are covered with this fabric and trimmed with illies, roses or other flowers carved out of white crepe. The same idea is carried out in black. Flowers of white crepe and the beauty of the fabric itself make for it a triumph above all other materials.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

FOR NIGHTGOWN OR NEGLIGEE

Exquisitely Pretty Robes Servo Both Purposes—Crepes de Chine and White Lace Chiefly Used.

Alluring robes to delicately colored crepe de chine and white lace are listed as nighgowns, but may quite as properly be worn as negligees, and most women buy them for that purpose. The back and front, each cut from a single breadth of double-width crepe de chine, are so gradually sloped from the yoke edge—finished with an a-jour-banded "ruffle"—that what has nowhere is there an atom too much fullness. At the top the crepe de chine width at back and front are sloped at the right side and sewn in a point to that shoulder, while the other side is caught under the left arm. The entire lower section is sewing from a deep yoke of white lace whose neck is drawn taut by a ribbon run heading after the robe is on, but there is no other opening and no fastening to bother with The elbow sleeves are simply wide puffs of lace ending in narrow ruffles gathered with ribbon and beading.

MISSES' DRESS

Misses' dress of royal blue crepe and light blue accordion pleated voile. Broad gutcha belt with stiff bow.

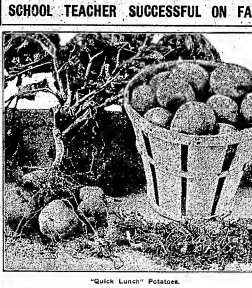
Wonderful Hosiery.

The finished shirt idiosyncrasies beautiful stockings. There are black and white silk stockings with Egyptian blocks, hand-embroidered stockings in many charming patterns, and stockings of real lace. There are also clocks of real lace on silk. Silk fish net stockings are worn over a color.

Rose Flavoring.

Fill a glass bottle with fresh, fragrant petals, covering them down to its fullest capacity; then pour in rough corn alcohol to submerge.

SCHOOL TEACHER SUCCESSFUL ON FARM



"Quick Lunch" Potatoes.

(By JEANETTE PIERSON.)

When I changed my vocation from school-teaching to farming six years ago, some of my acquaintances predicted a lamentable failure.

"A city woman can't run a farm," they said. "She's a theorizer who meets with varying degrees of bluntness, and everybody was so certain on the subject that I might have been turned aside from my purpose, but for the facts that the farm had been bought and my raged parents earnestly desired to spend their declining years in the country.

With all the talk about 'intensive farming and diversification mere theory and speculation?' I asked over and over. Yet, as I say not succeed, I told my friends, "for I am not going to run my farm in the old way. To depend wholly on a single crop or on two crops that grow side by side is to put private customers at 15 to 20 cents a pound.

I sold some of the choicest combs honey to hotels at 14 to 15c. This season I have had orders for more for grit in addition to $180 received for honey.

The brunch of business requiring intelligent care, but it is worth while. Bees must have a snug, dry, well-ventilated place during the cold weather, they must be guarded against what is known as foul brood. When I have a weak or unsatisfactory colony I change the queen and give them clean new quarters.

It is a good plan to change all hives once a year, practically every spring. All lids hives should be cleansed and fumigated. No season has yielded less than $200 in my apiary, and the amount has reached $400 twice. This is practically clear profit.

Since the second year on the farm, I have sold $100 worth of fruit and vegetables annually. These animals grew into money fast, and do not require as much attention as either chickens or cattle. Pigs should have a comfortable lot and a patch of roots with clean water and shade.

I have found sugar beets, artichokes, and carrots valuable crops for hogs. The artichoke is particularly handy as a profitable, providing an early feed for-ager. Later in the season a field of peas is a good thing, fatt before the finishing up with corn.

I have raised sugar beets to 250 and 800 pounds at ten months of age, at a cost of less than $5. I have even a good deal of hog cholera and other diseases, but not on my own place. I provide clean pens and change them often, and I also change pastures from year to year.

The little farm takes vigilance but it is not a drudge. After these few years of experience I claim that a woman can succeed practically as well as a man on a farm.

A point which I have gained over the established farmer in the case, both incomes every week in the year. I not only receive this for sale of honey or fruit-cets but I save myself from possible failure. The farmer who trusts to one big crop or to a dairy is far more to have disastrous years.

Given the plan is conducted so that there is a regular income from a variety of little things and the characteristic sense and industry to give success to a man or a woman.

LITTLE TROUBLE TO GROW HERBS

Not Used as Extensively for Medicinal Purposes as Formerly—Sage Desirable.

The herb in the garden seems to have gone out of fashion, as it is seldom found in the modern garden. Herbs are not much used for medicinal purposes any more, at least not in the same degree as they were of old. Those who use them for seasoning probably prefer to buy what they need rather than to go to the trouble of raising them. It is little trouble to grow them, however.

Good, rich soil is required, and then a little care in planting and the rest of the herb bed. The beds need a covering of leaves in the fall for winter protection. Sage is a very desirable herb for any garden, as the powdered leaves are excellent for seasoning many articles of food. Sage leaves should be cut three or four times during the season, dried and placed in covered jars.

Watering Horses.

When possible to avoid it, never give a full draught of water within an hour after feeding the horses. This effect is to carry much undigested food into the bowels, producing serious disorganization thereof.

Avoid Chicken Pox.

Chicken pox among the fowls can be avoided by feeding plenty of charcoal and occasionally some sulphur. It is a blood disease, aggravated by unclean surroundings.

DAYS OF HIGH HEELS ENDED

Sandals Which, With Their Accessories, Are Remarkably Pretty, Assure Downfall of "Stilts."

Off with your high stilts, Miss Abreast-with-Fashion! Down to with in a quarter-inch of the pavement with your heels! For that is what sandals are going to bring you to. And then won't you be an insignificant little person! But as you'll certainly adopt sandals, you may as well learn that they're kept on with Ribbons laced about the ankles—a horrid nuisance, the lacing—and tied there in bows or clasped with tiny buckles. The buckles are certain to be more popular than the bows first, because they're more easily adjusted and, second, because they're so pretty. One of the prettiest pair as yet brought out is in three tones of gold set with Brilliants, eight colored stones. Another set is of an opaque dark blue stone, a third of the tones of silver set with amethyst and topaz, and a fourth is dull gray finished metal set with sapphires. Then there are the buckles of tone, tone shell hearing silver nail heads and of platinum set with rhinestones and of gold set with pearls.

New Wrinkle.

The fingers and hands of often badly kept women are hidden under the uppers comparatively new. Where there is a baby in the house these may be turned to good use. Place one of baby's socks on the gloves, the leg part of the sock and the heel around part of the glove being together. Then cut off the foot part of the sock and hem or sew carefully into shape with flat seams. Where you have a good lightweight sock with fine ribbed top is suitable for making. The top should be stretched around the wrist and the wear caused by safety pins.

Violet Holder.

An extremely simple and practical rubber novelty comes in the shape of a bunch of violets, and is designed for the protection of a corsage when the natural flowers are worn. It is made of three rubberized silk, the shade of the viole leaves, and is outlined with a green wire. When worn it effectually prevents the penetration of any moisture to the gown. The wire edge permits of shaping the holder to the bouquet proper, and the latter is then attached to the corsage or wherever else desired.

Quaint Effect.

The streamer trimming for hats is being favored by both French and English women. Among the novel quaint effects to be considered is one showing an inch-wide black velvet ribbon draped from the right side of the crown and caught under the left shoulder, where it falls unrestrained to the hem of the gown, says the New York Herald. Only picturesque or youthful woman should undertake the streamer trimming.

Useful Cheesecloth.

Cheesecloth is both cheap and useful. It makes the best dust cloths to excellent for any sort of straining, to tie over silk crocks, to cover fruit or anything not to be exposed to the open air, is fine to apply a varnish, and for polish finishing, makes good shoe cloths and dainty window curtains. Soft comforters may be made from it.

Seshes With White Frocks.

Sashes in red, green, black, white and yellow, combined in stripes, are made of wide silk ribbon with a central satin stripe of velvet. These sashes are finished with black tassels, four or five inches long. They would supply character and style to white frocks of crepe or muslin.

Economy in Eggs.

When hay and grain are sold off the farm, there is a rapid loss in soil fertility. When products are marketed in the form of milk or meat the loss is materially less. The fertilizing values in one ton each of some of the standard farm products, based on the selling price of commercial products in Illinois would make the manurial element in butter, worth $9 cents; of milk, $3.50; of corn, $6.75; of oats, $7.36; of wheat, $7.76; of clover hay, $9.00; and of alfalfa, $12.

You are losing good money if you are not patronizing the shoe sale. You can easily make a dollar on a pair of shoes.—Big Store.—Ad

Attorney and Mrs. Chas. E. Boughton and son Charles have returned from Park Rapids, where they had been for a visit with relatives. They made the trip by auto.

Lawrence Monrogan inspector with the state dairy and food department, "slept" Red Lake Falls this week. He found little to criticise adversely and nobody was "pinched".

Misses Cora Paul and Zella Quesnelle and Robert Zaiser and Paul Brunelle made up an auto party driving to Grand Forks yesterday to attend the North Dakota State fair.

Round on the street, Tuesday afternoon, a lady's watch. Owner can get property by calling at the Gazette office, identifying the watch and paying for this advertisement.

We have now the most complete line of children's shoes we ever had. We can give you anything you call for in the Black Diamond line—the best child's shoe made.—The Big Store.—Adv.

Mrs. E. F. Marshall, Miss Lou Fletcher, Miss Sutton of the summer school faculty, and Dr. N. B. Watson and Dr. G. S. Fairchild made up an auto party driving to Maple Lake Sunday.

Miss Elva Akenson, who has been in Minneapolis and St. Paul during the past several months, arrived in Red Lake Falls Friday and will remain at the home of her parents until the early fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Swan Akenson left Friday on a rather extended trip. They will visit in the twin cities and at several points in southern Minnesota and in Wisconsin and will be gone three or four weeks.

The Higinbotham Land company this week sold the John Flanagan farm, north of town, to Fred Meier of Forest City, Iowa. Mr. Meier will lease the farm for a time, though he may conduct the farm himself later.

Mrs. Yorkick Melver and little son, Douglas, of Hoopla, N. Dak., are here for a visit with Mrs. Melver's father, Nyn. W. H. Hodge, and with her mother, Mrs. J. J. Herbeson of Chinook, Montana, who is a guest at the Fisher home.

Od Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Dudden entertained at 6 o'clock dinner in honor of Mrs. Simons, of Minneapolis, whose husband is touring Europe. The guests included Mrs. Simons, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Myers and son and Mr. E. R. Montgomery.—Crookston Times.

Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Klindseth and son Harold returned Saturday from a visit to Ft. Francis, just across the Canadian line. They made the trip partly by boat, going to Warroad on the Great Northern and from that place to Ft. Francis by boat. They found it a most delightful trip.

Maggie Fabien, twelve years old, was quite seriously injured Monday morning. She was riding behind a team that was hauling a load of cream to the creamery when, something, the horses became frightened and commenced to "act up." The little girl became frightened and jumped from the rig and as she did so one of the horses kicked and one hoof struck the little girl in the face. Her forehead was so seriously lacerated that it was necessary for a physician to take half a dozen stitches in dressing the wound. However, her injury is not serious as at first feared and there will be no permanent ill effects.

No, Madge, your ears deceive you. What you heard last night was not the band concert scheduled for next Tuesday evening. But, unfortunately, the band is liable to be held responsible for the performance. The Gazette is going to make a suggestion. Band regulation to be effective should extend to a regulation of the noises that band boys make in public places. Such control would not be such a radical interference with personal liberty as one may believe. Effective band regulation every-where provides against the use of instruments except for actual concert work, rehearsal or practice and bars the public appearance of band members except under authority of those in charge of the organization. Nothing detracts so much from the effectiveness of the concert work of the band as the public "performance" of what may seem to be the band but is in fact not such. Table to that organization. Red Lake Falls has an excellent band and that is the special reason why its good reputation should be well established.

Otto Zaiser is at Grand Forks attending the fair.

For Sale—Three good young mules. Louis Sieff.—Ad.

Kathleen Spillane is visiting with friends in Grand Forks this week.

Lucy Morin suffered a fractured collar bone Monday as the result of a fall from a fence.

Special on new fall goods commencing July 26 and continuing ten days.—A. Ruberius.—Adv.

Frank Freund returned yesterday from a business trip to Thief River Falls, Oklee and Bemidji.

Just received a carload of fresh clean salt, will sell at $1.40 per bbl. while it lasts.—LeBlanc&ere.—Adv.

Brick-a-brac sale at The Big Store. Flower vases 5c, china cups and saucers, 12½c, cut glass tumblers 10c, etc.—Adv.

Miss Erma Schreiter has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. J. Pedersen, at Crookston and of friends at Grand Forks this week.

For sale or rent—The Nick Majerus house on the North side. Inquire of Mrs. Nick Majerus, Thief River Falls, 216 St. Paul Ave., So.—Adv.

W. A. Schreiter has recently disposed of his E. M. F. car in a trade with the Helm Bros. Auto company and will soon be driving a new car.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Supernant of Terrebonne entertained a large number of relatives and friends at their home Sunday and all report a good time.

John Dragger left yesterday on a business trip up the Great Northern line. He will visit Badger and Warroad and expects to be away until the end of the week.

M. J. Ford this week sold to John Manley a team of three-year-old unbroker Belgian colts for a consideration of $425. This is probably the largest price ever paid in the county for a team of unbroken colts.

Among the North Dakota state fair visitors at Grand Forks is Dan Paul, though for him it is more like "home coming week," for he was a resident of Grand Forks many years.

Dr. N. M. Watson and Edmund Cadieux and Ed. Trombley, brother in law and brother-in-law of L. C. Cadieux, have been at Red Lake County hunting and very in that city at the time Mr. Cadieux submitted to a surgical operation.

On Monday evening Miss Margaret Kane and her fiance, Attorney S. Dahl of Virginia, who was a guest at the Kane home, were among the victims of a surprise perpetrated by the members of the F. and P. B. and their husbands and—and sweethearts. A delightful evening was spent with cards and music. Miss Kane was presented with a pretty piece of cut glass.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Heopelio on Saturday received a message announcing the death of Mrs. Heopelio's father, Narcisse Hebert, of Cavalier, N. Dak. They left at once to go to Cavalier and were there for the funeral which was held Monday. They went to Crookston with an auto and took the Northern Pacific train for Cavalier. Mr. Hebert was 88 years old and a pioneer of North Dakota.

The Gazette today received a card from Rev. David V. Richardson, who has been sent for a visit to his old home in Ohio. He was, when the card was written, in Washington, D. C., and said that he had paid an interesting visit to the United States senate and was about to go through the congressional library. From Washington he will go to New York city and after a brief stay in the metropolis will start on the return trip to Red Lake Falls.

L. C. Simons, president of the Farmers National Bank, is now on a tour of Europe in company with L. C. Hanson, the Thief River Falls banker. George F. Hennings received a card from Mr. Simons a few days ago. The card was written in London and stated that he was about to sail for Holland where he would be joined by Mr. Hanson who had been spending several weeks in Denmark. They expect to visit many of the European countries before returning to America.

Next Wednesday will be the last day of the summer training school for teachers which will then have been in session four weeks. The examinations for teachers' certificates will be held on the three days follow ing the close of the summer school, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week. Between sixty and seventy student-teachers have been enrolled in the summer school. This is a smaller number than usual. The reason given for the decline in attendance is that other summer schools in the state have increased in popularity and the Red Lake Falls school makes a good showing in comparison with other similar schools. The summer sessions at the five state normal schools are largely attended and this is believed to account for the lighter attendance in the county schools.

A little late but lots of summer weather ahead of us yet. Why not buy a straw hat at half price?—The Big Store.—Adv.

Mrs. J. J. Harkeson of Chisholm, Mont., arrived in Red Lake Falls Friday, and will make an extended visit here at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. H. Fisher.

Another lot of those fine Bismark dill pickles received today. Also hot cakes, Logan berries 35c,w orth 50c. 10 kinds of cookies, all fresh 17 oz. lic mince meat 19c, 20 oz. jar preserves 29c.—The Big Store.—Adv.

Mm. Munch, the game warden, of Crookston, was in the city yesterday. It was another weather for quit door sport, but it is said that Mr. Munch did not make a catch. Local sports are so enthusiastic over shooting clay pigeons that they wouldn't shoot a wild bird if they had a chance.

Findeisens have moved to their large new machinery warehouse on Main street, which is now completed. Both the machinery and automobile business is now being conducted at the new place. A little later in the season work will be commenced on the garage that is to be constructed on the Palace hotel corner.

From the spring of autos that left the city this morning driving west one would think that the Red Lake Falls automobile club was making a stockbility run. It isn't exactly that, though members like it. Most people who had not previously visited the North Dakota state fair at Grand Forks drove to the North Dakota city this morning.

D. B. Jewell, instructor in agriculture in the Deer River schools, is spending the week here giving the summer school students special instruction in agriculture. He is employed by the state department of agriculture. Several summer school to offer special instruction in agriculture. Mr. Jewell has contracted with the people of Koochiching county for his services as lecturer and demonstrator next year.

W. H. Fisher drove his new Buick car on a long trip last week which terminated in Red Lake Falls Friday night. He drove from Minneapolis to Forest City, Iowa, where he was joined by four prospective purchasers of Red Lake county lands for the drive to Red Lake Falls. This drive was 350 miles, 250 to Red Lake Falls, a distance of 520 miles, was made in three days and without serious mishap in spite of the fact that many long stretches of muddy North Dakota were encountered.

Dr. N. M. Watson attended a big blowout Sunday at Warroad. Newspapers that might be counted one big one. Early in the day he attended ons on the southwest corner of his automobile and a later one on the northwest corner. Still later he attended one on the northeast corner and then one for good measure. These blowouts were so accurately timed that the doctor could while attending them be in the shade of his car which was during the whole performance constantly between the city and Maple lake.

County Commissioner L. C. Cadieux of Terrebonne township is seriously ill in a Grand Forks hospital. Mr. Cadieux's health has been poor for the past few months and recently it was decided that an operation was necessary and on Sunday he was taken to the hospital at Grand Forks. The operation was performed yesterday morning and a condition was found that made the operation a very serious one. The patient withstood the shock of the operation well and is resting easily today, but his illness is of such a serious nature that his condition is still considered critical.

The sober, quiet, innocent looking chemical we always keeping on hand is little interest. With the herd in the mighty Hazy shown, which was titled to appear in Red Lake Flats, Monday July 28, are to be found some of the finest specimens ever exhibited in this or any other county, standing the only living baby black cannel known to man, its mother having died upon its birth. While a party of hunters were in the high and cold regions near the lake of Lednar last December in search of rare animals for the museum they shows the men sighted a small number of wild caribou and singling one from the number succeeded in capturing it, the latter having been the like before the collectors became filled with the idea of sending it down to the mighty Hazy show patrons, next week. Nelson city and vicinity is the original of the capture, but a baby calf has been born in the herd since its mother. The beast is thriving, giving no trouble and all kinds of difficulties have been encountered. Scientists and all students of natural history will find this animals unadvised an interesting study.—Adv.

Dr. Spofford will be in Red Lake Falls Sept. 8. At Grand View Hotel. —Adv.

CERTIFICATE OF APPROVAL.

This certifies, That we have examined the Treasurer's records and vouchers, and that we find them and this report correct.

Dated this 15th day of July, 1913.

I. LEMIEUX, District Clerk.
N. M. WATSON, Director.
O. SALSTROM, Director.

Attention, Mr. Farmer!

HAVE you been having binder trouble? Binder trouble is very often in the twine---you must have a smooth, even twine without bunches in it and which will feed freely to the very end without balling up and ravelling. You can get this binder satisfaction in Plymouth or Deering Twines.

These old established brands are something to swear by, not at. By using poor twine, that is a cent or two cheaper a pound, you will lose more in a couple of hours, when your wheat is dead ripe, than your whole twine bill will amount to.

We have just received two carloads of these twines and the Light Running Deering Binders. We can now supply you with these necessities or any other implements from our new warehouse just north of the Wilcox lumber yard on Main Street. With the added room these new quarters afford we are in a position to give you quicker, better service in the repair line as well as in the implement field. Call and see our new quarters when you are in town.

NEW DRESS GOODS
....JUST ARRIVED....

HAVE just received our new line of Fall Dress Goods and Silks, which comprise all the latest novelties such as Pampoer Chuddah, Chete De Cheval, Velvet Cords, Fancy Whip Cords, Sicilian Suitings, Serges in all shades and prices and many others, besides a large line of fancy Silks. We are going to offer these goods at a special discount for the next ten days commencing FRIDAY, JULY 25th.

This will give everybody an opportunity to get the latest goods at reduced prices, and we trust everybody will avail themselves of this opportunity and supply their wants for the coming season. There will be many other lines at bargain prices that it will pay you to take advantage of.

RED LAKE FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINNESOTA, THURSDAY, JULY 31, 1913. VOL. XXX—NO. 44

CROP CONDITIONS CONTINUE RIGHT

RYE HARVEST ABOUT COMPLETED. BARLEY WILL BE IN SHOCK IN A FEW DAYS.

The rye harvest in Red Lake county is about completed and the remains are in the midst of the barley harvest. With favorable weather conditions the grain is being taken care of in fine shape.

Some timothy is now being cut for seed. The seed is of good quality though the timothy this other has crops is not quite so heavy as in some years past. However, it is not a short crop, but a little light because of the "dry spell" early in the season.

A very few farmers have cut some oats and wheat is turning in some places. But the harvesting of these crops will not be an in earnest for several days.

If anyone doubts the prospect that Red Lake county will have a bumper corn crop this year he should go for a drive through the country. Iowa and Illinois farmers who believe that corn cannot be successfully grown here are invited to come and take a look.

Prize Contest for Young Ladies.

E. J. Dusterhoft, manager of the Lyric Theatre, will give two gold watches to the ladies that sell the greatest number of admission tickets commencing Aug. 2nd and ending Oct. 1st at 7:30 P. M. There will be two nice ticket books furnished the contestants, one and 2 size, (it's as many as you like, at the ticket office). Every Saturday at 7:30 you will turn in the amount sold and the amounts will be shown on the screen. The tickets will be accepted for admission to any show.

The lady selling the most tickets will win a 15-jeweled 25-year case watch, the second will win a 7-jeweled 20-year case watch. The first 5 ladies to enter this contest and not winners of the two capital prizes will receive a 30-day complimentary ticket at the close of the contest. The window will be changed and be on display on the 1st day of August in the window at Holtman's jewelry store. Call and inspect them.

The cashier will be barred from this contest. The contest will open Aug. 2nd at 7:30 P. M. Get an early start and win the prize. See the cashier or manager for further information.

MEN BURIED ALIVE

And Live to Tell About It. Were Working in Sewer at Thief River.

Joe Johnson and Theodore Swanson, two men employed digging sewers at Thief River Falls, were caught by a cave-in Tuesday. One man was buried to the chin and the other was not completely covered and though it was two hours before they could be taken out of the trench, both men are alive and apparently neither one has suffered any serious injury.

Johnson was completely buried but some timbers held the dirt in such a way that he did not have to bear its weight and he was able to breathe.

TO LET CONTRACT.

Bids for School House Will be Considered Monday.

The members of the board of education will meet on Monday August 4, to consider the bids for the contract for the construction of the new public school building and to award the contract to the fortunate bidder. Work on the building will be commenced very soon after the contract is made.

MAY HAVE NORMAL DEPARTMENT

IN FUTURE YEARS NORMAL TRAINING WILL BE REQUIRED OF ALL TEACHERS.

Whether there is to be a normal training department in the Red Lake Falls public schools depends almost entirely upon the desires of the young people who plan to engage in teaching in the future. A teacher for the normal training department has not yet been engaged, but the work of that department will be continued and a teacher engaged if enough of the young people express a desire to take the work. Any young people who may be interested in the work should communicate with Johnny DeForge, the county superintendent, or some member of the board of education at once. The work cannot be continued and the special state aid received unless the enrollment reaches a given number.

In this connection a law passed by the last legislature should be of interest to all young people who plan to be teachers.

After Aug. 1, 1915, only those can teach in the rural schools who have had eighteen months teaching experience or have graduated from a normal school or from a normal department of a state high school. From this it will be seen how important is the continuation of the work of the normal department to prospective teachers.

Any young man or young woman who will be at least eighteen years old next June and has four high school credits may enroll for the work of the normal department.

DEATH OF L.C. CADIEUX

Pioneer Resident of Terrebonne Passed Away Sunday Evening.

L. C. Cadieux, county commissioner and pioneer resident of Terrebonne township, died Sunday evening at 7:10 o'clock at Grand Forks where he had been taken a few days previous for an operation.

Though a comparatively young man being only forty-eight years old at the time of his death, Mr. Cadieux was one of the pioneers of Red Lake county. He came here with his parents thirty-two years ago this month and has been on the farm in Terrebonne township since that time. He was born in St. Ifrida, Canada, and lived there until he was sixteen years old when he came to this country with his parents.

Mr. Cadieux is survived by his widow and five children, the eldest 22 years old and the youngest 2 years old. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Louis Cadieux of the city and there are three brothers and two sisters. The brothers are Edmund Cadieux, L. J. Cadieux, Z. A. Cadieux; the sisters, Winnifred, who is Mrs. Trombley of this city and Dora Cadieux.

Mr. Cadieux was a highly esteemed and useful citizen of Terrebonne township and had taken a prominent part in the affairs of the community. In the election lost fall he was chosen a member of the board of county commissioners.

The funeral was held at St. Anthony's church, Terrebonne, of which deceased was a member, at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, Rev. Fr. LePlick officiating. The funeral was largely attended.

OBJECTION TO AN EXTRA SESSION

CONSIDERABLE OPPOSITION TO THE GOVERNOR'S EXTRA SESSION IDEA.

St. Paul—(Special)—Governor Eberhart's almost emphatic declaration made on a number of occasions that he will call a special session of the legislature for the purpose of passing a public utilities commission act would seem to indicate the possibility of a fall down, but just the same there is some quiet talk to the effect that this proposition may be called off. The story going the rounds is that the business interests of the state—not the utilities, please bear in mind—have about convinced his excellency that the call for a special session at this time would be inadvisable. This is taken to mean that the call, if made, will be delayed beyond the time suggested and probably dropped altogether. The railroads, it is reported, have been especially active in trying to head off the special session. Another line of industry naturally opposed, but which has so far failed to show its head, is the brewing trade. To say that it is not interested would be to say what is not so. What interest is in the gossip and how much truth lays back of it is impossible of verification, first, because of Governor Eberhart's natural disinclination to say yes or no when any public matter is involved, and, further, because no stand taken by him will not admit of any quibbling just now, but that the business interests are opposed to a special session is quite natural. That they should be trying to point out to him inconsistences that they would suffer if a special session is called is also quite natural. No one knows it better than they and perhaps even all there may be more truth than fiction in the talk which is going the rounds. All I can suggest is to wait and see.

\+ \+ \+

About the special session of the legislature, which the governor has threatened to call and which I believe he will call, the gossips to the contrary, the fear of the railroad interests come from a long period of inaction. Every two years they are kindred interests have to meet a line of legislation more often demagogic than sane and out of the lobbying which follows comes charges of corruption and the charges of some journalist. Because of it all office holding has been brought into disrepute. You have undoubtedly heard the wife often expressed that all elections were further apart than at present and that congress met about every four years. The cities have no monopoly of this talk. The forming element has more than once expressed the wish and it is pretty certain that all are now in with the hope that the present congress will have a quick finish. We all get sore when our nose pat hobby is and on, after all, there may be more than smoke in the smudge which the gossips have started.

\+ \+ \+

E. E. Smith, chairman of the state Republican central committee, who is probably closer to the present administration than any one else in the state, is now in Europe, where he is taking the baths at Carlsbad. This is old news, but I mention it because of the fact that the gossips I have spoken of credit him with taking a decided stand against the extra session idea before leaving. It is said that he argued with Governor Eberhart against the call, but that his excellency insisted that in view of his veto of the Minnesota central bill and the Nolan utilities bill as applied to Minneapolis he could do nothing else but call the legislature in special session to pass a statewide control measure. Again I am compelled to admit that I know no more about the whole thing than the gossips, but still will go back on the job soon and then something will happen. The Minneapolis man is pretty much in and what he has to say will cut some ice with the administration.

\+ \+ \+

One of the biggest bonding concerns in the United States is the National Surety company, but even it is not proof against the strong arm methods of Secretary of State Schmahl, who last week notified the concern that it must either pay its debts or quit doing business with the state. Some months ago the state contracted for the construction of a drainage ditch in Roseau county. The company failed and the completion of the work was attempted by its bondsmen, which in turn failed. As a result the state suffered a money loss of over $6,000. Mr. Schmahl learned that the National Surety company had purchased the assets of the defunct bonding concern and he at once asked for a settlement. It was not forthcoming and now Mr. Schmahl has notified the National company that until the $4,000 is paid he will refuse to approve any of its bonds. As a result the company has lost considerable state business.

\+ \+ \+

Asa M. Wallace, formerly editor and publisher of the Fairfax Standard and now deputy state fire marshal, has purchased the Sauk Center Herald, owned by A. M. Wells. He will take possession August 1. The press notice that Mr. Wallace is preparing to leave the service of the state, but he refuses to admit that such will happen, for the present at least. Mr. Wallace is very loyal to those who accommodated his desire to break into the officeholding game to do any knocking, but I have the hunch that the new order of things has been anything but what he expected. He said the other day that he longed for the time that would find him again wearing the newspaper harness.

\+ \+ \+

This is not only a spirit of criticism, as the department has done some good work despite the heavy load on the taxpayers, but is the state fire marshal's department worth the money? There have been times that the department has been a dumping ground for political favorites and because of its fat fee system has been imperiled. Last year the department scalped over to the extent of nearly $10,000 and the most rigid economy has been necessary to get it back on its feet. Several employees had to retire, among them Deputy Fullerton, formerly connected with the state game and fish commission. It is said, with some truth, to his former duties Sept. 1. The new appropriation for the department will be $15,000 available.

\+ \+ \+

This overdraft alone is going to cost some one in trouble yet. It possibly is not generally known, but spending more than the legislative appropriation is a criminal offense and more than one department head has landed in jail for it. It is said that the state immigration bureau is suffering because of lack of funds and that calls for expenditures from now on will have to be considerably curtailed.

\+ \+ \+

Speaking of the state immigration bureau you have probably heard that A. D. Stephens of Crookston, former state auditor, is the new commissioner in the board. Governor Eberhart looks upon his acceptance of the place as a favor done him, and the appointment Mr. Stephens when a vacancy on the board was created by the fatal week. Mr. Stephens has always been close to the administration. It was Mr. Stephens who started the investigation which finally led to the resignation of C. F. Staples, superintendent of the Red Wing training school for boys.

\+ \+ \+

Now that Ed Lynch has been fixed with the job of revenue collector at St. Paul, he succeeding Collector Von Rumsdahl, the democratic wing makers are wondering what has become of the commutated nest in a federal way. Ed, you know, landed a job for his brother, Fred B. Lynch, national Democratic committeeman for Minnesota. Dan Lawler tried to hold up the appointment of Mr. Lynch, but failed, which was rather a surprise. The last meet of St. Cloud is said to be the most successful that has unwarded a line for a job, but so far the lickstring has not struck home. Some think that Postmaster Marshal Grimshaw's job is safe, but others say that it is only a matter of time before he will be sent to Siberia, some where.

\+ \+ \+

Under the new practices act any bill for campaign expenses not presented before the primary or general election cannot be paid by the one incurring it. Attorney General Smith has held the provision to be valid. The ruling was asked for by J. A. O. Preus of the Republican state central committee as a result of the committee is about $70 to the good. Bills for that amount have been presented for payment in the proper time.

\+ \+ \+

Representative Flower of Cleveland, a member of the house committee that seemed to investigate the question of public utilities, says those in charge of the hearings in the cities where he the letter being sent out by the committee asking for information is to be worded that only information against statewide control will be solicited by him. The letter complained of by Representative Flower has been given general distribution and it might also be taken as designed to prejudice the public mind. It is said that there is no fault with the letter as a matter of fact and as a matter of public policy the opposite would seem to be the case. BOARD OF EQUALIZATION

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS BOARD OF EQUALIZATION RED LAKE COUNTY.

Red Lake Falls, Minn., July 21st, 1913.

Pursuant to law, Sam E. Hunt, Joseph Pigeon, Andrew Hanson and Herman Schultz, constituting the County Board of Equalization of Red Lake County, Minnesota, met at the office of the County Commissioners in the City of Red Lake Falls in said County, one o'clock P. EXPECT GOOD GAME

When Local Ball Team and Thief River "Indians" Meet Sunday.

The fans are looking forward to a fast exhibition of the national game when the Thief River "Indians" and the Red Lake Falls ball team meet on the local grounds Sunday afternoon. The latter have won all of the contests this season and the Indians have during the past few weeks been turning down a fine string of victories.

AN ORDINARY SHOW.

Nothing Particularly Striking About Happy Circus.

There was nothing unusual about the Hagg circus that put on performances here Saturday and Monday, unless it was the systematic manner in which they separated people from their money. It was not a very bad show there are no doubt many less meritorious shows, and yet it was not a very good show. It would no doubt have been a better show if it had not been necessary to spend so much money places of canvas with a small admission charge to get under each.

RECEIPTS OR AFFIDAVITS

SHOULD BE SENT TO GENERAL PASSENGER AGENTS FOR FARE REFUNDS.

The railways of Minnesota will pay a refund of one cent per mile to all people who have traveled in Minnesota and made intra-state trips while the three cent rate was in effect in this state. It will not be necessary to send in receipts for the mills traveled in order to secure the refund, but if a cowpie was up to no, the traveler may recovering all difference paid by making out a proper affidavit, which form will be supplied by the agents of the railways at nearly all stations. An affidavits must be sworn to by a notary public.

The parties holding receipts may recover 1 cent per mile by sending in the receipts to the general passenger agent or to the ticket auditor at the head office of the railway company. The principal offices of the railways operating in Minnesota and affected by the new law are in the Twin Cities.

Parties passing through Minnesota on interstate trips will not be able to recover one cent a mile for the distance traveled in this state, however.

Passengers, which have been made in the freight department, will also be refunded by the railways to the shippers, upon the presentation of the proper credentials in the officials.

During the first two or three years that the three-cent law was in effect, very few people took receipts for their tickets, but since the 2c per cent of the purchasers of tickets have taken receipts.

ESCAPED CIRCUS ANIMAL CHASES MEN

MUCH EXCITEMENT FOR PEOPLE LIVING BETWEEN MENTOR AND BROOKS.

A panther, leopard or some other ferocious animal that is supposed to have escaped from the Barnum and Bailey circus created much excitement among people living between Mentor and Brooks. The animal is said to have killed several head of stock and last Saturday it is reported to have given two men a lively chase. The men were working in the hayfield and jumped into a hay rack when the animal appeared and raced for home, a distance of a mile. The animal was in chase for some time it is said. Nothing has been seen of the animal for several days, but if it puts in an appearance again an expedition will be organized that will make "Roosevelt in Africa" seem like a very modest undertaking.

MORE OF EVERYTHING OF INTEREST TO ALL

This Year's Minnesota State Fair Will Surpass All Predecessors and Competitors.

EDUCATION AND ENTERTAINMENT.

Valuable Object Lessons in Each of Its Departments and Amusements Chock Full of Thrills.

The Minnesota State Fair and Exposition which will be held at Hamline during the first week in September, is admitted to lead the world. This year fair managers claim that the best ever will be surpassed. The premium list has been lengthened, as the number and quality of both its educational and amusement features will be increased.

There will be more and better exhibits of live stock, machinery, silk products, women's work, horticultural and floricultural displays, and more valuable object lessons in all of the other departments.

Amusements, which are an inseparable part of this exposition, have not been overlooked. As our universities compete in sensational automobile races on Saturday afternoon, Sept. 6th.

There will be a magnificent society horse show for five nights, in the Coliseum, which will be fittingly decorated for this function, that promises to surpass the brilliance shown of the kind ever given in the Northwest.

There will be the real thing from Wyoming, showing the dangerous business and thrilling pastimes of the western frontier days. The great show that has been given annually at Cheyenne and has attracted nation-wide attention, will be moved to the Minnesota fair grounds for the week, and will be the great night show attraction in front of the grandstand.

There will be the most dazzling display of fireworks ever seen in the Northwest, a week of each evening entertainment.

There will be humorous and thrilling free acts in front of the grandstand, both in the afternoon and evening.

There will be shows of various kinds on the grounds near the lagoon, and many amusement features not yet announced.

There will be special events and features for interest the children, as heretofore. A week of each evening entertainment.

State Fair Crowd Around Agricultural Building.

Typical State Fair Street Scene.

Have their entertainments and athletic games, our common schools their playgrounds, our churches their social functions, as the State Fair has its amusements. Everywhere serious work is closely connected with happy, healthful play.

At the Minnesota Fair and Exposition, probably four hundred thousand people will gather to seek information, to rub elbows with their fellows, and to enjoy the varied amusement features.

Some of the Attractions.

There will be Lake Harriet Band every afternoon on the grounds, beginning with a sacred concert Sunday afternoon, August 31st. The musical entertainment will be furnished by seven brass bands and three orchestras.

There will be $27,500 worth of exceptionally horse racing during the first five afternoons of the week, and the speed demons of the world will

CHAPTER I.

Poinsettias.

"A remarkable man!"

I pointed to a man hurrying around the corner just ahead of us.

"Yes, he's remarkably well built. I noticed him when he came out of the Clermont." This was a hotel we had just passed.

"But it's not only that. It's his brisk, his very striking features, his expression—"

I surprise he appeared to share. We had turned the corner immediately behind the man of whom we were speaking and so had him still in full view.

"What's he doing?" I asked in a low whisper.

The man ahead of us, presenting in every respect the appearance of a gentleman, had suddenly stooped to the kerb and was washing his hands in the snow, furtively, but with a vigor and purpose which could not fail to arouse the strongest confidence in any chance onlooker.

"Pitiful," escaped my lips, in a sort of nervous chuckle. But George shook his head at me.

"I don't like it," he muttered, with unusual gravity. "Did you see his face?" Then as the man rose and hurried away from us down the street, "I should like to follow him. I do believe—"

But here we became aware of a quick rush and sudden clamor around the corner we had just left, and turning quickly, saw that something bad occurred in the doorway which was fast causing a tumult.

"What's the matter?" I cried. "What can have happened? Let's go see, George. Perhaps it has something to do with our man."

My husband, with a final glance down the street at the fast disappearing figure, yielded to my importunity and possibly to some new curiosity of his own. "I'd like to stop that man first," said he. "But what excuse have I? He may be nothing but a crank, with some crack-brained idea in his head. We'll soon know; for there's certainly something wrong there on Broadway."

"He came out of the Clermont," I suggested.

"I know. If the excitement isn't there, what we've just seen is simply a coincidence."

It was the last word he had time to speak before we found ourselves to the midst of a crowd of men and women, jostling one another in curiosity or in the consternation following a quick alarm. All were looking one way, and, as this was towards the entrance of the Clermont, it was evident enough to us that the alarm had indeed had its origin in the very place we had anticipated. I felt my husband's arm press me closer to his side as we worked our way towards the entrance, and presently caught a warning sound from his lips as the paths and confused cries everywhere surrounding us suddenly ceased here and there by articulate words end we heard:

"Is it murder?"

"The beautiful Miss Challoner!"

"A millionaire's in her own right!"

"Killed, they say."

"No, no! suddenly dead; that's all."

"George, what shall we do?" I managed to cry into my husband's ear.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," whispered George, who was as curious as myself. "We will try the rear door where there are fewer persons. Possibly we can make our way in there, and if we can, Slater will tell us all we want to know."

Slater was assistant manager of the Clermont, and one of George's oldest friends.

"Then hurry," said I. "I am being crushed here."

George did hurry, and in a few minutes we were before the rear entrance of the great hotel. There was a mob gathered here also, but it was neither so large nor so rough as the one on Broadway. Yet I doubt if we should have been able to work our way through it if Slater had not, at that very instant, shown himself in the doorway, in company with an officer to whom he was giving some final instructions.

"Let us in, Slater," George begged. "My wife is given a little faint; she has been knocked about so by the crowd. I no sooner saw the way cleared for her across that I made good my husband's words by fainting away in earnest.

When I came to, it was suddenly and with perfect recognition of my surroundings. The same pleasant room to which I had been taken was one I had often visited, and its familiar features did not hold my attention for a moment. What I did see and welcome was my husband's face bending close over me, and to him I spoke first. My words must have sounded oddly to those about. "Have they had you do anything about it?" I asked. "Did he—"

A quick pressure on my arm silenced me, and then I noticed that we were not alone. Two or three ladies stood near, watching me, and one had evidently been using some restoratives, for she held a small atmosphere in her hand. To this lady, George made haste to introduce me, and from her I presently learned the cause of the disturbance in the hotel.

Edith, the well known daughter of Misses Challoner, had fallen suddenly dead on the floor of the mezzanine. She was not known to have been in poor health, still less in danger of a fatal attack, and the shock was consequently great to her friends, several of whom were in the building.

"Was she alone when she fell?" I asked.

"Virtually alone. Some persons sat on the other side of the room, reading at the big round table. They did not even hear her fall. They say that the hand was playing unusually loud in the musicians' gallery."

"Are you feeling quite well now?" Slater asked myself, I gratefully replied as I rose slowly from the sofa.

In the hall we encountered Mr. Slater, whom I have before mentioned. He was trying to maintain order while himself in a state of great agitation. Seeing us, he could not refrain from whispering a few words into my husband's ear.

"The doctor has just gone up—her doctor, I mean. He's simply dumbfounded. Says that she was the richest woman in New York proper to-day. I think—don't mention it, that he suspects something quite different from heart failure."

"What do you mean?" asked George, following the assistant manager down the broad flight of steps leading to the lobby. Then, as I pressed up close to Mr. Slater's other side, "She was by herself, wasn't she, in the hall floor above?"

"Yes, and had been writing a letter. Quite well, I'm told, when she left."

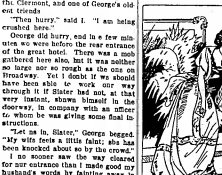
"Have they carried her to her room?" I eagerly inquired, looking fearfully up at the large semi-circular openings everywhere to be seen from the balustrade before us.

"Not yet. Mr. Hammond insists upon waiting for the coroner. Mr. Hammond was the proprietor of the hotel. She'll be lying on one of the big couches near which she fell. If you like, I can give you a glimpse of her. There is a screen up, but you'll be able to think that she is dead."

I don't know why we consented. We were under a spell, I think. At all events, we accepted his offer and followed him up a narrow staircase open to very few that night. At the top, he turned upon us with a warning gesture which I hardly think we needed, and led us down a narrow hall flanked by openings corresponding to those we had noted from below. At the furthest one he paused and, beckoning us to his side, pointed within. The lobby into the large writing-room which occupied the better part of the mezzanine floor.

We saw people standing in various attitudes of grief and dismay about a couch, one end of which only was visible to us at the moment. The others were hidden from them, and every head was turned towards him and every body bent forward in the anxious expectation. I remember the face of one gray haired old man. I shall never forget it. He was probably her father. Later, I knew him well. Miss Challoner was stretched out upon the couch. She was dressed as she came indoor, in a gown of frost-tinted satin, relieved at the breast by a large bouquet of scarlet poinsettias. The doctor was pointing at these poinsettias in horror and with awful meaning, and though we could not hear his words, we knew without hearing that both from his attitude and the cries of distress from the lips of those about him, that something more than broken petals and disordered leaves must be there. Blood was there—slowly oozing drops from the heart—which for some reason had escaped all eyes till now.

Miss Challoner was dead, not from overdose of opium, but from the more violent attack of some murderous weapon. A dagger with a jewel hilt brought fresh panic and bowed the old father's head with emotion even more bitter than those of grief. (



She Fell With the Letter Still in Her Hand.

tured a questioning look up at George's face.

It was fixed with a purpose I had no trouble in understanding.

CHAPTER II.

"I Know the Man."

Yet he made no effort to detain Mr. Slater, the assistant manager, on this renewed excitement, beyond a gesture.

"I want to feel sure of myself," he explained. "Can you hear the strain in my voice? I'm a little nervous, Laura?"

"Yes, I can hear it. Don't you think the man we saw had something to do with this?" Don't you believe—"

"Hush! What are they saying over there? Can you hear?"

"No. And I cannot bear to look. Yet I don't want to go away. It's all so dreadful."

"It's devilish. Such a beautiful girl! Laura, I must leave you for a moment. Do you mind?"

"No, no; yes—"

I did mind; but he was gone before I could take back my word. Alone, I felt the tragedy much more than when he was with one. I drew back against the wall and hid my face, waiting feverishly for George's return.

He came, when he did come, in some haste and with certain marks of increased agitation.

"Laura," said he, "Slater says that we may possibly be wanted and proposes that we stay here all night. I have telephoned and made it all right at home. Will you come to your room? This is no place for you."

Nothing could have pleased me better. But I could not go without casting another glance at the tragic scene I was leaving. A stir was perceptible there, and in just in time to see to its cause. A tall, angular gentlemen was approaching from the direction of the musicians' gallery, and from the manner of his advance, as well as from the whispered comment of my husband, I recognized in him the special official for whom all had been waiting.

"Are you going to tell him?" was my question to George as we made way down to the lobby.

"That depends. First, I'm going to see you settled in a room quite removed from this business."

"I shall not like that."

"I know, my dear, but it is best."

I could not gainsay this.

Nevertheless, after the first few minutes of relief, I found it very lonesome upstairs.

I was still struggling with this feeling when the door opened, and George came in. There was news in his face as I rushed to meet him.

"Tell me—tell," I begged.

He tried to smile at my eagerness, but the attempt was ghastly.

"I've been thinking and looking," said he, "and this is all I have learned: Miss Challoner died not from a stroke or frog disease of any kind, but from a wound reaching the heart. No one saw the attack, or even the approach or departure of the person inflicting this wound; if she was killed by a pistol-shot, it was at a distance, and almost certainly not from the person sitting at the table we saw from above. But doctors shake their heads at the word pistol-shot, though they refuse to explain themselves or to express any opinion till the case has been probed. This they are going to do at once, and when that operation is decided, I may feel it my duty to speak and may ask you to support my story."

"We can seek none when understand how he looked."

"No. I don't expect to."

"Or his manner as he fled."

"Nor that either."

"We can only describe what we saw him do."

"That's all."

"Oh, what an adventure for quiet people like us! George, I don't be ill. I can't be!"

"He must have."

"But they would have seen—have heard—the people around, I mean."

"So they say; but I have a theory to the contrary, and that now I'm going down again to see how things are progressing. I'll be back for you later. Only be ready."

In a half hour or an hour—I never knew which—George reappeared, ready to tell me that no conclusions had as yet been reached, an element of great mystery involved the whole affair, and the most astute detectives on the force had been sent for. Her father, who had been her constant companion all winter, had not the least suggestion to offer in way of its solution.

To no living being, man or woman, could he point as possessing any motive for such a deed. She had been the victim of some mistake, his lovely and ever kindly disposed daughter, and while the tragic was inexpressible he would never make it unendurable by thinking otherwise.

Such was the father's way of looking at the matter, and a wise it finish made our duty a trifle hard. But George's mind, when once made up, was persistent to the point of obstinacy, and while he was yet talking he led me out of the room and down the hall to the elevator.

"Mr. Slater knows we have something to say, and will manage the interview before us in the very best manner," he confided to me now with an encouraging air. "We are to go to the blue reception room on the parlor floor."

Mr. Slater was there according to his promises, and after introducing us, briefly stated that we had some evidence to offer, which might throw light on occurrence which had just taken place in the house.

George bowed, and the chief spokesman—I am sure he was a police officer of some kind—asked him to tell what it was.

Then my husband spoke up, and related our little experiences, if it did not create a sensation, it was because these men were well accustomed to surprises of all kinds.

"Washed his hands—self-evidently—out there in the snow—just after the alarm was raised here!" repeated one.

"And you saw him come out of this house?" another put in.

"Yes, sir; we noticed him particularly."

"Can you describe him?"

It was Mr. Salter who put this question; he had less control over himself, and considerable eagerness could be heard in his voice.

"He was a very fine-looking man, unusually tall and unusually stalwart both in his dress and appearance. What I could see of his face was bereft of beard, and very expressive. He walked with the swing of an athlete, and only looked mean and small when he was stooping and dabbling in the snow."

"His clothes. Describe his clothes." There was no cold sound in Mr. Slater's voice.

"He wore a silk hat and there was fur on his overcoat. I think the fur was black."

Mr. Slater stepped back, then moved forward again with a determined air.

"I know the men," cold he.

CHAPTER III.

The Man.

"You know the man?"

"I do; or rather, I know a man who answers to this description. He comes and goes in a car."

"His name?"

Gentlemen. A very uncommon person in many respects; quite capable of such an eccentricity, but incapable, I should say, of crime. He's a gifted talker and so well read that he can hold one's attention for hours. By his tastes. I can only say that they appear to be of the simplest, though he is not averse to society, and is always very well dressed."

Meanwhile, George had advanced to speak to a man who had beckoned to him from the other side of the room, and with whom in another moment I saw him step out. Then deserted, I sank into a chair near one of the windows.

Where was he? The man who had carried him off was the youngest in the group, but he had been sent for George? Those who remained showed no interest in the matter. They had enough to say among themselves. But I was interested—curiously so, and, in my uneasiness, glanced restlessly from the window, the shade of which was up, to the ceiling, paying by the snow which lay there. It gave me a slight shock when one of these I do not think it was George—began to talk heads together in much the way the unknown gentlemen had done, and, in my excitement, I probably should have paid no attention, for I was suddenly conscious of a silence in the room, and when I turned saw all the men about me looking my way.

"They are imitating the man," I cried; "my husband and—and the man he went with. Oh, I could dreadful to me; that is all."

Meanwhile, Mr. Slater had exchanged some words with the two officials, and now approached me with an expression of extreme consideration. They were about to excuse me from any further questioning, if I could give them a description of the man I had seen.

"I have already done so," I replied; "my husband and—and the gentleman who went with him. I should greatly have preferred to stay where I was till George came back.

I was greatly interested, of course, and had thought of this or that, but George again and learned the result of the individual investigations.

Miss Challoner had been shot, not stabbed. No other deduction was possible from such facts as were yet known, though the physicians had not yet handed in their report, nor had intimated what that report would be.

No assailant had been discovered or left her, without attracting the notice of some one, if not all of the persons assembled in the writing-room. She could only have been reached by a bullet sent from a point near the head of a small winding staircase connecting the mezzanine floor with a room adjacent to the front door. This has already been indicated on a rough diagram which if you will glance at the diagram below George hastily sketched for me, you will see why.

"A, B, as well as C, D, are half circular openings into the office lobby. E, F, are windows giving upon Broadway, and G, and party wall, necessarily unbroken by window, door or any other opening. It follows then that the only possible means of approach to this room lies through the archway H, or from the elevator door. But the elevator made no stop at the mezzanine on or near the time of the attack upon Miss Challoner; nor did any one leave the table or pass by it to any other direction till after the alarm given by her fall.

But a bullet calls for no approach. A man at E might raise and fire his pistol without attracting any attention to himself. The music, which all acknowledge was at its full climax at this moment, would drown the noise of the explosion, and the ball have shot out of view of all but the victim, effected the same means of immediate escape, which it must have given as secret and unseen approach. The coat-room into which it descended communicated with the lobby very near the main entrance, and if Mr. Slater's surmise were true, this sudden appearance had been made the less apparent for.

It began to look bad for this man, if indeed he were the one we had seen under the street-lamp; and as George and I reviewed the situation, we felt our position to be serious enough for us earnestly to set about our inquiries alone of the men before we lost our first vivid impression. I do not know what George wrote, for he sealed his words up as soon as he had finished writing. But this is what I put on paper while my memory was still fresh and my excitement unabated.

"He had the look of a man of powerful intellect and determined will, who shudders while he triumphs; who never wastes his hands of a deed over which he inwardly gloats. He was when he first rose from the snow. His manner has had a presence of fear; pleis, human, everyday fear. But this was unnecessary. Before he had turned to go, he showed the self-possession of a man who knows himself so secure, or is so well-satisfied with himself, that he is no longer conscious of any danger.

"Poor fellow," I commented aloud, as I folded up these words; "they reckoned without you, George. By supposing he will be in the hands of the police."

And with this sentence ringing in my mind, I lay down and endeavored to sleep. But it was not till very late that rest came.

At last I slept, but it was only to renew again with the same quick recollection of my surroundings, which I had experienced on my recovery from my fainting fit hours before. Indeed, one had stopped at our door before George's coming to the end of the night.

Instantly I was on my feet. Catching the letter up, I carried it to the window, where the names were on it—Mr. and Mrs. George Gerrard—met my writing, Mr. Slater's.

The envelope was open, and George was sleeping peacefully. It was too early for me to wake him, but I could see that letter down unarmed; were not my names on it? Tearing it open, I devoured its contents with a haste that accounting. He was watching them intently, and I thought I knew his face.

Saves Time on Telephone

New Idea That Seems at a Glance Should Be of Extreme Usefulness.

What looks like a good suggestion for a busy man consists of a small magnifying trumpet of fastened form similar to certain types of motor horns, behind which is a platform adapted to support the telephone receiver. Upon receiving or making a call upon the phone and being asked to "hold on," the user, instead of "holding on" to the receiver, receiver pressed to his ear, an arrangement which could not readily exist and prevents him from giving his attention to other matters, merely drops the receiver onto the platform of the "time saver," where it automatically holds it in such a position that the person at the other end is speaking. Conversation can then either be carried on by hand, the unoccupying hand put, with the advantage of leaving the user's hands free for the purpose of turning up references, taking down memoranda, telegrams, etc., or the receiver may be lifted off the instrument and used in the ordinary way. The "time saver" is adjustable, and can be used by the average man without any trouble.

WHERE FISH ABOUND

Colorado Irrigation Lakes Full of Finny Tribe.

They Are Five In Number and the Water is Clear, Cold and Sparkling—At Small Depth Temperature is Icy.

Kansas City—North or Lamar, Colo., just across the Kansas line on the Santa Fe railway, is a series of irrigation lakes that have been made by building earthen dams across a creek valley. These lakes are fed by a canal forty miles long, leading from the Arkansas river. The lakes are there as a result of the salt over the waters of the Arkansas, which Kansas lost to Colorado several years ago.

Up there on the Colorado plains, two-thirds of a mile above sea level, is more than one hundred miles of shore line. Smooth, soft green prairie slopes down to the blue water. Carrying about into delightful little bays, sweeping back in wide curves, curling up in bold headlands, the world of flowers and grass and trees melts into the world of waters. Under the bright sunlight, seen through that crystal air, shimmering and shining, these lakes almost compel the belief that they are a mirage.

Kit Carson, could he again ride across Colorado on his famous palos, would be tempted into trying to ride straight through the water which must be only an appearance of water. For he and his friends never saw any finally wet lake there. Only a still day they have seen myriads of lakes. But no real water except the green square mines in their day.

These lakes are always warm with fish. At times they lie upon the surface so thickly that, as their fins move in brief, lazy paddling was stirred, but no Bible was to be found. No Bible was found, and the search out of which the book could be brought to light was.

The Bible class of the Sixth ward of Hutchinson took up a collection to buy one when they heard of the matter. A committee from the class called upon President Judge N. A. Fuller and asked if they might present the Bible to the court. He gave his consent, the Bible has been purchased and the members of the class are busy now inscribing their names on the fly leaves.

Drives Cow Across Navy Yard.

Washington.—Attempting to drive a cow across the navy yard at Portsmouth, N. H., was given a woman of Kittery, Maine, by order of Secretary of the Navy Daniels. Every year she has been in the habit of driving the cow from Kittery to her summer home in Portsmouth and back to Kittery in the fall. Privilege was refused this year, so she appealed to the secretary of the navy.

Secretary Daniels, however, in a letter to the woman, said that the navy yard is closed to cows.

glorious bliss. About 10 o'clock Art started for camp to the motor to bring out a hot dinner. To pass what hunger was lacking an agonizing hour. Dave proposed a swim.

The water was warm and fine. Let yourself down to tread water and you were up almost free. At any time cold drinking water is secured by pushing a jug, tied to the end of a pole, down into the water and jerking out the cork with a string. One day I sighted a school six feet under water. One dive to the bottom and the speed was quickly convinced the swimmer that Izaak's law against spearing fish should be taken cheerfully, and he was

This, as was revealed when an important case was on trial, but the building was erected, but no Bible was to be found. No Bible was found, and the search out of which the book could be brought to light was.

The Bible class of the Sixth ward of Hutchinson took up a collection to buy one when they heard of the matter. A committee from the class called upon President Judge N. A. Fuller and asked if they might present the Bible to the court. He gave his consent, the Bible has been purchased and the members of the class are busy now inscribing their names on the fly leaves.

Walked Out With It.

There came into the office of a western lawyer a man who was evidently deeply in the toils of matrimony, and he feared she would run him into the clutches of the law.

"In that case," said the lawyer, "you had better get her."

His client, not knowing what posting meant, said he did not know where to get her, and besides, she was awfully as strong as he, and he did not believe she was able to post her.

The attorney explained that he meant put in a notice in the newspapers saying: "Whereas, my wife Helen has left my bed and board without my leave."

"But that ain't true," interrupted the client. "She didn't leave my bed. She took it with her."—Sunday Magazine.

Just Married, Too.

"Young man," said the magistrate, severely, "the assault you have committed on your poor wife is a most brutal one. Do you know of any reason, young man, why you should not be sent to prison?"

"If you do, your honor," replied the prisoner at the bar, hope, "it will break up our honeymoon."

MONKS WANT PANTS!

Clerics Go on Big Strike to Get Trousers.

Economies of Head of Russian Monastery Provoke General Rebellion—"Flying Ideas" of Head of Institution Starts Trouble.

London.—A St. Petersburg dispatch says that the monks of St. Michael, near Malkop, in the Caucasus, are out on a strike and demand more food, more leisure and a supply of trousers. They are determined to enforce their rights, and as long as justice is denied them services will not be held at the monastery. The bells are silent, and the cloisters dark and forsaken.

The trouble has arisen owing to the possession of "fixed ideas" by Father Ambrosio, who is the head of the monastery. His ideas do not stop at the ordinary fulfilment of the monks' obligations to be devout, chaste and kimpermis.

He has the impression that devotions are the best substitute for daily bread, and so the worthy father lengthened prayers and shortened rations.

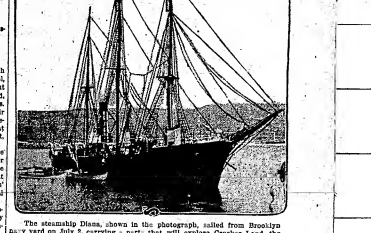
In the intervals between the devotions and the ever-decreasing meals the monks are called upon to perform hard work in the fields. This is found very trying, because the Russian monastery dweller generally possesses a human leaning toward an abundance of food and drink and desires leisure in which to play cards. Given these, he occasionally contrives to find a little time for his devotions that make him a complete monk.

But a denial even worse than those already described was inflicted upon the long-suffering monk of St. Michael. The supreme shock came when Father Ambrosio refused to supply trousers to dwellers within the convent walls. The ecclesiastical district ruled that these articles of apparel were a luxury. The latest curtailment caused much discomfort, and in cold weather the parades were the source of considerable unpleasantness.

The above culprits' name was so dared for a month or so, but a particularly cold day arrived and the strike was resorted to. While working in indignant garb in the fields the brethren of St. Michael's "downed" their tools. The maneuver was skillfully planned, for just at that time a large number of pilgrims had come to the district and monastic services in the chapel of St. Michael's convent were greatly in demand.

The strike was complete and was keenly felt by those at whom it was aimed. The monastery authorities, who, it is said, believe in frugality and economy, are still holding out in the matter of trousers. As for the monks, they get plenty of food from their sunrowing friends and are now in an unceasing indignation, sympathy and interest at the protest meetings which they address.

GOING TO EXPLORE CROCKER LAND



The steamship Diana, shown in the photograph, sailed from Brooklyn navy yard on July 5, carrying a part that will explore Crocker Land, the supposed arctic continent. The expedition is under the auspices of the American Museum of Natural History and the American Geographic society, which are cooperating with the University of Illinois and the navy department.

DO MIRROR WRITING

Physicians Puzzled by Two School Children.

Youngsters Reverse Every Letter and Word on Paper—Both Are Left-Handed—Riddle Difficult of Solution by Experts.

Cleveland.—Two true cases of so-called "mirror writing" have been found among pupils of the public schools by physicians engaged in taking a census of left-handed children. Cleveland medical men are puzzling.

Both pupils are left-handed. One is a boy, six years old. He entered the first grade last September.

In writing, the boy holds the pencil in his left hand, begins at the right-hand side of the paper and reverses every letter and word reversed.

The physician who discovered him wrote the word "all" on a sheet of paper, and the boy could not pronounce it. The physician then wrote "ila" on the sheet, reversing the letters so that they would show properly only in a mirror, and the boy pronounced it "all." The physician learned the boy's mother also is left-handed.

Under the direction of the physician the teacher is gradually instructing the boy by printing letters and words on paper in their proper position. The task of teaching him to read sentences printed from left to right is more difficult.

A less complicated case is that of a girl, also a seven-year-old pupil in the first grade. She had not been in the public school three years ago, having spent those years in a parochial school. She was left-handed, and wrote from right to left, with words and letters reversed.

Under constant instruction she learned to use her right hand in writing, and at the same time was taught to put the letters and words in proper position, from left to right.

The physician who discovered her case said she is able to use either the right hand or the left in writing. But when she uses the left hand, the old peculiarity asserts itself, words and letters are reversed and the sentences can be read only by holding it up to a mirror.

It was suggested that the cause of this conditions lies in the fact that these pupils are unable to visualize properly the images which strike the eye.

All images, it was said, are really seen inverted and are turned in the proper position by an unconscious mental process. The explanation the physicians contend, would not explain the case of the girl who has learned to see objects as other children see them.

LOST MASTERPIECE IS FOUND

Painting by Dolci in Philadelphia Collection Discovered to Be Famous Allegorical Work.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 30.—It has just been discovered that a famous allegorical masterpiece which has been missing for centuries has been hidden in Memorial hall in this city. For years this painting has been known under another name.

Instead of the beautiful painting which depicted one of the famous pieces of the sacred history of Christendom as created by Carlo Dolci, its present owners for generations there were so altered by deeds of paint applied upon its that even the greatest art experts of the world failed to recognize what the picture really was and to appreciate its true position in the work. Listed in the noted collection of Jacob Ridgway, the old painting for nine years hung upon the walls of the gallery as "Youth and Cupid Playing Ball."

In 1904 John G. Johnson, while abroad, bought it with 56 other old Italian paintings, and presented it to the city upon his return to Philadelphia. In this collection were some masterpieces of unusual importance, examples of the Italian and Flemish schools. Because of the great value of some of the other painting by better-known artists, this Dolci painting was not thought to have any particular significance and for years it remained just as it came from Europe.

With the idea of improving some of the famous paintings in the collection, Mr. Johnson, as the head of the city's art commission, engaged Pasquale Fabris to restore some of the works of art that adorn this gallery in Fairmount Park and it remained for Fabris to discover that the Dolci painting was one of the lost masterpieces of the world.

PARROT "CUSSED" A JURIST

Case Was Going Well for Bird's Owner, When It Talked Entirely Too Much.

New York.—Wilson Armando, the parrot of Mrs. Johnena Vogt, became a witness in his own behalf before Magistrate Goldenar when an effort was made to prove that he was an unpolite bird of decent birth. Armando certainly spilled the beans.

"Why, Judge," said Mrs. Ormsby Jandro, this parrot is a loafer and a rowdy. There's no living in the same house with him. Just the first minute it gets to be morning he begins to scream and chatter such language!"

Mrs. Jandro choked her tongue several times to indicate the unspeakable character of Armando's soliloquies, and stuck her fingers in her ears, waggled her head and rolled her eyes, to indicate that a boiler factory was over a rest cure compared with the Vogt's neighborhood.

"He starts right in first thing with 'Go to hell! Go to hell! Scrrrrrrrp! Hell!' And he keeps it up! If you don't shut up he answers right back, 'Go to hell! Go to hell! Scrrrp! Go hell!'—"

"Are you sure he says 'Go to hell?'" asked the court.

Just as Mrs. Jandro was about to answer Armando ruffled his feathers, shook his head to one side, blinked at the magistrate and said shrilly and distinctly: "Go to hell! Go to hell! Scrrrrrrrrrip! Hell!"

"That's all," cried counsel for Mrs. Jandro, triumphantly.

Mrs. Vogt burst into tears, Armando fluffed his feathers defiantly and began anew: "Go to——"

Counsel, take that bird out of here," broke in his honor. The door of the corridor closed on e smothered "Hell!"

LIGHTNING BROILS A STEAK

Kills Woman, but Finishes a Job She has in Hand—Child is Stunned.

Carnegie, Pa.—Lightning played a peculiar as well as a fatal trick here when it struck the chimney of Henry Waters' home on the Steubenville pike, and after running down the chimney to the kitchen range, killed Mrs. Waters and broiled a steak which she was putting on the broiling-iron at the time.

Mrs. Waters had picked up the steak and placed it over to the kitchen range and laid it on the stove. She was evidently about to light the natural gas burner, when a terrific peal of thunder shook the house, and the lightning staggered down the chimney. Every stitch was burned from Mrs. Waters' body.

The steak was browned perfectly by the lightning flame.

A story-and-a-half house, witnessed the accident, was severely stunned, but will recover.

SLEIGH OF THE DESERT

A corporal in the French army in North Africa has devised a peculiar machine particularly adapted for travel over the sand wastes of the Sahara. The machine is a cross between an automobile and an aeroplane, and has been dubbed the "sleigh of the desert."

The construction is very light, indeed. It is mounted on broad-tired pneumatic wheels, but is driven by an aeroplane propeller. It is so light and its bearing surface is so great that it will ride over the sands without sinking, leaping over light depressions and climbing the steepest sand dunes. There is a decided advantage to using an air propeller, for then the drive of the machine is independent of its traction. In the loose sand of the desert it would be rather difficult to propel a machine after the manner of an automobile. The peculiar vehicle is named "La Sauterelle," or the grasshopper, because of its peculiar hopping flight over the irregularities of the desert.

Berra, Extremely Modest.

A cablegram from London says that on the day the public announcement was made that James M. Barrie, author of "Peter Pan" and other comedies that Maude Adams has made familiar to American theatergoers, had been given a baronetcy by King George of England, the new Sir James stayed at close indoors and denied himself to all callers. That was entirely characteristic of the man.

Sir James is probably the most modest great writer that Scotland has ever produced. The cablegram ought to have told how many times during that day of excitement he filled and emptied his pipe. The pipe is his constant and as a rule his sole companion. It is his confidant, just like his cane was to that old fellow in Dickens's "Our Mutual Friend."

CHAMPION STOWAWAY IS HELD

Dubuque Man Has Beat Way Almost Around the Globe—Tramps in Sussex Area.

New York.—The Celtic of the White Star line brought in the "champion stowaway of the world," as the crew called him. He is Michael L. Butler, a stalwart athletic man of twenty-three, whose parents live in Dubuque, Iowa.

Butler is a railroader, and has been "beaked" on many different roads. In search of Mexico he learned Spanish. Last August he "braked" and jumped freights into New York. Then he stowed away on the Lamport & Holt liner Cavour and landed at Buenos Aires. From Buenos Aires he pounded ties over the Andes into Valparaiso, taking about two and a half months for his tramp.

From Valparaiso Butler went to Rotterdam, thence to Norway, looked around the country a bit, returned to Rotterdam, deserted a Norwegian steamer, leaving behind discharges and wages, and stowed away on the Leyland liner Victorian for Liverpool, where he caught the Celtic. The brakeman-sailor was locked up on the day before reaching New York and turned loose by the immigration inspectors as an American citizen, free to go whither he listeth.

Rich Land for Japanese.

Stockton.—J. K. Oda and H. Wyoka, Japanese farmers of the delta region, purchased 320 acres of land on Roberts island near Terminous, for which they paid $25,000. In view of the anti-alien land legislation this may be the last transaction of this kind in the history of the state.

IRISH WOMEN WANT VOTE

Suffragettes Will Ask Parliament to Grant Them Franchise.

Dublin.—Irish women are to have a chance to vote. Mrs. Tennant, wife of Sir Charles Tennant, has announced that a bill will be introduced in the house of commons to grant the franchise to women. Mrs. Tennant is a sister of Premier Asquith.

Mrs. Tennant is a member of the executive committee of the National Union of Women Suffragists, and has been active in the movement for many years.

Evidently a political problem is now to get rid of Monahan.

Mrs. Bryan has gone to Lincoln to put up the home-grown grape jules.

The boat will stand a little rocking but the canoe capsizes very easily.

After the senators got through "swadling" the tariff bill it will be passed.

Six New York women claim the same husband. The unusual thing about this is that they all claim him at the same time.

Here a lawyer to keep you out of jail and if he fails perhaps the doctor can get you out with a certificate of poor health.

Minneapolis officials are sending their cars to the harvest fields. That's all right—surely a fine thing for Minneapolis—but will they work?

The president may be of the opinion that the retention of Ambassador Wilson may lead to a complication of names, if nothing more serious.

Unless the cost of living is reduced by the passage of the new tariff bill only major league ball players and chautauqua artists can afford to have appendicitis.

The advantage seems to be with the wearers of clothes that are extremes in fashion, for how could the paragraphers say the clothes themselves are not moved to observe differently.

The man who talks about the passing of the horse is making a good guess at conclusions. The market value of old Bobbin is steadily increasing while that of tin touring car grows less.

The people of Duluth should be permitted to blow about their cool weather all they want to now, for other people do more than their share of talking about it the other eleven months.

A Missouri young man complains that he is unable to spend his annual income of one hundred thousand dollars. Perhaps that very accommodating person, the "sperarer" does not live so far south.

"It seems to us," says the Spring-field Union, "that every Democratic family ought to show its patriotism by having tickets to same after the Wilson girls." Why such an enthusiastic patriotic demonstration all to a bunch? Is the democratic administration to be of brief duration?

But you should be more generous. Thief River Falls has had for some time a site "available" for a federal building.

The papers on the iron range are noted for their modesty. The Virginia Virginian says there were 40 000 people in that city to celebrate July 4. Possibly that estimate is biographical error of the man who also celebrated.—Stillwater Gazette.

We were indeed modest in handling the figures for by counting noses we could have easily swelled the number to upwards of 50,000. Guess they don't know what kind of a city we have down at the prison town.—Virginia Virginian.

Which shows that a patriotic newspaper man when celebrating can see many senses.

"According to the Minnesota rate decision a state can tax a railroad down to a certain profit. Hence the more the road can reduce expenses by "efficiency methods," the more the state can tax it. What a splendid incentive to efficiency!"—Wall Street Journal. But that is only a high-toned and misleading. The constitutional provision under which the ruling is made on that point is wholly for the benefit of the railroad or other corporation or private property owner whose property is being taxed. That constitutional provision does not extend the state's authority; it limits it.

Fatal Fall.

A Bostonian was showing a British visitor the sights of the Hub. They were driving past Bunker Hill Monument. Not wishing to make any pointed reference to the fact that once time we had been fighting with our cousins, the Bostonian merely indicated the monument with his thumb and said:

"Bunker Hill."

The Englishman looked at the hill intently and asked: "Who was Mr. Bunker, and what did he do to the hill?"

You don't understand," said the Bostonian. "This is a place where they had taken and scorched him and shot him for his disputes. But they did not think to look under a stool at the bottom of the ditch, and even if they had found the prize it is doubtful, in their wet and muddy condition, if they could have deciphered them.

Notice of Sale in Ditch Proceedings.

Sale of Ditching Jobs.

Notice is Hereby Given, That on the 18th day of August, 1913, at 2 o'clock P. M., at my Office in the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, I will sell the jobs of digging, deepening and repairing the Ditch No. 18 of Red Lake County, established by the Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake County, State of Minnesota, by public auction to the lowest responsible bidder or bidders, and that bids are invited for said work; said work to be completed within the time required, and in the manner specified, in said Engineer's report. And no bid will be entertained which exceeds more than Thirty (30) per cent. over and above the estimate cost of the construction, in any case, as stated in the said order; and the successful bidder will be required to give a satisfactory bond, to be approved by the Auditor of said County, with two freehold sureties, for the faithful performance and fulfillment of his said contract, and to pay all damages that may accrue by reason of his failure to complete the job within the time required in the contract. The said order and estimates and profile are on file, and may be seen at my office.

The approximate amount of work to be done in the construction of such ditch is as follows: The excavation of 2741.6 cubic yards of earth and placing six culverts.

The estimated total cost of the work is $748.32.

All bids must be accompanied by a certified check payable to the Auditor of said County, for not less than ten per cent. of the amount of each bid.

The right to reject any and all bids is hereby reserved.

Dated July 16th, 1913.

However, the girl scout seems to be quite inevitable.

As a last resort for fads women are now making their own shoes.

Old fashioned people like to think about the days before the tango.

Whenever women make up their minds to wear trousers they will.

The elevator man who inherited $100,000 probably is having his "ups" now.

If you do your Christmas shopping now, you will avoid some of the rush later on.

Duke Ludwig of Bavaria has tired of his morganatic wife. His is eighty-two and fussy.

Occasionally you will find a good citizen who doesn't take much interest in baseball.

The surest way of enjoying summer resorts is to stay at home and read about them.

The way to avoid a split infinitive is to write it the way you don't think it ought to go.

Mr. Morgan is now said officially to have left only $10,000,000. However, he left all he had.

During the hot weather the tango is laid among the moth balls. Few care if it never comes back.

Rochester has barred split skirts and peekaboo waists, but bathing suits still are in good form.

A Massachusetts man ate seventeen eggs at a single sitting. There's no hog like a hog with money.

It appears that the somnolent dog is about as dangerous as the gun that nobody knows is loaded.

King George of England says women must not ride astride. He is making much out of a side issue.

Still, if there were no rain where would the dollars come from to buy tickets to the baseball game?

In putting over an ethical eugenic marriage in Boston attempting to revive local interest in matrimony?

Have you noted the shortage of flies this summer? And the excess of mosquitoes? Nature is up to something.

A noted pianist is about to retire after accumulating a big fortune. This shows one effect, at least, of harmony.

It is explained that those Princeton seniors who said they had never been kissed made a boast and not a confession.

A New York wife blames her husband because she has lost her beauty. He'll probably swear she had none to lose.

It is almost a tragedy when a damsel with a shooting figure lacks the means to spend a week or two at the seashore.

There isn't much excuse for the weather forecasters when they go wrong. They have three guesses every day.

Exchange says that people who marry late in life are well shaken before taken. But the after years will tell you that he is pretty well shaken all the time.

That man who went into an monotrollable spasm of laughter over a vocoerable vaudeville joke has now some crazy. Doesn't the call for official regulative of cold storage stagy honor?

An honest porter in New York who returned to the owner $6,000 he had found was given a $50 check, which he discovered to be worthless. This is virtue encouraged to be its own reward.

Not many of the native women of America will agree with that newly arrived immigrant in New York who thought she would "marry as many men as she pleased because America is a free country.

The inventor of a beer bottle cork left $1,000,000 to his heirs, but doubtless the inventor of the corkscrew left even more.

As was to be expected, the still alert is to be succeeded by even a more insistent little garmoot, the pan taloon gown.

We'll have to thank that Paris woman for providing a new angle to the mother-in-law joke. Recently she asserted by her husband, she compelled his mother to pay her alimony.

50 WOMEN ARE BURNED ALIVE; SCORES INJURED

SINGHAMTON, N. Y., SCENE OF HORRIFYING SACRIFICE OF LIFE WHEN FACTORY IS BURNED.

NO CHANCE TO SAVE THE VICTIMS FROM INFERNO

Workers Penned on Top Floor Are Shut Off From All the Escapes—Heat So Terrific That Firemen Cannot Be of Any Assistance.

Binghamton, N. Y., July 24.—Fifty persons were killed, according to latest estimates, and many injured, a dozen mortally, in a fire which swept the four-story factory building of the Binghamton Clothing company. The victims were chiefly women and girls.

Thirty in Hospital.

More than a score of bodies have been recovered. In the city hospital and in private institutions are thirty injured. Some two-score persons are known to have escaped as by a miracle from the building, which burst into flame like a tinderbox and became a roaring furnace in almost no time after the first alarm was sounded.

About 125 persons were in the factory when the fire broke out. Those unaccounted for or most of them, are believed to be to the ruins of the structure.

Bystanders Are Frantic.

Around the scene of the disaster thousands watched the workers in the glare of three searchlights, many in the grave throng being restrained only by the police from rushing into the ruins for the bodies of relatives or friends.

Water in many streams was poured on the fire all night, but by hours before even the ceiler of the burned establishment, the ruins were pronounced slightly, from time to time, in a spot on which streams were centered, men were forward to dig as long as the smoke conformed would allow them to work. Occasionally a body was found and taken quickly away. This work went on for hours and, perhaps, will go on many hours longer before the pitiful search may give up its last dead. It will take at least two days, the authorities believe, before the ceiler can be cleared and the whole truth known.

Describes Triangle Fire.

The big, outstanding fact of the catastrophe was its suddenness. In the the disaster bears a strong resemblance to the Triangle Waist company fire in New York, where 147 lives were lost when the inflammable material upon which the employes were working and the waste which littered the floors blazed up with inconceivable rapidity and set the imprisoned workers panting from the windows to their death. The parallel falls only in the lesser height and different construction of the building and in the number of the dead and injured.

Another resemblance to the New York disaster is that the fire is believed to have been started by the careless throwing of a cigarette butt or match.

No Chance for Escape.

In the direst tragedy the killing hurst of flame followed quickly the alarm. There was scarcely opportunity for anyone to use the ordinary of even the emergency means of escape. Fire ladders had been carried on regularly, so frequently, in fact, that the employes had found them monotonous. The building was equipped with fire escapes and an automatic alarm system. The alarm thinked. Mrs. Reed B. Freeman, wife of the proprietor, telephoned to the central fire station. The usual apparatus for a first still alarm responded. So did several private cars and Warren and Cheonoso streets, which were then now a burning inferno and pulled the box there. The heads of the companies conversed this alarm.

Firemen Are Delayed.

That started a fatal period of delay for part of the firemen. But even those who arrived first were unable to do anything.

After the fierce blast, the fire seemed to burst from every part of the building at once. On the fire-escapes women, children and men were clustered, and inside others were waiting to get on the ladder. But the flames were too quick for them. The slow starting of the fire drill may have contributed to the disaster. the delay in getting all the firemen to the scene may have been responsible for part of the loss of life. But perhaps the greatest factor in the horror was that those things did not materially affect the horrible result.

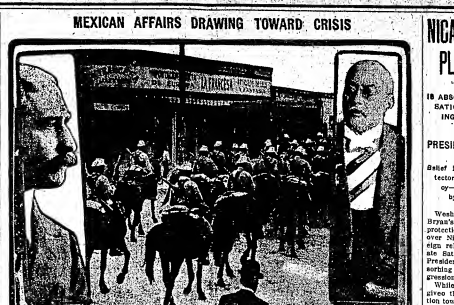
Great damage was done to the machinery and other fittings of the factory, many windows were broken and one wall was crushed in. The police began at once to conduct a rigid examination, but no arrests have been made up to this time.

MEXICAN AFFAIRS DRAWING TOWARD CRISIS



Washington authorities suspect that certain foreign nations, in co-operation with President Huerta of Mexico, are scheming to force President Wilson's hand in the matter of recognizing the Huerta government. Ambassador Wilson has been summoned to Washington to tell what he knows concerning the critical situation. Our illustration shows a body of Huerta's cavalry marching against his opponents; also President Huerta and Ambassador Wilson.

FIVE DROWN IN LAKE MICHIGAN

HEAVY NORTHWEST WIND CAUSES AN UNDERTOW.

Mother and Nephew Drown Trying to Save Daughter; Brother Taken From Sisters.

Chicago, July 22. — Five persons were drowned in Lake Michigan along the shore near Chicago Sunday. A heavy northwest wind piled up a surf that created an undertow, dug holes in the beaches and caused other conditions unfamiliar to lake bathers.

Mrs. Christine Hoos and her nephew, Earl Strom, 17 years old, were drowned at Highland Park endeavoring to rescue Mrs. Hoos's 18-year-old daughter, Christiana. The girl was carried beyond her depth in the surf, and the mother and her father.

Walter Norsland, son of a wealthy retired business man, was drowned in sight of his two sisters. Norsland, who was 16 years old, went a few feet beyond his sisters into deeper water. He called for help and the girls made fruitle efforts to reach him. They were taken out of the water exhausted and their brother's body was washed ashore.

Henry Eckhart left his home in his bathing suit to take a plunge. His wife watched him swim out a short distance and disappear. The body was not recovered.

The fifth victim is unidentified. He left a blue serge coat and trousers, with nothing in the pockets, a pair of white canvas shoes and a towel on the beach.

STATE SETTLES FOR $500,000

May Expend Entire Amount Received From Oil Companies for School Improvements.

Greenville, Tex., July 23.—Half a million dollars as a possity and the transfer of 21,596 of the 24,500 shares of stock in the Magnolia Petroleum company of this state from the individual control of H. C. Folger, Jr., and John D. Archbold to a trustee mutually agreed upon, was accepted by the state of Texas in settlement of the state's $1,052,000 penalty and ouster suit.

Governor O. B. Colquitt, in a special message to the legislature, recommended that the $500,000 penalty collected applied to the public school fund. Legislative leaders indicated this would be done.

Sylvia Pankhurst Escapes Arrest.

London, July 23.—Sylvia Pankhurst, whose house expired Sunday, dramatically defied the police by appearing at the Bromley town hall here where she was arrested a day or night ago. She and other suffragettes made inflammatory speeches and left the hall accompanied by a protecting body guard. There was a violent collision with the police but Miss Pankhurst got away in safety.

Dam Breaks; Loss, $150,000.

Hamilton, Ky., July 23.—The recently completed coffer dam at Ouo-ernmental dam, No. 48, in the Ohio river near here, gave way before 22 feet of water, filling the basin, upsetting several small craft and damaging construction machinery. The loss is estimated at $150,000.

A. F. of L. in Weeks's Section.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 23.—Many important matters are expected to be taken up by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, which convenes here for a week's session. Secretary Frank Morrison's report for the nine months of the fiscal year ending June 30 showed that 257 charters had been issued and that the membership for June was 2,026,716, as compared with 1,703,749 in June, 1912. Besides the executive council, officers of a number of international unions are attending.

Panama Canal Plans.

Panama, July 22.—Colonel G. W. Goethals, chief engineer in charge of the construction of the Panama canal, has notified Lieutenant Colonel David Du B. Gaillard, chief of the central division of the canal, that steam shovel work in the Culebra cut section will hereafter be conducted on the assumption that Gamboa dike will be completed October 1. The destruction of the dike will allow Gatun lake to flood the cut, thereby practically connecting the Atlantic and Pacific.

INTERVENTION IN MEXICO PROPOSED

REPRESENTATIVE MURRAY, OF OKLAHOMA, INTRODUCES SUCH A RESOLUTION TO HOUSE.

GIVES THIRTY DAYS OF GRACE

If Order Is Not Restored in That Time New Bill Would Have U. S. Intercede—Criticises Present State of Affairs Severely.

Washington, July 23.—Intervention in Mexico by this government within thirty days if order is not restored and Americans protected was proposed in the house by Representative Murray of Oklahoma. He introduced a lengthy resolution severely censuring the Huerta government.

The resolution proposed that president Wilson shall issue a proclamation to the several factions in Mexico, demanding that they restore order and respect American persons and property and, if the proclamation is disregarded, that he shall intervene.

Provisions of Bill.

"The president is authorized," the bill recites, "if the proclamation fails to receive order within thirty days to intervene, establish peace and take possession of all public property of Mexico and hold the same until all damages of any American or citizens of any other foreign nation in part fully compensated.

"The president is authorized to use land and naval forces of the United States for the accomplishment of all such purposes."

The preamble of Murray's resolution declares:

"The rule of Huerta has become a combining state of brute force, a basidiu of inconsiderates, rapine and murder, which should no longer be tolerated at our door."

Murray declared that this government should recognize the Carranza government, a regime founded, he said, on "duplicity, treachery and murder." He gave notice that he would speak in the house in support of his resolution at the first opportunity.

The resolution was referred to the committee on foreign affairs.

An attempt to oust the chief of New Mexico to force the senate to counsel a stronger policy of protection for American citizens in Mexico contains precipitated a lively debate which demonstrated approximately even the part of the senators of the gravity of the situation and of the inconsistency for a determined stend by the United States.

Golf Tournament On.

Chicago, July 25.—Chicago's star golfers tuned up for great score honors in the elimination round of the Western Amateur championship tournament at the Homewood links. A northeast wind and grosse smooth an a billiard table upset the best efforts of the 120 odd contestants and the scores were high. Hazeltine, Minneapolitan, formerly western champion: Paul Hunter, Midlothian, and Warren K. Wood, Homewood, led the field with 77 each.

Ball Players Near Death.

Chicago, July 22.—Five members of the Washington Americos narrowly escaped drowning in the unusually heavy surf in lake Michigan. Walter Johnson, Alsmith, Henry and Laporte were caught in the undertow and got back after a hard struggle. Gedeon was dazed against a pier and stunned.

Suffragettes Burn House.

Birmingham, England, July 22.—A large house at Sellyoak, a suburb, was practically destroyed by fire. The usual suffragette placards were found.

ASK $50,000,000 PENALTIES

SUIT BEGUN IN MISSISSIPPI TO OUST ILLINOIS CENTRAL.

Accused of Unlawful Merger With Yazoo and Mississippi Valley Road in That State.

Jackson, Miss., July 23.—Attorney General Hone A. Collins took steps today to invoke the Clayton statute by filing a suit to chancery court against the Illinois Central and Yazoo and Mississipi Valley railroads, alleging an unlawful merger and asking penalties approximating $50,000,000. The attorney general said the suit would be vigorously prosecuted. He is known that he has worked up much evidence.

Alleging infractions of the anti-trust laws of Mississippi, the attorney general's suit, already prepared, seeks to oust the Illinois Central from the state, would forfeit the charter and franchises of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad and throw both into the hands of receivers.

The suit also seeks to compel the Illinois Central to dispose of all stocks and bonds of the subsidiary road and to secure an absolute divorcement of interests.

In a statement Attorney General Collins said:

"The bill will allege that the Illinois Central controls, operates and dominates the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley, that it owns the capital stock of said road, that they are competitors engaged in the same kind of business, that the combination is working to the detriment of New Orleans, Memphis and all points on both lines of said roads between said points and is operating to the great injury of the state of Mississippi.

"Penalties in excess of $50,000,000 are demanded and the bill will ask for forfeiture of the right to do business in the state, an injunction against both roads from any further owning the capital stock of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley and from further continuing, managing and dominating the said Y. & M. V. R. R."

Socialists Seek to Recover.

Seattle, Wash., July 23.—A committee of the socialist party, which received much Democratic support. Mr. Bryan proposes to incorporate almost without change the general language of this provision in the Nicaraguan treaty. Many Democratic senators declare that the policy proposed would be a most unfortunate departure, and the attitude already announced by President Wilson and by Secretary Bryan indicates the improbability of its adoption.

Explorer's Cargo Will Be Transferred.

St. Johns, N. F., July 22.—The steamer Diana, of the Donald A. McMillan exploring expedition, which went on the rocks in the Strait of Belle Isle last June and is badly damaged she will be obliged to return here, according to dispatches. It is expected her cargo will be transferred to the relief steamer, probably the Erik and that the expedition will proceed from Bettle Harbor.

American Battleships to Mexico.

Mexico City, July 23.—Tuxpan, a seaport on the gulf of Mexico, in state of Vera Cruz, was captured by rebels under Jose Vega Saturday after a hard fight. In answer to an appeal from the British consular representative the United States battleship Louisiana, with Rear Admiral Frank Fletcher aboard, was sailed for that port. Tuxpan is situated in a river five miles from the gulf of Mexico. It has an oil center and a considerable number of Americans reside there.

Three Drowned; Many Spectators.

Cincinnati, July 22.—In view of many persons who were standing about the wharf, Fred Seiman, 26 Margaret Mullin, 19, and Anna Ball, 20 were drowned, and the swiftness with which they were carried under a coal fleet prevented any attempt at rescue. Seiman was taking a new launch out for its maiden trip, and had not proceeded far when his engine broke down. The boat drifted against a coal fleet and all were sucked under. None of the bodies have been recovered.

NICARAGUA TREATY PLAN CONSIDERED

IS ABSORBING TOPIC OF CONVERSATION IN OFFICIAL WASHINGTON SINCE SATURDAY.

PRESIDENT'S HAND IS SEEN

Belief Is That Bryan's Idea of Protectorate Is Administration Policy—Plan Is Outlined—Desired by the Banana Republics.

Washington, July 22. — Secretary Bryan's plan for the extension of the protecting wing of the United States over Nicaragua broached to the foreign relations committee of the senate Saturday with the approval of President Wilson, has become the absorbing topic of diplomatic and congressional consideration.

While official utterances have not given the purpose of the administration toward Central America, members of the senate evince a growing conviction that the principle to be applied to Nicaragua is one that the Wilson administration would be glad to see extended to the other Central American republics.

Will Not Discuss Plan.

Members of the foreign relations committee who were present when Secretary Bryan unfolded his plan Saturday, continue to assert they can not discuss the new developments.

The original Nicaraguan treaty has been the subject of open discussion among senators. This senator did not go further, however, than to guarantee the United States exclusive canal rights, and a naval base site in exchange for a payment of $3,000,000 in gold. This latter project, to extend a virtual protectorate over Nicaragua, has assumed the character of an international policy which members of the senate are discussing with emphatic expressions of opinion. It is believed that Senators Bacon, Clarke of Arkansas and some other influential members of the foreign relations committee will support the general attitude in opposition toward the Bryan-Wilson plan; while Senators O'Gorman, Burton and several others are known to favor many of its essential points.

No Guarantee of Debts.

Mr. Bryan has not proposed, it is understood, that the United States shall assume or guarantee the debts of the republic of Nicaragua. The desire of Nicaragua for control of its customs resources by the United States, so that it could secure loans to refund its pressing debt, has been known for many months, and the proposition of the senate foreign relations committee when it came before that body in the form of a definite treaty agreement.

Mr. Bryan's plan calls for a definite statement of policy that would guarantee Nicaragua its independence, would guarantee the control by the United States of that country's destinies with foreign nations, and would put into definite terms the recognized principles of the Monroe doctrine, prohibiting foreign nations from securing a foothold on the American continent.

To Watch Debts.

It is understood, however, that the only guarantee on the part of the United States of international finances of Nicaragua would be embraced in that part of the treaty by which Nicaragua would bind itself not to "increase its present public debt," in the discharge of which "the ordinary revenues of the nation, after defraying expenses of the government, shall be inadequate."

Under this provision the financial stability, it is believed, Nicaragua hopes, will be possible annually to revise her fiscal system, and secure foreign aid for necessary public development.

The Platt Amendment.

The Platt amendment under which the United States became the virtual protectorate of Cuba, adopted in 1901, received much Democratic support. Mr. Bryan proposes to incorporate almost without change the general language of this provision in the Nicaraguan treaty. Many Democratic senators declare that the policy proposed would be a most unfortunate departure, and the attitude already announced by President Wilson and by Secretary Bryan indicates the improbability of its adoption.

Seek to Reduce Ball.

Portland, Ore., July 23.—Despite attempts of Mrs. Rena B. Morrow and relatives of E. E. C. Von Klein, the ball will remain $3,500 cash or $15,500 securities and he will remain in the county jail, according to Judge Gatens.

Following the disagreement of the jury in the trial for the grand larceny every effort has been made to have the ball reduced. Von Klein is the forcemy charge is $4,500 cash or $15,500 security. On the polygamous charge it is $5,000 cash and $10,000 securities.

Six Workmen Injured; Four Missing.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 23.—The fall of a Kaufman Brothers depart. building, which is the largest in the city, collapsed carrying a number of workmen in the crash which ended in a heap. Six men were taken from the debris seriously hurt and sent to a hospital. Four others are reported missing. An addition to the building was being erected. After the recovery of six injured men the contractors called a roll of employes. Out of 160 men employed 156 are accounted for.

Webb Law Effective Aug. 1.

San Francisco, July 22.—The Webb anti-alien land law, passed by the legislature and signed by Governor Johnson more than two months ago, will become effective Aug. 16 without interference from the electorate of the state through the medium of the referendum. Time for filing referendum petitions against laws passed at the last session expired Sunday, bringing an end to the threats against the Webb act that have filled the political atmosphere since May.

BOKHARA IS VERY PRIMITIVE

Interesting Sidelights on Life of an Almost Unknown People Under the Czar's Rule.

London.—Interesting sidelights on the life of the almost unknown people under the rule of the czar in Central Asia were given by Miss curatis, F. R. G. S., one of the first to be elected to that body, who has recently returned from a journey to Bokhara.

"The clerex gates of Bokhara," said Miss Christie, "are still shut every night at sundown, and the watchmen perade the streets after dark beating drums to show they are awake. The people were very exclusive. The Bokhara idea of justice was direct and to the point. They took the condemned persace up to the top of the tower and thoe threw them down. Once was enough.

"The caravansary in the queer town was similar to those usually found in the east long ago. The little rooms look out over a small balcony into the yard. Underneath the rooms the cattle are kept.

"All the buildings, with the exception of the mosques and the towers, are built of clay, and the method of the builders is primitive. Sometimes a wooden framework is put up, and in the spaces between the wooden boards are pressed sun dried balls of mud. Then over all comes more mud, and in a very short time a house is built and ready for occupation."

Miss Christie was fortunate enough to see the emir going to mosque and she also photographed him, which is considered something of a feat, for no one ever knows which of the many mosques he intends to enter. It was a Friday, and a crowd of subjects gathered early to mosque with in a few yards of the palace.

FISH INTOXICATED ON BEER

Brewery Output Emptied into Stream Causes Chaos Among Piscatorial Tribe.

Mendota, Ill.—There will be no more fishing in the Mendota during the months to come. It is improbable that the fish will be able to rise to the bait for several weeks. The banks recently were lined with thousands of dead fish and the creek was full of others dead drunk.

Because of failure to pay the government tax the Mendota brewery was closed and 1,500 barrels of beer were emptied into the creek.

The beer kept the conglomeration of queer sounds arose from the creek, from the mewing of cat fish to the wouf wouf of the bullfrog. Before the wave soon disporting themselves about the banks of the creek a bullfrog staggered arm in arm down Main street, only to be arrested by a policeman. They couldn't hop, despite the fact that they were full of them.

Part of the fish were killed, however, and climbed out on shore, where they were soon captured by boys and men. Those who survived followed the beer town stream in large schools.

HANG-UP GIRL TO BEAT HER?

Georgian Is Charged With Inhuman Punishment of His Young Daughter.

Augusta, Ga.—Charges that he fastened a chain around the neck of his fifteen-year-old daughter and suspended her from a meat hook in his butcher shop and beat her with the butt end of a rifle until the blood flowed from her wounds, were made against J. J. Johnson in the city's courts.

Policeman Moore, who arrested Johnson, stated that he was called by neighbors who heard the girl's screams. The policeman said that when he arrived he found the defendant's son's daughter, Nellie, suspended from a meat hook, suspended by a chain which had been wrapped twice around her neck and locked. Moore said that the girl's arms and neck showed evidence of severe beating. The girl was removed to a hospital.

Johnson said he whipped his daughter because she could not control her. His case was continued. One witness declared Johnson beat him in assault with intent to murder.

Kills Self With Ninth Shot.

Yonkers, N. Y.—Carl H. Nystrom, fifty-seven, a machinist, used up nine shots before he succeeded in killing himself at his home here. After firing his revolver once he had dropped the empty shells upon the floor and reloaded the pistol. Five bullets were imbedded in the walls and ceilings, three lodged in the man's abdomen and the ninth penetrated the brain.

Blinders or Veils, Which?

Boston.—"It is going to be a choice between blinders for the men or veils for the women," said the Rev. Frederick E. Heath, pastor of the Warren Baptist church here, discussing the latest dresses worn by women. He asserted that the new styles in dress cause disgust to the "right minded."

MINNESOTA STATE NEWS

LOW FARE RATES PUT INTO EFFECT

AGENT MILE CHARGE NOW IN FORCE ALL OVER MINNESOTA.

REFUNDS ARE BEING MADE

Drafts Are Made Out In Blank to Be Sent to Claimants Making Proper Affidavits—Some Voluntary Reductions Made.

Minneapolis. — Promptly at midnight Sunday night ticket agents in Minnesota discarded their old passenger tariffs. When the ticket office opened Monday the new 2-cent rate was in effect. With the passenger rate reduced by one-third, the railway representatives have prepared to handle an increase in traffic within the state.

Claims Being Refunded.

In the auditing departments of the several railroads preparations have been made to refund claims, and the first drafts have already been sent out. Application for this refund must be made by affidavit, and a typewritten form of affidavit has been decided upon by the roads interested.

C. W. Tilton, auditor of passenger receipts, Great Northern Railway, said:

The blank drafts are now ready to be mailed upon receipt of affidavit showing the applicant is entitled to a refund. Already we have about 1,000 applications."

A uniform method of handling the freight claims also was decided upon by the railroads. This part of the work is being handled through the freight claim department.

Cessive Injunctions.

The Federal courts completed their part of the Minnesota rate case battle at 10 a. m. Monday, when Judge Willard, acting on the motion of Attorney General L. A. Smith, dismissed the injunctions against the state, which have prevented them since 1911, from enforcing the 2-cent rate law against the railroads. This is in accordance with the mandate of the United States Supreme Court, filed Saturday.

Voluntary Reductions Made.

The Minneapolis & St. Louis quoted rates meeting those of other roads at competitive points, but on the company is exempted from obligation to alter the state laws that have been in controversy, it does not make the 2-cent rate to strictly local points. Rates to local points are reduced, however, so that in no case will they be higher than to a competitive point farther on. For instance, the Albert Lea rate is $2.04, reduced from $2.25 by reason of Rock Island competition. The $2.04 cent rate is "blanketed" back to the stations of Manchester, Hartland, New Richland and Ottico, while Waseca, which had a $2.27 rate, is reduced to $1.87 because of the North-Western's competition. The Montgomery rate is reduced to $1.08 because of Milwaukee competition, and New Prague, this side of Montgomery, also gets the $1.08 rate. The Minneapolis & St. Louis meets North-Western competition to New Ulm with a reduction from $2.01 to $1.87, and Omaha competition to St. James is met by a cut from $2.36 to $2.18.

Because Moorhead is just across the river from Fargo, with a 2-cent fare of $4.60 from Minneapolis, the Fargo rate is reduced from $6.95 to $4.60.

Sheriff Raids Alleged Liquor Joint.

St. Cloud—Charged with selling liquor without a license in Benton county, Frank Skiba and wife appeared before a justice and entered plea of not guilty. They were arrested at Gilman, Stearns miles north of here. The sheriff raided the place and attached a wagonload of paraphernalia necessary in the dispensing of "booze." It is likely other arrests on the same charge will follow. The hearing of Skiba and his wife will occur within a few days.

Help Up on Business Street.

Minneapolis, July 12. — H. W Springer, who operates a confectionery store at 3303 Nicollet avenue, was held up by the approved Wild West style by a masked man with a large revolver. Springer was closing his store at 11:15 o'clock when the man walked in the front door, pointed the revolver at Springer and said: "Back up against the wall, stick your hands up and keep them there. Don't move and don't try to telephone the police after I'm gone."

Man Blows His Head Off.

Grand Rapids.—John Aho, a farm hand 30 years of age, committed suicide by blowing his head off with dynamite. In a memorandum book found upon his person after the deed, he stated that he did not wish anyone to feel sorry because of his act. In plain staid of several men making hay he placed a stick of dynamite on top of his head and fit the fuses to each of four. His head was blown completely off. No relatives reside in America, his mother living in Finland.

Chatfield Man Murdered.

Chatfield.—Dennis Lyach, who was reported to have been accidently killed at Judith Gap, Mont., Monday, July 14, was murdered. The remains were brought to his home here, and the funeral was held early Monday.

Waseca Robber Pleads Guilty.

Waseca.—The residence of Rev. Mr. McCormick, Methodist minister, was robbed Friday evening. A large amount of silverware and a suit of clothes were taken. John Conway was later arrested and plead guilty.

DOMESTIC FELICITY INSURED

Fathers Give Bonds That Boy and Girl Will Be Model Husband and Wife When Couple are Wed.

Rochester.—That the son will make a model husband and the daughter a model wife are the pledges that have been signed by the fathers of two well-known families of this county, who will become connected by marriage in the near future.

Castian Dart, age 20, and Elizabeth Bodd, age 17, have been sweethearts for years and their desire to wed has been made known to the parents. No objections have been raised and, while both prospective bridegroom and bride declare that the eternal love for each other assures a most happy wedded life, the parents have decided to do all that is possible in a legal way to prevent divorce or any other pitfalls for the young married couple.

Accordingly a bond has been signed by the father of each family. Dan's father promising that his son will not loaf, gamble, drink, play pool or dance with young women other than his wife, his pledge being a $700 bond. The bride-elect's father has deposited a cash bond of $700 that his daughter will make a model wife, will not gossip, run around with other men and will cook to the husband's satisfaction.

ENTOMBED MINERS RESCUED

Prisoners in Eveleth, Minn., Shaft Stand in Water That Part of Time for Days.

Eveleth, Minn., July 19—The five men who were entombed at the Spruce mine here Wednesday as a result of a cloudburst were rescued 36 hours later, and much of that time had stood in water waist deep and at times neck deep.

They were almost famished, and were crazed from the dreadful strain of the darkness and pitiated air in their small quarters 150 feet below the surface and with the prospect of starving or suffocating.

The miners were located by rescuers who were hoisting out the mine which had been drilled 40 feet into the shale. After the first signals were heard, the work of excavating was resumed with double energy and the men were soon located and brought to the surface.

Big Boom at Bemidji.

Bemidji.—Bemidji real estate has taken a jump since the location of the sixth normal school. Lots in the vicinity of the proposed site have been raised in price from twenty-five to fifty per cent. The "run" was made on the local office of the Northern Townsite & Improvement company and many purchased lots adjoining the site. Thayer C. Bailey, who represents the company, received word to take all lots in that vicinity off the market for the time being.

Winona.—With the hoodle of a bunchhook protruding from her mouth, 3-year-old Jessie Jamison, daughter of her mother's arms, was carried through the second story of a town streets to a physician's office. When the frightened mother reached the stairway leading to the physician's office, the child coughed up the fish hook. The physician said it had caught on one of her tonsils. The baby was not injured by the strain.

Ten Per Cent Dividend Declared.

Comfrey—At the annual meeting of the Cottonwood Farmers' Elevator company J. Chilsaas was elected. The elected directors. A 10 per cent. dividend was declared. The company has been in business one year. C. M. Erickson has purchased the controlling stock in the State bank of Willow City, the child caught in the belt of the tonhook. The physician said it had caught on one of her tonsils. The baby was not injured by the strain.

Body Hurled Against Signal.

Winona.—Hurled against a telegraph pole, while returning from a vaudeville, was struck and killed by an eastbound Chicago, Minneapolis & St. Paul passenger train near East Winona, across the river. His body was thrown into the overhead equipment of the signal system and the operator in the tower made the discovery when he attempted to throw the levers.

Bemidji Socialists Lose.

Bemidji.—Bemidji socialists were snowed under at the city of Bemidji when the entire socialist ticket was defeated, when all the old members of the board were reelected, being K. K. Brinson and Edward Anderson. The next election will be held at Akeley. The resolutions recommend that third and second class postmasters come under the civil service system.

Worried as to Son.

Winona.—Winona authorities are in receipt of a letter from Mrs. Thomas Gillingham, of Oshkosh, making anxious inquiries concerning her son, Ralph, age 18, who is said to have joined the company of Mexicos, the bandit. When he was last heard from in May. The peculiar death at Columbus on May 27 of Roy Clark, a well-known boy who was traveling with this company, has given her some anxiety. Clark died as the result of an overdose of a drug.

Faribault.—Edward Brewster, a farmer, was seriously injured when he stepped in front of a sickle and his team started. One of his legs was cut from the knee to his foot, severing a bone and the tendons and arteries.

Mankato.—Alexander Thompson, of Lamberton, was buried in this city, having dropped dead on a North Western passenger train just as he was leaving his home. Death was due to heart failure. He lived in Mankato most of his life.

DASH LEADS TO ARRESTS

Wyoming, Minn., Citizens Play Detectives and Secure Arrest of Alleged Swindler.

St. Paul.—Amateur detective work by two citizens of Wyoming, Minn., resulted in the arrest of three men at the Union depot. They are alleged to have swindled a 19-year-old boy in that town of $18. The three men, J. Kerr, C. Kerr and J. Claus, were arrested by Patrolman Parseley as they stepped from a Northern Pacific passenger train, on complaint of A. Richter and W. G. Ward, employees of the Great Carpet company at Wyoming. They will be held at Central police station awaiting a formal complaint.

The three men had decided to quit work at the Great Carpet company plant, according to the story the two others told the police here, and went to the office while Mr. Richner and his assistant were absent and presented a pay check for 35 cents. Robert, 19-year-old son of Mr. Richter, asked for information.

They told the boy, it is alleged, that the sum due was $38.52. Mr. Richner said, reading the number on the pay check, pulled beside the sum due, as the full amount called for. The boy paid them and they disappeared, he said.

Richner and Ward traced them to the railway station, where they had purchased tickets for Cokato, Wis., and had taken a train. The two men left for St. Paul in an automobile, driving ahead of the train, and confronted the three at the Union depot.

STATE LAND'S DRE RECORDS

123,555 Tons of Smelting Iron Shipped in One Week—$325,000 in Royalties Expected.

St. Paul.—Three records on state lands shipped 123,555 tons of iron ore during the week ending Saturday, according to figures given out by State Auditor Samuel G. Iverson. He said that was the heaviest tonnage ever shipped during a like period in the history of mining in Minnesota.

There were seven shipping ore state lands, but only thirteen reported having shipped anything. Heaviest shipments were made from the Grant, Leonard, Scranton and Missouri Mountain mines.

Auditor Iverson said he believed that during 1913 all records for ore shipments will be broken. Since the first of the year, 1,000,000 tons have been 1,646,402 tons of ore shipped from Minnesota mines. Mr. Iverson said today he expected quarterly checks from the mining companies soon, giving the state $325,000 in royalties.

Horse and Girl Escape.

Rochester—While the buggy in which she was riding was smashed to pieces when struck by a freight train, Miss Julia Boler, of this city, was miraculously saved from instant death by being hurled to the top of the carriage. She was about to drive across the tracks of the Great Western in this city, when she noticed a freight backing. In an instant she turned her horse in a frantic endeavor to avoid a collision, but the approaching cars struck the buggy, tore off Miss Boler into the top of the buggy and grinding the wheels of the rig to kindling. Before the train could be stopped the horse was killed and its occupant were carried forty feet, when the brakes of the box cars released the horse and the wreck came clear of the rails. Neither Miss Boler nor the horse received any injury.

Fleeing Greek Captured.

Pipestone—A Greek named George Nickols, wanted for attempted murder at Flandreau, was arrested here. Nickols, in company with another Greek, Peter Christ, operated a confectionery store at Flandreau a few days ago the two had an argument over business affairs and Nickols procured a gun and, while walking to their sleeping apartments, dropped a few steps behind Gilles and opened fire upon him. One of the bullets took effect in Gilles' back, and, seeing his victim fall and believing him to be mortally wounded, Nickels fled from Flandreau.

Postmasters Meet in Convention.

Long Prairie.—The St. Cloud District League of Postmasters held its convention here. The delegates say this was the most interesting convention in the history of the league. The newly elected officers are: W. D. Calhben, Long Prairie, president; Y. Rose, Rockr, secretary. The next convention will be held at Akeley. The resolutions recommend that third and second class postmasters come under the civil service system.

PARIS COPIES NUN'S COIFFURE

Underwood & Underwood

THE very latest headdress for evening wear which has appeared in Paris has a touch of the religious about it, not only in appearance but in name. The "Nun's Cap" is made of rare old lace and set with diamonds who are devautedly religious have.

SMALL BOY PLAINLY DRESSED

Perfection of Cut and Workmanship Demanded, Though Materials Must Be Inconspicuous.

The clothes of the well-dressed small boy grow plainer and plainer; though more attention is bestowed than ever before on their perfection of cut and workmanship. Linen, percales and galateas are the best choices for play frocks or seiior suits, and for the formal costume, white serge or mohair, or heavy white attoman silk may be used. A little boy of six, who has big brown eyes and dark hair bobbed off in the familiar Buster Brown style, has had made for summer wear six silken suits, all in the picturesque sailor style, with very full blouses over very short knickers. Two of the suits are of white tub silk and with these go flowing sailor ties of black silk. One suit is of a blue and white tub silk and is accompanied by a dark blue tie; another suit of tan and cream silk has a tie of warm amber silk. A gala suit is of red and white tub silk, with a red necktie and white collar embroidered with red anchors. The suit de luxe, however, is one of white faille silk, embroidered on collar and sleeves with white chevrone and having a tie of pale blue surah.

MAY SELECT MOST SUITABLE

Styles in Summer Millinery Afford a Wide Choice to Suit Individual Taste and Appearance.

The medium-sized hat of homy legborn or milan is the most popular head covering at the present time.

The lingerie hats are pretty, but do poke chapes are particularly stylish and chic. The most popular colors for these hats are pastel shades of rose (strawberry), in the way of novelty colors, white shades bordering on sand, gold and champagne are also seen. The hats are covered with English crepe are particularly charming, especially when trimmed with wheat, roses and ribbon trimmings. The dressy leghorn models, trimmed with shadow lace or chiffon, are beautiful. The foremost trimming seems to be the rose, the huge pink ones seeming to be most prominent.

A fat cluster of roses, posed on the front of the crown at the top and a single tall rose were noted on two of the most recent importations from famous Paris makers.

Lingerie Hat.

The popularity of the embroidered linen hat will deserve, for the shaded embroided is especially attractive. The design on the crown is a wreath of forget-me-nots done with the solid stitch, the center of which is punched work.

About the brim at intervals are embroidered medallions, the embroidered and punched work combined. The extreme edge of the brim is scalloped and buttonhole stitched. Beneath this is sewn a frill of lace. A wreath of tiny flowers encircles the crown and a rosette and streamer of pale blue ribbon adorn each side.

Fillet Net Waists.

Plain filet net in a deep cream that is used with good effect for simple waists. Such waists are lined chiffon or unlined and are frequently trimmed with the net itself. Lots of medici collars of satin finish the necks and the cuffs are of satin with frills of the net.

Separate Waists.

The newest separate waists are designed with yokes. The lower parts of these waists are generously full back and front.

Fichu Effects.

The draped fichu effects in net, bobbin, chiffon or mousseline de sole are seen on nearly all of the new dresses

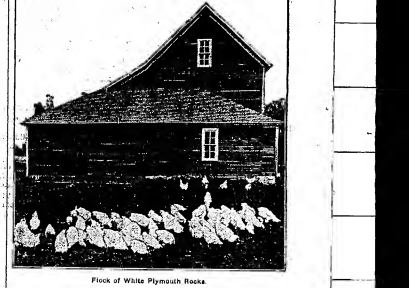
KERCHIEFS FOR THE BRIDE

Dainty Touches That May Be Put Into Gifts Intended to Convey All Good Wishes.

Instead of hemming, roll the edges French fashion. To do this, first dampen the thumb and first finger of the left hand and roll an finely as possible as you continue to sew. The lace edging or insertion that you trim with should be sewed on with the same stitch that sews the roll. In other words the roll and edging are sewed at the same time. It makes a prettier, more delicate dainty than a hem as it is almost invisible. Such hand kerchiefs may be trimmed as simply or as elaborately as you wish. If you wish to embroider the bride's monogram or her name, cut her signature from the bottom of a letter. Place it against the window pane with the handkerchief on the top and trace the name in pencil onto the linen.

A novel handkerchief is made with a four-inch diamond shaped center of white velveteen, which takes the place of the chanels. Powder may be dusted upon the chamois velvet center, and it clings to the nappy face even better than to the surface of a chamois skin.

UNINTENTIONAL CRUELTIES TO POULTRY



Flock of White Plymouth Rocks.

(By MICHAEL K. BOYER.)

It is surprising how many people, otherwise model citizens, are guilty of cruelty to both fowls and animals. as may not be altogether intentional as their part, but nevertheless they do things that call for censure.

One of the most common acts is to carry chickens by their legs, heads down. This cruelty has been practiced for years and no one thought much about it.

They did not notice the rush of blood to the head of the fowl when carried that way. A neighbor of ours the other day was carrying a fat hen by the legs and in a few moments the bird was gasping and came pretty near strangling to death.

An equally cruel method is to carry the fowl by the wings—especially so when the fowls are heavily bodied. The proper way is to allow the fowl to rest on the arm, the legs held firmly by the hand; or it can be held between the arm and the body.

A dealer was one day noticed to yank killing stock out of a crate by catching it by a leg or a wing and otherwise roughly handling them. When remonstrated with he replied that it did not matter, as the birds would soon be killed.

With some people it is common occurrence to throw chickens over the fence into a yard. There is really no telling is what manner they will reach the ground and when this cruelty is performed when the attendant is in a hurry to get there is considerable force put into the throw.

A very pious old gentleman was noted to do the "coaxing" point because his chickens happened to get out of the yard through a broken fence into his garden.

In his anger he threw a stone and lamed one of the fowls. "There, that serves you right, I don't pity you a bit," was the only comment on the accident.

JUDGMENT NEEDED WITH LATE CHICKS

Late Hatched Fowls Must Be Hurried in Their Growth Fast as Possible.

(By MISS A. J. WILDER.)

June is a busy month with the farm poultry raiser and the days are hard to long enough to do what must be done with the poultry and in the garden.

The long, hard winter and late, wet spring have thrown us all behind in the work of both. This will cause us to hatch more late chickens than we otherwise would have done, more care and trouble to bring them to maturity before cold weather catches them. The late hatch covered with care and good judgment. Late hatched chicken must be hurried in their growth as fast as possible and still must not be overfed so that their digestion is injured. Indeed, this is the problem in all chick feeding.

For all chicks, late or early, the same rule holds for the first feeding. Do not feed for twenty-four hours after hatching. Some say thirty-six hours, but I think that is too long, as leaving the chicks so long without nourishment weakens them and is as bad for feeding too soon. I make it six hours and then squeeze them dry.

Fresh water and chickseaked grit should be kept before them from the start. Finely cut dry bone should also be kept in boxes where they can help themselves.

After a few days I allow the chicks to run on the grass around the coop and feed them only at morning and night. At the time, throw a little grit out the feed coop for them. This coop is moved around so that the little chicks can get in but the large chickens are shut out. In this I keep some of the oatmeal, cracked wheat, and corn chop, about a dish of water and one of cut bone, dried and fine, and fine charcoal, so that if the old hen brings her brood from an obe nearly does they can eat and flock and help themselves to whatever they may need from the other coop.

Coops where the chicks hover must be kept perfectly clean. As I have no floors in my coops, I move them every day onto fresh ground, being careful not to set them on low places where a rain in the night would drown my chicks.

There must be plenty of ventilation in the coops as fresh air is necessary to the health of the youngsters. Several times a week they still hover in the coops I dust them with insect powder, rub a drop of oil into the down on their heads, and rub their legs with vaseline. My hen houses and coops are on high ground, and when the chicks prefer roosting in an apple tree to going into their coop, they are allowed to do so as trees are and roost there until cold weather in the fall, when they will be put with the chicks clean, busy, and growing, and they grow right quickly.

Value of Hen Manure.

It is claimed that 100 pounds of fresh hen manure contains about 60 pounds water, 1 pound ammonia manure, 66 pounds ash. Analysis shows this poultry manure contains 2.26 per cent phosphoric acid, 1.36 per cent potash and 1.36 per cent nitrogen, as ammonia and organic matter.

Protection From Worms.

A little collar of paper wrapped around the feet used to tie tags trees and will protect from damage by cutworms

Pastures for Sheep.

Change your flock of sheep to fresh pastures as often as you can.

Cutting "Wax Plant" Flowers.

Cut the fresh seed ends of the "Wax Plant" unless you wish no further blooms. Its flowers are produced in scents; the same "bye" each time, and if this eye is removed no more flowers will develop.

Get After Mites.

Chicken lice and mites are now putting in their best licks at night just when the fowls need rest. Get after them with the kerosene can and sprayer.

Raise More Vegetables.

We Americans do not raise half as many vegetables as we ought. A seed catalogue from an European house will surprise many people on this side who think they are pretty good vegetable gardeners.

Kill the Jay Bird.

The Jay bird is very destructive to eggs and should be killed on sight, and his gaudy plumage exposed in the top of a tree, as a warning to others of his ilk.

New Sashes.

New girdles and sashes appear as by magic every few days, and some of them are fearful and wonderful indeed. Others will be unobjectionable if they are discreetly reserved for wear with white and cream summer frocks. Of these are the new pongee sashes in Oxford designs and stripes. They come from ten to 18 inches wide and look more like crepe than pongee. The ends are gathered into tassels and of the colors shown in the printed patterns.

Rose and Yellow.

Rose and yellow shades, from the palest pink and lemon, to the damask red and coppery yellows, lead the way among colors in the newest silks and satins, corded crepes de sole and other fashionable fabrics, while among the materials suitable for garden party and afternoon frocks are the many varieties of chine and Pompadour silks and floral patterned de-

LOW FARE RATES PUT INTO EFFECT

AGENT MILE CHARGE NOW IN FORCE ALL OVER MINNESOTA.

REFUNDS ARE BEING MADE

Drafts Are Made Out In Blank to Be Sent to Claimants Making Proper Affidavits—Some Voluntary Reductions Made.

Minneapolis. — Promptly at midnight Sunday night ticket agents in Minnesota discarded their old passenger tariffs. When the ticket office opened Monday the new 2-cent rate was in effect. With the passenger rate reduced by one-third, the railway representatives have prepared to handle an increase in traffic within the state.

Claims Being Refunded.

In the auditing departments of the several railroads preparations have been made to refund claims, and the first drafts have already been sent out. Application for this refund must be made by affidavit, and a typewritten form of affidavit has been decided upon by the roads interested.

C. W. Tilton, auditor of passenger receipts, Great Northern Railway, said:

The blank drafts are now ready to be mailed upon receipt of affidavit showing the applicant is entitled to a refund. Already we have about 1,000 applications."

A uniform method of handling the freight claims also was decided upon by the railroads. This part of the work is being handled through the freight claim department.

Cessive Injunctions.

The Federal courts completed their part of the Minnesota rate case battle at 10 a. m. Monday, when Judge Willard, acting on the motion of Attorney General L. A. Smith, dismissed the injunctions against the state, which have prevented them since 1911, from enforcing the 2-cent rate law against the railroads. This is in accordance with the mandate of the United States Supreme Court, filed Saturday.

Voluntary Reductions Made.

The Minneapolis & St. Louis quoted rates meeting those of other roads at competitive points, but on the company is exempted from obligation to alter the state laws that have been in controversy, it does not make the 2-cent rate to strictly local points. Rates to local points are reduced, however, so that in no case will they be higher than to a competitive point farther on. For instance, the Albert Lea rate is $2.04, reduced from $2.25 by reason of Rock Island competition. The $2.04 cent rate is "blanketed" back to the stations of Manchester, Hartland, New Richland and Ottico, while Waseca, which had a $2.27 rate, is reduced to $1.87 because of the North-Western's competition. The Montgomery rate is reduced to $1.08 because of Milwaukee competition, and New Prague, this side of Montgomery, also gets the $1.08 rate. The Minneapolis & St. Louis meets North-Western competition to New Ulm with a reduction from $2.01 to $1.87, and Omaha competition to St. James is met by a cut from $2.36 to $2.18.

Because Moorhead is just across the river from Fargo, with a 2-cent fare of $4.60 from Minneapolis, the Fargo rate is reduced from $6.95 to $4.60.

COAT, PANTS AND HAT

That is the Extent of Property Stolen When Circus Was Here.

Either the people of Red Lake Falls took the precautions suggested by Chief of Police Fred Cyr or not a very clever bunch of thieves followed the Haag circus that was here Monday. The "lifting" of a coat, a pair of pants and a hat was the extent of the thieving. But you must not get the idea that the thieves were so clever as to remove the articles of wearing apparel from their victims while their attention was attracted by the elephants and beautiful ladies in the parade. The coat and hat were taken from an automobile and the pants were taken from L. E. Ericson's tailor shop while Mr. Ericson was out temporarily getting a fresh supply of Bibs.

DELIGHTFUL CONCERT.

Band Boys Gave a Pleasing Program Tuesday Evening.

The people who heard the concert given by the Red Lake Falls Concert band Tuesday evening can understand why the people in cities where the band has appeared publicly recently have been saying nice things about the band.

The concert was delightful. The band boys played a program of high-class stuff in a first-class manner. This was not only pleasing to the ear but otherwise satisfying, for Red Lake Falls people again have reason to be proud of their excellent band.

SUMMER SCHOOL CLOSED YESTERDAY

WAS SUCCESSFUL SESSION OF FOUR WEEKS—FACULTY GIVEN RECEPTION.

The summer training school for teachers that has been in session in this city for the past four weeks closed yesterday and the faculty members have returned to their homes. The faculty was a strong one and excellent work has given practical results. The enrollment was between sixty and seventy student-teachers, which is somewhat smaller than that of previous similar schools. However, it is probable that the smaller attendance has made more efficient work possible.

Tuesday evening the summer school students gave a reception for the faculty members. The party was given at the court house and was a very enjoyable affair.

The Maid and the Minister.

Dear friends:—As there are many travelling shows not worthy of patronage, a fact very seldom found out in time to save the public from being bamboozled, we are using this means to acquaint you with our attraction, "The Maid and the Minister," which is to be presented at the opera house on Aug. 5. Anyone attending the play and not thoroughly satisfied can make it known at the box office and your money will be immediately refunded. This is not a mere play of words, but a positive guarantee, backed up by the signature of The Maid and Minister Co. This production had a New York run of 162 nights, and equally as long in Boston as well as the classic. It is a present day problem, the story of which will thrill the finger in the minds of the young and old forever, interwoven with clean and unsuggestive comedy and intense dramatic situations. The theme is as natural as the wind that blows or the flower that grows. N. S. Sotcville, late of "Reid in the Hills Co." is a real comedian, and will cure the most obstinate cases of the blues. The two leading roles are by the bands of Alice Southern and Ralph Deane, recognized stage artists, who have appeared in some of the leading attractions of the middle west—"The Aviator", "Man and Wife", "Under Two Flags" and "Third Degree." Special attention is called to the beautiful costumes worn by the ladies in this production. Three of the gowns worn are direct from Paris, of the very latest design, which are creating sensation found even to the larger cities. Remember the date, Tuesday, August 5.—Deane & Scoville, Managers.

$50 Reward.

The Chas. Kankel mare was struck by Thursday night, June 12, at Terrebonne, Red Lake County, and a reward of $50 will be paid for information leading to the recovery of the stolen property. Following is a description of the outfit:

Rig stolen consists of dark bay mare, aged 12 years old, weight about 1100 pounds, white star in forehead and white spot on side of head. She is a blooded road mare and carries her head high; was hitched to red gear top buggy, top worn considerable and buggy is old. Harness had collar and bames. Valuable buffalo robe and a plush robe were in the buggy. Also among farmers' livery harns for it is believed the horse will be offered for sale. Wire at my expense all information about the stolen property.

Drove an Auto Through Garage.

Ada, July 29.—What might have proven to be fatal accidents happened to Dr. J. T. Shetland while driving his large Studebaker touring car out of the West side garage. In some manner he killed the engine while a rod or so inside the radio entrance, and before he could set the brakes and change the lever from high speed to neutral, crashed through the front end of the garage, into the brick wall and sent Dr. Shetland through the front window. He received a few cuts from the glass, but otherwise sustained no injury.

CAR WENT INTO DITCH.

M. T. Catlin Figured in Auto Accident—Five Injured.

A report from Fairmont, Minn., says that a car being driven at a high rate of speed by H. T. Catlin, the former Red Lake Falls man, overturned and the five occupants of the car were caught in a barbed wire fence and all injured. One of the occupants of the car, Mrs. Hill, was so badly injured that it took twenty-five stitches to sew up the wounds in her arm. The car was a complete wreck.

F-O-R-D
The Universal Car

IF THERE WERE NO FORDS, AUTOMOBILing would be like yachting---the sport of rich men. But by centering his effort upon the production of one good car, Henry Ford has brought the price down within reason---and the easy reach of many.

It's not best because it's largest in sales---but largest in sales because it's best. There are six Fords sold to one of any other car. 'Twould be hard to find a more convincing reason why you should own one.

Extract from Ford "Sales Bulletin" of July 26th:

Ford Cars WILL NOT BE SOLD for $250.00, $350.00 or three for $1,000.00 to any buyer or buyers, either wholesale or retail.

Ford Cars WILL NOT BE SOLD at any SPECIAL PRICE at the Factory on any particular day to any buyer or club of buyers. In spite of the fact that such reports have been very generally circulated.

Ford Cars WILL NOT BE SOLD through the Standard Oil Company or any other company than ourselves and our regularly licensed dealers throughout the country. Dealers have only to read their contracts to appreciate the absurdity of such reports.

The entire Ford organization is authorized to deny ANY AND ALL RUMORS detrimental to or affecting our business in any way.

When there are changes to be made in our plans, policies, contracts, prices or anything else affecting our relations with dealers or sub-dealers, they will be the first ones to know it.

Dealers need only to read their contracts and do business accordingly, as our agreements are ample guarantee that such rumors as the above are "lies out of whole cloth."

Fall Rye.

Rye, sown about September 10, makes one of the best of spring pastures. It starts early (a week or ten days ahead of the grasses, ordinarily) and makes vigorous growth. Sheep and small pigs may be turned on it when four or five inches high; and if the land is not overstocked, it will provide good pasture for three or four weeks. The seeding of rye pasture in Minnesota will range from April 10 to May 10; in some localities the dates may be somewhat later.

Wheo sown for the purpose of pasturage, seed should be used at the rate of 2 to 2½ bushels per acre. Fall rye sown in the spring will not do. Timothy and Alsike, Whereupon the Chairman of the Board declared said reclaiming duty adopted.

On motion duly carried the Board adjourned until the 31st day of July, 1913.

JAMES BRADY HAS THE CONTRACT

LOCAL CONTRACTOR WILL BUILD THE NEW SCHOOL HOUSE.

The contract for building Red Lake Falls new public school building has been awarded to James Brady, the local contractor. Contractor John-son of Crookston is to do the brick work, he having a sub-contract from Mr. Brady for that part of the work.

Mr. Brady's bid was $32,268.00. This is for putting up the building exclusive of heating, plumbing and septic tank. Contracts for these other necessary features will be awarded later.

Before the contract was awarded it was necessary to revise the plans. On the original plans there were eight bids, ranging from $38,-000 to $45,000. Those were all too high for the amount of work covered by the bids. The building is to be as large as originally planned but its arrangement will be altered.

Though there were eight bids on the original plans there were only two on the revised plans, Mr. Brady's being a few hundred dollars lower than that of the Schmidt company of Alexandria.

STATE DRAINAGE BOARD.

Inspecting Big Ditches in Northern Minnesota.

Governor Eberhart, Secretary of State Schmahl and State Auditor Iverson, members of the state drainage commission, accompanied by Attorney General Smith went to Middle River today to inspect the work that has been done on state ditch No. 82. A hearing will be had at that place this afternoon, to give all interested parties a chance to be heard relative to that ditch, and present complaints, if there are any.

The party will reach Greenbush Friday at noon in order to make a final inspection of state ditch No. 91, which is reported to have been finished. It is expected that Friday and Saturday will be required in the examination of Ditch No. 91.

COMMISSIONERS PROCEEDINGS

BOARD OF COUNTY COMMISSIONERS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINN.

Red Lake Falls, Minn., July 22rd, 1913.

Pursuant to adjournment the Red Lake County Commissioners of Red Lake county met at the Commissioners' Rooms in the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, this 22nd day of July, 1913, at ten o'clock A. M.

Members present: Hunt, Pigeon, Hansen and Schultz.

Members absent: Cadieux.

Meeting called to order by the Chairman.

The list of unsolicited personal property taxes for the year 1912 as returned by the Sheriff was received by the board and citations were ordered issued against the following named persons in the following sums:

THIEVES TOOK GAME

Was Clean and Interesting But Not a Game Played Contest.

The ball game played on the local grounds Sunday afternoon between the Third River Falls and the Red Lake Falls teams resulted in a victory by the visitors by a 6 to 3 score. The game was clean and interesting and well played except for the poor support the visiting players their pitcher. This is somewhat excusable. The locals had not been in a game for a month. The local star box performer, Kollenheim, who is also manager of the team, has been in most demand and during the past month has filled a dozen or more outside engagements. In the meantime the members of the team had been loafing on the job and were in poor shape to go into the game. Their regular catcher Little or Kollenheim's delivery and had the locals played their usually good game the victory should have been theirs.

WITHEY'S STORY.

Bull Moose's Thrilling Rescue of a University Student.

The following story published in Tuesday's Crookston Times is credited, on the authority of Chas W. Withey, the popular G. N. conductor:

A thrilling escape from drowning in Rainy river at Fort Francis, Ont., by catching hold of the antlers of a big bull moose in the very middle across the river, was the experience yesterday of Chas W. Boyd of Minneapolis, a young junior engineering student of the state university.

Boyd, working at Fort Francis for a lumber company, was on a raft of logs when it struck a jam, was broken on up and left him clinging to a single log of lumber shuffling rapidly down the river toward the falls.

He had given up hope when he saw the moose with its head and antlers above water, swimming safely across the rapids. Boyd let loose of his log, grabbed one horn of the animal and shifting himself to the animal's back he rode it in shallow water.

GREATEST RACING IN FAIR'S HISTORY

Rich Purses and Fast Track Attract the Country's Best to Hamline Meet.

The Minnesota State Fair offering of $37,500 in purses has attracted the largest and best list of entries ever made in the early closing events of a race meet in the Northwest. Owners from twenty-two states and provinces of the United States and Canada have named 194 horses in these events. With the entries in twelve late closing events yet to come, it is a safe prediction that nearly 400 of the country's best harness horses will battle for supremacy over the famous Hamline track in September.

Last year's harness races at the Minnesota State Fair were conceded by all to be the best all around speed program ever given in this part of the country. The number and class of entries, the general interest of horsemen and all other conditions indicate that the 1913 program will surpass in every way that of 1912.

A daily race program is as follows:

CAUSES WORRY IN EBERHART CAMP

G. G. IVERSON'S POSSIBLE CANDIDACY FOR THE GOVERNORSHIP.

St. Paul.—(Special)—With a ball dozen or more Minnesotans of prominence hovering dangerously near the Republican gubernatorial honey pot the position of State Auditor S. G. Iverson is of more than ordinary interest at this portlouier time. In fact the state auditor's movements just now are causing the Eberhart contingent some worry and quite a few sleepless nights. To be plain, dear reader, Mr. Iverson would like to guide the ship of state as soon as the present incumbent is through guiding, and he hopes that will be soon. Sam—pardon the flippant use of Mr. Iverson's surname—has had his gubernatorial bunch for nearly four years now and unless the unexpected happens Adolph Olesh Schultz and certain others of the party who are looking for jobs, four years more, but as you probably know when ambition gets the gubernatorial bee in him more often goes off the other door. At any rate we will wait and see.

This week the state board of control is putting out another $100,000 in state edifices, when men of mind are being sold in lots of $100 and multiples thereof. Of course there is no small investors a chance to get hold of some of this graft, but the fact that the state is going into the real estate and building business to the popular sale of bonds and the outcome is being watched by many. The $100,000 worth referred is part of a $700,000 appropriation made by the legislature. The bonds are for school building improvement purposes.

Minnesota is not the richest state in the Union in point of permanent trust funds. At the close of business last week there was to the credit of the public schools and the university totaled nearly $32,000,000 and years still obtain, it will be a big one, as Iverson says he believes the total will be close to $40,000,000. From the sale of school lands last year the state realized over $1,000,000 and from the lands nearly $100,000, in addition the sale of state timber brought in $500,000. All of this went to the credit of the trust funds.

Governor Eberhart is going to make his initial talk as state content of public matters at the state fair. It is to be made before a meeting of office holders and others to be held in the St. Paul end as soon as delivered copies of the message will be in the hands of the press. Governor Eberhart broke cast down the latter regarding the program outlined by the governor's advisers there is talk of a big campaign of education following the speech. A suggestion in his secretary October might be the month selected for the calling of the special session of the legislature to consider a public utilities bill, but if his initial speech is to be made at the state fair Aug. 15 and a campaign of education is to follow, it would hardly seem possible that the October date has been decided upon. As to the members of the legislature they are almost to a man for a January call.

If Governor Eberhart imagines he is going to confine the special session of the legislature to the public utilities bill he has another guess coming. As the tax cuts have the final guns in the house at least are to be spread and every fill the state was ever built to be in the list. There will be big road roads bills, railroad acts, women's suffrage and anti-saloon bills by the load. Nothing will be precluded. Governor Eberhart knows the legislature members will have themselves getting solid with their constituents and that they would all go.

When the statewide primary law was up for discussion the writer pointed out the attached and the state legislature appropriated the sum of $10,000 to aid in the enforcement. Either the politicians and voters are obeying the corrupt practices end of the law or it is a dead letter, as although the primary was held in May it will be up to the legislature to return the unexpended portion to the state treasury or appropriate it for something else.

Representative T. Knapp of Chisholm, one of the big men of the test legislature, will not be seen at future sessions of the body. Mr. Knapp has moved to Arizona, where he becomes general counsel for a wealthy copper mining company. His salary it is said will be more than $10,000 men. The Chisholm man, as stated, was one of the house leaders during the last session and was generally picked to go after Congressman Miller's job. When he was in St. Paul last week Mr. Knapp said he was through with the political game.

As you probably know Senator Schaller is slated to be head of the faculty for the new state normal school and new plans are on foot to have the school ready for the fall term of 1914. Senator Schaller has been active

SYNOPSIS.

Gregor Anderson and wife are a remarkable couple. Their home in Chetwood hotel look around curiously, watch the hands on the street and then the convention attracts them to the Clermont. Mrs. Anderson is a mind reader. Malcolm Chalmers has fallen ill and Anderson describes the man he saw wash his hands in the stone. The police manager of the hotel is suspicious of Anderson. Finkelburg and that Miss Chalmers was robbed and not, as both seem to fear Brotherson of suspicion.

CHAPTER IV.—Continued.

"What kind of a looking person was the man who took you outside last night?" I laughed at Georges, with my eyes still on this furtive watcher.

A fellow to make you laugh. A perfect character. Laura; hideously homely but agreeable enough. I took quite a fancy to him. Why?"

"I am looking at him now."

Very likely. He's deep in this affair. Just an everyday detective, but ambitious, I suppose, and quite alive to the importance of being thorough."

"He is watching those people. No, he isn't. How quickly he disappeared!"

Yes, he's successful in all his movements. Laura, we must get out of this. There happens to be something else in the world for us to do than to sit around and follow up murder clues."

But we began to doubt if others agreed with him, when on passing out we were stopped in the lobby by this same detective, who had something to say to Georges, and who quickly aside.

"What does he want?" I asked, as soon as George had returned to my side.

He wants me to stand ready to obey any summons the police may send me."

"Then they still suspect Brotherson?"

They must."

As we stepped out of the hotel George gave my arm a quiet pinch which served to direct my attention to an elderly gentleman who was just alighting from a taxicab at the kerb. He moved slowly and with evident appearance of pain, but from the crowd collected on the sidewalk, many of whom nudged each other and stared at him, he was evidently a person of some importance, and as he disappeared within the hotel entrance, I asked George who this kind-faced, bright-eyed old gentleman could be.

He appeared to know, for he told me at once that he was Detective Gryce: a man who had grown old in solving just such baffling problems as these.

That night I bided George's coming with an impatience I could not control. He was late, of course, but when he did appear, I almost forgot our usual greeting in my hurry to ask him if he had seen the evening papers

"No," he grumbled, as he hung up his overcoat. "Been pushed about all day. No time for anything."

Then let me tell you—"

But he would have dinner first. However, a little later we had a comfortable chat. Mr. Gryce had made a discovery, and the papers were full of it.

The opinion had become quite general with those best acquainted with the details of this affair, that the mystery was one of those unexplained ones for which no solution would ever be found, when the new detective showed himself in the building and was taken to the room, where an inspector of police awaited him.

"This is very good of you," the inspector began, rising to his feet as the aged detective's bundled up legs, and gently pushing a chair towards him.

The elderly man then addressed glanced down at his legs, saw propped up on a stool which someone had brought him, and smiled, with the patience of one old who sees the hopes of a lifetime slipping gradually away.

"I am not what I was. I can no longer get down on my hands and knees to pick up threads from the nap of a rug, or spy out a spot of blood in the crimson woof of a carpet."

"You shall have Sweetwater here to do the active work for you, but we want of you is the directing mind —the infallible instinct. It's a case in a thousand, Gryce. It will make you young again."

The old man's eyes shot fire and unconsciously one foot slipped to the floor. Then he checked himself and painfully lifted it back again.

"What are the points? What's the difficulty?" he asked. "A woman has been shot—"

"No, not shot, stabbed. We thought she had been shot, for that was later lights and involved an impossibility since. But Drs. Heath and Wallace, under the eye of the Challoners' own physician, have made an examination of the wound and they declare that no bullet is to be found in the body. As the wound extends no further than the heart, this settles one great point at least. Yes? Know the victim? Her name, I mean, and the character she bears?"

"Yes; so much we told me on my way down."

"A fine girl unspoiled by riches and seeming independence. Happy, too, to all appearance, or we should be the more ready to consider the possibility of suicide."

"Suicide by stabbing calls for a weapon. Yet none has been found, I hear."

"None."

"Yet she was killed that way?"

"Undoubtedly, and by a long and very narrow blade, larger than a needle but not so large as the ordinary stiletto."

"Stabbed while by herself, or what you may call by herself? She had no companion near her?"

"None, if we can believe the four or five guests in the Parrish family who were seated at the other end of the room."

"And you do believe them?"

"Would a whole family lie—and needlessly?"

"It wouldn't seem so."

"She fell just a few feet from the desk where she had been writing. No word, no cry, just a collapse and sudden fall. She never looked up or spoke again. What do you make of it, Gryce?"

"It's a tough one, and I'm not ready to venture an opinion yet. I should like to see the room you speak of, and the spot where she fell."

"Every fellow who had been hovering in the background at once stepped forward. We were a self-selected detectives who had spoken to Georges.

"Will you take my arm, sir?"

Mr. Gryce was not the frightened. This Sweetwater, as they called him, was, I have since understood, one of his proteges and more or less of a favorite.

"Have you had a chance at this thing?" he asked

"No, sir. Orders were good enough to allow it."

"Very well, then, you're in a position to pioneer me. You've seen it all and know the lay."

"No; I'm of the end of my rope. I would go idee, sir."

"Well, well, that's honest at all events." Then, as he slowly rose with the careful assistance, "There's no crime without its clue. The thing is to recognize that clue when seen. But I'm in no position to make promises."

The excitable was guarded from all visitors save such as had official sanction. Consequently, the two remained quite uninterrupted while they moved about the place to quiet consultation. The locals was what Gryce wanted, and he got it. Whether he got anything else it would be impossible to say from his manner as he finally sank into a chair by one of the openings, and looked down on the lobby below. It was full of people coming and going on all sorts of business, and presently he drew back and, leaning on Sweetwater's arm, asked him a few questions.

"Who were the first to rush in here after the Parishers gave the alarm?"

"One or two of the musicians from the end of the hall. They had just finished their program and were preparing to leave the gallery. Natural-ly they reached her first."

"Who followed them? Who came next on the scene?"

"Some people from the lobby. They heard the disturbance and rushed up pell-mell. But not one of these touch her. Under her father's care."

"Who did touch her? Anybody before her father came in?"

"Yes; Miss Clarke, the middle-aged lady with the Parishes. She had run towards Miss Challoner as soon as she heard her fall and was sitting beside her on the floor, with head in her lap when the musicians showed themselves."

"I suppose she has been carefully questioned?"

"Very, I should say."

"And she speaks of no weapon?"

"No. Neither she nor any one else at that moment suspected murder or even a violent death. All thought it was a natural one—sudden, but the result of some secret disease."

"But the blood? Surely there must have been some show of blood?"

"No one noticed any. Not the doctor came—her doctor, who was happily in his office in this very building. He saw the drops, and ordered the first suggestion of murder."

"How long after—was that is there any one who was watching to—make an estimate of the number of minutes which elapsed from the time she fell, to the moment when the doctor first raised the cry of murder?"

"Yes. Mr. Slaten, the assistant manager, who was in the lobby at the time, says that the interval was at least must have elapsed."

"Two minutes and no blood! The weapon must still have been there. Some weapon with a short and inconspicuous handle. I think they said there were flowers over and around the place where she fell?"

"Yes, great big scarlet ones."

"Ten minutes! I must see every one who approached her during those ten minutes. Every word, gesture, and I must myself talk with Miss Clarke."

"You will believe every word she says."

No doubt. All the more reason why I must see her. Sweetwater, someone drew that weapon out. The question is who? We must leave no stone unturned to find that out."

"Where will you see Miss Clarke?"

"Wherever she pleases—only I must talk her."

"I think I know the place. You shall have the use of this elevator. It has not been running since last night or it would be full of curious people all the time, hoping to get a glimpse of this place. But they'll put a man on it for you."

"Very good; manage it as you will. I can't tell you how ready. It's not trouble her much. But there is one point she must make clear to me."

Sweetwater did not presume to ask that point, but he hoped to be fully enlightened when the time came.

And he was. Mr. Gryce had undertaken to educate him for this work and never missed the opportunity of doing so. Therefore, when we met in a private sitting-room as an upper floor, the detectives entering by one and the lady coming in soon after, Mr. Sweetwater was in a mimes to rouse an unfavorable opinion in any man's mind. Of slight, almost frail build, tact and that unconscious suavity which goes with a speaking eye and a widely sympathetic nature. Without any substantial claims to beauty, her expression was so womanly and so sweet that she was at once favorably called lovely.

Mr. Gryce was charged at the moment in shifting his cane from the right hand to the left, but his manner was never more encouraging or his voice more benevolent.

"Pardon me," he apologized, with one of his old-fashioned bows, "I'm sorry to trouble you after all the distress you must have been under this morning. But there is something I wish especially to ask you in regard to the dreadful occurrence in which you played so kind a part. You were the first to reach the prostrate woman, I believe."

"Yes. The boys jumped up and ran towards her, but they were fright-ened by her looks—and left it for me to put my hands under and try to life her up."

"Did you manage it?"

"I succeeded in getting her head into my lap, nothing more."

"And not so?"

"For some little time."

"You knew she was dead, then?"

"I felt her to be so."

"How felt?"

"I was sure—I never questioned it."

"You have such woman in a feint?"

"Yes, many times."

"What made the difference? Why should you believe Miss Challoner dead simply because she lay still and pale?"

"Perhaps there was another reason? Perhaps that, consciously or unconsciously, you told your being upon her heart?"

Miss Clarke started, and her sweet face showed a moment's perplexity.

"Did I?" she queried, maternal Then with a sudden voices of feeling. "I may have done so, indeed, I believe I did. My arms were around her; it would not have been on unnatural thing."

"No; a very natural one, I should say. Cannot you tell me positively whether you did this or not?"

"Yes, I did. I had forgotten it, but I remember now." And the placed she cast him while not meeting his eye showed that she understood the importance of the 'a definite.' "I know," she said, "what you are trying to ask me now. Did I feel anything in her breast but the flowers and the tuller. No, Mr. Gryce, I did not. There was no pocket in the wound." Then, with a shudder, she found a chair and sank into it.

"You are a truthful woman," said he. "And," he added more slowly, "composed enough in character to shield judge not to have made any mistakes on this very vital point."

"I hope, Mr. Gryce, I was in a state of excitement, of course; but I am not one to make a mistake in me, and my feelings were under control, I stated."

Sweetwater, we can let my suggestion go in regard to those ten minutes spoke of. My time is narrowed down to one, and in that one Miss Clarke was the only person to touch her."

"The only one," echoed the lady, catching perhaps the slight rising sound of query in his voice.

"I will trouble you no further." So said the old detective, thoughtfully. "Sweetwater, help me out of this."

"But one question," the lady hastily confided in sweet water, as they stood waiting at the elevator door. "Miss Challoner died from a stab. What shall I believe? She struck the blow herself and the strength of purpose which led her to do this, gave her the additional to pull the weapon out and fling it from her. It did not fall from the floor around her; therefore, if few through one of those open into the lobby, and those it is rather will be, or has been found."

CHAPTER V.

"What results? Speak up, Sweetwater."

"None. Every man, woman and boy connected with the hotel has been questioned, but not one of them picked up anything from the floor of the lobby, or knows of any one who did."

A bulletin was put up.

Some hours later, Sweetwater reentered the room, and approaching Mr. Gryce with a smile, blurted out: "The bulletin is a great co. I've watched every one who stopped to read it. Many showed interest and many emotion; she seems to have a host of friends. But amusement: only one showed that."

"Embarrassment?—Humph! a man?"

"No, a woman; a lady, sir; one of the transients."

"A woman! Where is she? Still in the lobby?"

He took the elevator while I was talking of this affair.

"You mistook her expression."

"I don't think so. "I had noticed her

when she first came into the lobby. She was talking to her daughter who was with her and looked excited and happy. But no sooner had she seen and read that bulletin, then the blood left her face and her eyes and mouth became furtive and hasty. Almost before I could point her out, she had seized her daughter by the arm and hurried her into the elevator. Her room is on the eleventh floor: number 715, and her name is Watkins. Mrs. Harriet Watkins, of Newburg."

"Call the desk. Say that I'm to be told if Mrs. Watkins of Newburg rings up during the next ten minutes. We'll give her that long to take some action."

Sweetwater was as he was bid, then went back to his place in the lobby.

But he returned almost instantly.

"Mrs. Watkins has just telephoned down that she is going to—to leave, sir."

"To leave?"

The old man struggled to his feet. "No. 712, do you say? Seven stories, I believe. But a few turned with a bobble, he stopped. "There are difficulties in the way of our seeing her just now," he remarked. "A blush is not much to go upon. I'm afraid we shall have to content ourselves with watching for that in your work, not mine."

But he had already entered and a boy brought in a line which had been left for him at the desk. It was not very matter then engaging them, and ran thus:

"Mrs. Watkins had information is desired as to whether any person was seen to enter the lobby from the east side of it shortly after the critical moment of Miss Challoner's fall in the hall story above. I, of course, could infer nothing. I was in the lobby at the time, and in the height of the confusion following the alarming incident, I remember looking at the clock from the floor. I thought nothing of it at the time, but I have since assured from her appearance. I can only recall the gentleman who, when she first stooped and the color of the clock she wore. It was red, and the white garment was visible under it. If you wish further particulars—though in truth, I have no idea of anything that was said in room 356.

"HENRY A. M'ELROY."

"Humph! This should simplify our task," was Mr. Gryce's comment, as he handed the note over to Sweetwater. "You can easily find out if the lady, now on the point of departure, can be identified as the one described by Mr. McElroy. If she can, I shall be glad to have a word with her."

And so it happened that just as Mrs. Watkins was getting the finishing out of her trunks, there appeared in the doorway before her, an elderly gentleman, black overcoat, white tie, benevolent, save at moments when Sweetwater would be quite out of sympathy with the situation, "Beth" Mrs. Watkins, a sudden effect on her, that she colored under his eye, and, indeed, showed such embarrassment that the old gentleman, with his breakfast table, and now the bacon-ighted challenge" our corner. SPLENDOR OF ALPS

Gorgeous Coloring of Peaks at Sunrise and Sunset.

Phenomenon Is Most Complex, Varying Greatly With the Weather, and at Times Exhibiting Features That Appear Mysterious.

London.—Everybody who has sojourned among the Alps, or other snowcapped mountains, must have admired the gorgeous coloring of the peaks at sunrise and sunset. Watching the splendid spectacle from day to day, that it is a matter of some moment, varying greatly with the weather, and sometimes exhibiting certain peculiarities that to the uninitiated are decidedly mysterious.

In the weather the following sequence of events may be noted: When the sun has sunk nearly to the observer's horizon, the peaks to the eastward begin to have a reddish or golden hue. This first reddening, not in a few minutes, when the sun is a little below the observer's horizon, but the peaks are still bathed in direct sunlight, an intense red-glowing dawn the slopes and moves upward to the summits. This is identical with the very "twilight arch" that in clear weather rises from the eastern horizon as the sun sinks below the western; and it is hardened below by the blue shadow of the earth. Now, for a few minutes, the peaks are in the earth-shadow; their rocks and snows remain, as they appear, ruddily described by the inhabitants of the vale of Chamouni, west. In Chamouni in question are well seen on the summits of Mont Blanc, as the "Aiguilles Rouges."

Presently occurs the remarkable phenomenon called the "recoloration" or "afterglow." In Chamouni it is called "the resurrection of Mont Blanc." The peaks, from which all color had faded, again assume a rosy tint; but this time gradually, and without any sharp line of demarcation between the glow and the shadow beneath. The recoloration is by no means a daily occurrence, but when it is rather uncommon—and if varies greatly in appearance and duration. Sometimes it lasts until an hour after sunset, and it passes away from below upward. Very rarely a faint second reddening may be seen. All these phenomena may be seen, in reverse order, at sunrise. Whether they are less common than of sunrise.

The wonderful Alps has been variously explained, but there seems to be little doubt that it is due, at least principally, to the reflection from the peaks of the rosy glow which forms in the western sky, and, known as the "purple light," and which is sometimes intense enough to constitute a source of illumination source. The diffuse appearance of the recoloration is explained as the well defined zone of rosy light that rests upon the western sky. The peaks are still in direct sunlight is explained by the broad expanse of the "purple light" is compared with the small disk of the sun. Sometimes the sky itself (i. e., the lower strata of the atmosphere) reflects the "purple light," giving rise to a second purple light, for an observer situated at a certain angle of vision. This in turn may be reflected by the snow peaks, and the rare phenomenon of a second recoloration.

BATHERS GET A BIG SHOCK

Object They Had Seen Several Days Was Horse—Women Faint—Panic Stricken.

Atlantic City.—During the past few days bathers at Ventnor have been chiefly curiously aroused by a dark object floating intermittently against the inshkeed at the foot of Atlantic avenue, and Life Guards Brady and Schwaiger undertook to row out in a boat and investigate it. Panic prevailed and fifteen women fainted when the men, with its grewsome burden trailing behind, shot through the surf to the beach, and a dozen physicians hastened to it. The body was removed to an undertaking establishment and examined to be that of a mare, about fifty years old, and it needs no skill to say that she died a natural death.

Women in Finland's Parliament.

Finland is the only country in the world in which women have been given the parliamentary franchise. Dr. David Hutlin, in a recent visit to London, expressed surprise that in England such questions as these had not yet been accorded the parliamentary franchise. "The women are splendid voters; and they also fined 15 pounds for absence. They are very well up, that the women attend the meetings regularly than the men. The women members have endeavored to bring about improvements in women's position, especially in the legal and economic aspect. Bills introduced by women have been incorporated with the ruling of the age of consent, the question of dealing with the husband in the case of the children, and the question of the right of women to sit on the local poor boards. Finland, with its population of 2,500,000, has 200 women members of local boards."

MEN GET IMITATION MONEY

Pasadena, N. J.—Learning from experience when they were held up and robbed of $1,000 in counterfeit money, Benjamin Goldberg and Julius Weinberg, partners in the shoe business here, have ever since carried a goodly supply of bogus money around, ready to fool any "hold-up" who warmed "they" encountered. Their chance came when two masked men held up their wagon at the point of revolvers and forced the drivers to give up their pockets of $10,000—in bogus money. The robbers fled, with the genuine, placed under the seats. Then the merchants came to the police station and told their story.

Good Word for the Oyster

London Lancet, Always Pessimistic, Comes Forward With a Surly Meed of Praise.

When did Lancet, representative of the British medical profession, of "Great Britain, says anything good about anything? Such a question calls for a sensation of mingled surprise and respect. Surprise that the venerable publication he picked up the Lancet-he discovered he was doing something right, and respect for anything that was sorely lifting him. It has a good word for the oyster, and it is ordinary and pone and three-quarters' pin impress that it is delicious." Clinical results are given:

"Sir Frederick Treves, in his Hunterian Oration, said that the oyster is a "tonic of the first order, and a combination of iron, iodine, and phosphorus." Dr. Dawson Williams advised patients and those in whom there was a tendency to consumption to eat a most favorable nature are recommended to eat oysters as a food. Persons suffering from tuberculosis, if oysters are indicated for the diet, must be wholesome for the rest of us.

"Many persons cannot digest oysters, of course, before noticed, but certain people are unable to digest them instead of oysters. He was a brave man who first ate one raw, scooping it out of the shell with a breakfast table; and now the bacon-ighted challenge" our corner. The Lancet's commendation should be more closely regarded:

"Perhaps there was another reason? Perhaps that, consciously or unconsciously, you told your being upon her heart?"

Miss Clarke started, and her sweet face showed a moment's perplexity.

"Did I?" she queried, maternal Then with a sudden voices of feeling. "I may have done so, indeed, I believe I did. My arms were around her; it would not have been on unnatural thing."

"No; a very natural one, I should say. Cannot you tell me positively whether you did this or not?"

"Yes, I did. I had forgotten it, but I remember now." And the placed she cast him while not meeting his eye showed that she understood the importance of the 'a definite.' "I know," she said, "what you are trying to ask me now. Did I feel anything in her breast but the flowers and the tuller. No, Mr. Gryce, I did not. There was no pocket in the wound." Then, with a shudder, she found a chair and sank into it.

"You are a truthful woman," said he. "And," he added more slowly, "composed enough in character to shield judge not to have made any mistakes on this very vital point."

"I hope, Mr. Gryce, I was in a state of excitement, of course; but I am not one to make a mistake in me, and my feelings were under control, I stated."

Sweetwater, we can let my suggestion go in regard to those ten minutes spoke of. My time is narrowed down to one, and in that one Miss Clarke was the only person to touch her."

"The only one," echoed the lady, catching perhaps the slight rising sound of query in his voice.

"I will trouble you no further." So said the old detective, thoughtfully. "Sweetwater, help me out of this."

"But one question," the lady hastily confided in sweet water, as they stood waiting at the elevator door. "Miss Challoner died from a stab. What shall I believe? She struck the blow herself and the strength of purpose which led her to do this, gave her the additional to pull the weapon out and fling it from her. It did not fall from the floor around her; therefore, if few through one of those open into the lobby, and those it is rather will be, or has been found."

CHAPTER V.

"What results? Speak up, Sweetwater."

"None. Every man, woman and boy connected with the hotel has been questioned, but not one of them picked up anything from the floor of the lobby, or knows of any one who did."

A bulletin was put up.

Some hours later, Sweetwater reentered the room, and approaching Mr. Gryce with a smile, blurted out: "The bulletin is a great co. I've watched every one who stopped to read it. Many showed interest and many emotion; she seems to have a host of friends. But amusement: only one showed that."

"Embarrassment?—Humph! a man?"

"No, a woman; a lady, sir; one of the transients."

"A woman! Where is she? Still in the lobby?"

He took the elevator while I was talking of this affair.

"You mistook her expression."

"I don't think so. "I had noticed her

"You Are a Truthful Woman." His Words.

when she first came into the lobby. She was talking to her daughter who was with her and looked excited and happy. But no sooner had she seen and read that bulletin, then the blood left her face and her eyes and mouth became furtive and hasty. Almost before I could point her out, she had seized her daughter by the arm and hurried her into the elevator. Her room is on the eleventh floor: number 715, and her name is Watkins. Mrs. Harriet Watkins, of Newburg."

"Call the desk. Say that I'm to be told if Mrs. Watkins of Newburg rings up during the next ten minutes. We'll give her that long to take some action."

Sweetwater was as he was bid, then went back to his place in the lobby.

But he returned almost instantly.

"Mrs. Watkins has just telephoned down that she is going to—to leave, sir."

"To leave?"

The old man struggled to his feet. "No. 712, do you say? Seven stories, I believe. But a few turned with a bobble, he stopped. "There are difficulties in the way of our seeing her just now," he remarked. "A blush is not much to go upon. I'm afraid we shall have to content ourselves with watching for that in your work, not mine."

But he had already entered and a boy brought in a line which had been left for him at the desk. It was not very matter then engaging them, and ran thus:

"Mrs. Watkins had information is desired as to whether any person was seen to enter the lobby from the east side of it shortly after the critical moment of Miss Challoner's fall in the hall story above. I, of course, could infer nothing. I was in the lobby at the time, and in the height of the confusion following the alarming incident, I remember looking at the clock from the floor. I thought nothing of it at the time, but I have since assured from her appearance. I can only recall the gentleman who, when she first stooped and the color of the clock she wore. It was red, and the white garment was visible under it. If you wish further particulars—though in truth, I have no idea of anything that was said in room 356.

"HENRY A. M'ELROY."

"Humph! This should simplify our task," was Mr. Gryce's comment, as he handed the note over to Sweetwater. "You can easily find out if the lady, now on the point of departure, can be identified as the one described by Mr. McElroy. If she can, I shall be glad to have a word with her."

And so it happened that just as Mrs. Watkins was getting the finishing out of her trunks, there appeared in the doorway before her, an elderly gentleman, black overcoat, white tie, benevolent, save at moments when Sweetwater would be quite out of sympathy with the situation. "Beth" Mrs. Watkins, a sudden effect on her, that she colored under his eye, and, indeed, showed such embarrassment that the old gentleman, with his breakfast table, and now the bacon-ighted challenge" our corner. The Lancet's commendation should be more closely regarded:

"Am, I speaking to Mrs. Watkins of Nashville?"

"Yes, sir," she faltered, with such an rapid change of color—"I am just leaving. I hope you will excuse me—"

"I won't detain you," he replied, nodding at and confronting her quietly in her own room. "But circumstances have arisen in the building. He saw the drops, and ordered the first suggestion of murder."

"How long after—was that is there any one who was watching to—make an estimate of the number of minutes which elapsed from the time she fell, to the moment when the doctor first raised the cry of murder?"

"Yes. Mr. Slaten, the assistant manager, who was in the lobby at the time, says that the interval was at least must have elapsed."

"Two minutes and no blood! The weapon must still have been there. Some weapon with a short and inconspicuous handle. I think they said there were flowers over and around the place where she fell?"

"Yes, great big scarlet ones."

"Ten minutes! I must see every one who approached her during those ten minutes. Every word, gesture, and I must myself talk with Miss Clarke."

"You will believe every word she says."

No doubt. All the more reason why I must see her. Sweetwater, someone drew that weapon out. The question is who? We must leave no stone unturned to find that out."

"Where will you see Miss Clarke?"

"Wherever she pleases—only I must talk her."

"I think I know the place. You shall have the use of this elevator. It has not been running since last night or it would be full of curious people all the time, hoping to get a glimpse of this place. But they'll put a man on it for you."

"Very good; manage it as you will. I can't tell you how ready. It's not trouble her much. But there is one point she must make clear to me."

Sweetwater did not presume to ask that point, but he hoped to be fully enlightened when the time came.

And he was. Mr. Gryce had undertaken to educate him for this work and never missed the opportunity of doing so. Therefore, when we met in a private sitting-room as an upper floor, the detectives entering by one and the lady coming in soon after, Mr. Sweetwater was in a mimes to rouse an unfavorable opinion in any man's mind. Of slight, almost frail build, tact and that unconscious suavity which goes with a speaking eye and a widely sympathetic nature. Without any substantial claims to beauty, her expression was so womanly and so sweet that she was at once favorably called lovely.

Mr. Gryce was charged at the moment in shifting his cane from the right hand to the left, but his manner was never more encouraging or his voice more benevolent.

"Pardon me," he apologized, with one of his old-fashioned bows, "I'm sorry to trouble you after all the distress you must have been under this morning. But there is something I wish especially to ask you in regard to the dreadful occurrence in which you played so kind a part. You were the first to reach the prostrate woman, I believe."

"Yes. The boys jumped up and ran towards her, but they were frightened by her looks—

JAYHAWKER'S TRIALS

Survivors Live Again 52 Death Valley Days.

Of the First White Persons to Cross the Desert in 1849 Only Four Are Now Living—Rolled Dy Hide for Soup.

San Francisco.—Of the hardships endured by the "jayhawkers of '49," as the survivors of the first band of white people ever to cross Death valley are now called, little has been told. The memories of 52 days spent in the sands of the Mojave desert, with half an ox hide for food and water as an occasional luxury, however, are kept alive by the Jayhawkers' society, whose four members, one of them a woman, total 320 years old, hold yearly meetings.

Those meetings, preceded by a dinner, take place on the anniversary of the day in 1850 when the remnants of the party left the desert behind them and wandered, more dead than alive, into a Mormon hamlet in the valley of the Santa Clara river, near the present site of Newhall, a southern Pacific station on the route to Mojave.

At the home of Mrs. Juliet W. Brier, the only woman of the party, who brought three children under the age of ten years with her on the journey, the remnant was held this year. She now lives at 24 Myrtle street, Santa Cruz. Col. John B. Colton of Galesburg, Ill., L. Dow Stephens of Ben Jose and John Grosscup of Marysville now compose the rest of the Jayhawkers. Only three were present, as Mr. Grosscup has been unable to make the journey for a number of years on account of ill health. Absent in body he has been present in spirit, sending a letter each time, which is read at the dinner.

In 1845, when the party started for California, Illinois was a frontier state, and west of there Indians were practically the only inhabitants. By the time they reached Salt Lake and the Mormon settlements practically all their cattle had been stampeded.

The desires of the Mormons to have some one break a wagon trail to southern California led them to advise the Jayhawkers to head for Los Angeles, says Colonel Colton, and the start across the desert was made against the advice of Kit Carson and other noted plainsmen. Hearing of the hardships of the Denver party, however, they hesitated at taking the route over the Sierras, and so, after waiting for six weeks in Salt Lake for the desert to cool off, they started southward.

Captain Hunt of the Mormon battalion of the Mexican war was engaged to lead them at a cost of $1,000 for 100 wagons. Nearly 200 persons were in the party at the re-hauling.

They soon found that they could eat the flesh of their cattle, and as a diet of oxen was begun, to continue until they reached California. These poor animals, scarcely more than skin and bones, were killed regularly, and the skin boiled until it was eatable. Probably a pailful of blood was secured from each, and this made a good pudding. By boiling the entrails, a dish on the order of tripe was made. There was no other food.

Three out of five water holes they reached contained alkali and so had to be passed by. Men and oxen, alike dropped in their tracks, never to rise again. According to the account of Rev. Mr. Brier, husband of the "little woman," one man was left "blind, unable to walk, and the party too weak to assist him. When Providence Spring" was reached they went back to look for him—he had crawled four miles on his hands and knees he said—but he had died. A second wandered away insane, a third fell dead without a groan, another staggered into one of the springs on the route, and died with the first taste of water on his lips. When his veins were cut open, a watery fluid bearing a faint resemblance to blood flowed out.

MUSIC SAVES A MAN'S LIFE

Wrapped Around Carnival Manager, Snake Loosens Coils as Mrs. La Benoto Plays Weird Tune.

Punxsutawney, Pa.—With the coils of a python 25 feet long tightening gradually around his body, James Harve Stenger, manager for a carnival company, escaped being crushed to death only through the power of music to soothe the reptile after the efforts of six men had failed to dislodge it.

Mr. Stenger was superintending the unloading of a box of snakes when the python escaped. For an instant the reptile seemed, to be dazed, and as Mr. Stenger took a stick and tried to push it through a door into a big glass cage the snake turned like a flash. In an instant the python entwined itself around Mr. Stenger, pinning his arms to his sides.

Six men went to Mr. Stenger's aid and attempted to pull the snake from his body. The folds of the big reptile, however, only drew closer, and Mr. Stenger was on the verge of a collapse, when Mlle. La Benoto, who owns the reptile, appeared with a flageolet between her lips.

Hastening herself near the snake she began to play a low, weird melody, at the same time swaying her body to and fro gently. Raising the head, the python began to sway in rhythm with the player and the music, and gradually loosening its folds from Mr. Stenger it coiled on the ground with its head swinging from side to side.

Slowly approaching the snake Mlle. La Benoto, still playing gently, forced it into the glass cage. In the meantime Mr. Stenger, who had toppled over unconscious when released from the folds of the snake, was revived and found to be uninjured.

Yellow Invaders and Negroes Will Throw Dice for Spoils in 1954, Said Seer.

Paris.—There is much talk here of the death of one of the most prominent secne figures in Europe, Maria Benita Perry, who breathed her last recently near Rome after having been bedridden for 12 years. She is said to have made many predictions which were fulfilled with absolute accuracy, which gives a sinister significance to her last utterance dictated on her death bed to the nuns:

"Before two years are past—about the end of 1914—yellow invaders and negroes will be throwing dice for the fate of the last American girl in Central Park, N. Y., amid the smoking ruins of the great city, given up to the idolatrous cult of the Golden Calf."

BOY OF 8 TO HIGH SCHOOL

He Speaks Three Languages and is Advanced in Many Other Studies.

Roswell, N. M.—Not yet eight years old, but qualified to enter high school next fall, which he will do, Raymond Ray, of Roswell, is the wonder of the local educational world.

Without a single day in the public schools, trained at his mother's knee, he has already stood the tests required of the average boy or girl of study in school.

The child reads, writes and talks German and Spanish, in addition to English and is now about to take up Latin as a regular course.

His record equals and almost excels that of Herbert Wisner, the famous boy of Lee Two Wisher of Harvard college, who will receive his degree as doctor of philosophy in June though but eighteen years old. If he does he was a babe of a few months.

CITY OF MYSTERIES

Over 20,000 Disappear Every Year in London.

Little Hope of Discovery—By Moving Around the Corner One Can Vanish Completely, Declares a Veteran Detective.

London.—The disappearance of the Memphis "millionaire," Joseph Wilberforce Martin, in the hidden depths of London has served to remind the whole world that the British capital is in many ways the best hiding place that anybody can utilize.

The city is so vast that the police can only investigate any case on well understood and well defined lines. A smart man learns these lines. He does not rush to the railroad depots to get knocked down by an auto and conveyed to a hospital. He does not take too much to drink and secrete himself in a police cell. He merely changes his name, his clothes and his address, and if he does not provoke feminine curiosity he is as safe in London as he would be in the desert of the Sahara.

The best proof of this will be found in the fact that on the day that J. W. Martin disappeared in London somewhere about fifty other persons vanished. A similar number were lost the day before, and a similar number the day after. But no outcry was raised on the subject.

"London does not boast or shout about its mysteries. It is only when something really dramatic happens and there are shrewd folks like the Americans concerned in the solution that a real hue and cry is made. Then one realizes with a start of surprise that somewhere about 20,000 men and women disappear every year within that puzzling conglomeration of towns and cities to which is given the magic name of 'London.'"

An outcry was raised over the disappearance of Antanas Vedegris a wealthy Lithuanian, who came to London on business in January and on the 17th of that month visited a friend, a priest, and has not been seen since. Yet he was a man of forty, could speak English fairly well, and had a physique that few "longhs" would care to tackle in the daylight. He had about $10,000 in his possession and facilities for obtaining more money if he wished to do so.

Some time ago two girl students took rooms together in the west end. One night they were hanging pictures and they found they had run short of nails. "I'll go out and get some," one said. She went, just as she was, without hat or coat, to a little store round the corner, while her companion set about preparing the evening meal. The girl never returned. Inquiries showed that she did not visit the store, and she has not been heard of since.

"London has cloaks enough to hide us all," Sherlock remarks. "If you want to disappear all you need do is to move around the corner. Very few people in the metropolis are on speaking terms with those who live in the next flat or in the next house. There have been several cases in recent years of persons having resided in the same block as men who were wanted for some notorious crime, and there is an instance on record of a wealthy co-convict who vanished, assumed a disguise and another name, became a property owner and actually leased a house to the judge who some years before had sentenced him to penal servitude."

BOOT TOO TIGHT, SNAKE IN IT

After Returning to Farmhouse From Feeding Chickens Woman Makes Unpleasant Discovery.

Junction City, Kan.—Mrs. Grover Fliby, wife of a farmer near Skiddy, raises ducks. Mrs. Fliby also has a pair of rubber boots that she wears when attending to her barges. When not in use the boots are left lying on the porch.

In the morning, when Mrs. Fliby slipped them on, she noticed that one of them was rather tight, but did not pull it off to investigate, as she supposed that the children had stuffed paper or rags into the toe as a joke on her.

She looked after the ducks and returning to the house, pulled off the boots. From the tight one dropped a snake.

Mrs. Fliby has no recollection of how large the serpent was or its kind.

PLANNED AMAZING JOY RIDE

Frenchman's Scheme Was Too Daring, for Even Up-to-Date American Amusement Caterers.

Shooting Niagara as an amusement was the scheme which James Montagu, of Tours, France, tried to start just before the Pan-American exposition, the New York Mail states. The entertainment was to be called the "ride to death," and people were to be treated to the sensation of actually whirling over the tremendous waterfall.

Monterey's plan was to construct a mammoth swinging derrick, the arm of which was to be more than one hundred feet long, on Goat Island. The tackles from the pulleys would be made fast to a covered boat. The passengers, only about ten or fifteen at a time, were to board the craft a short distance up the stream, from whence it would be navigated to the center of the river and its power shut off.

The sensation of being swept to the brink of the precipice would then be experienced. Faster and faster would the current bear the tiny craft downward until it poised directly over the thundering chasm. At that instant the arm of the derrick would draw it from the water and lower it through the mist into the waters at the base of the falls. It would then be pulled to shore.

Monterey estimated that thousands of people would be willing to pay well for the privilege of saying they had been swept over Niagara. But the man he tried to interest in the scheme, though realizing to what extremes people will go for a sensation, seemed to think this a little too blood curdling and the project was abandoned.

No one has yet attempted to tell how many of Bryan's Chautauqua lectures, laid end to end, it would take to encircle the globe," comments an exchange, but no doubt the "Prince of Peace" has traveled as far as around the world.

The people who plan the donation party for Mr. and Mrs. Bryan should remember that contributions should be confined to the necessities of life. No provision can be made for stowing anything except vegetables and preserves in the cellar.

The naming of John Lind, the former governor, as the man to go to Mexico to settle the little fracas, is especially fitting. The president was no doubt advised that whenever the Minnesota democrats got to pulling hair You is called in to say the final word.

Says Miss Looker-On in the Duluth News Tribune: "One old, trite and reliable saying about many of true word being spoken is just is re called by a 'Card of Thanks' in no Illinois paper that states: 'I wish to express my appreciation and heartfelt thanks to those who assisted in the death of my wife's mother.'" Perhaps the expression of gratitude was for the services of the family physician and the undertaker.

MINNESOTA'S SCHOOL FUND.

Minnesota's permanente school fund, her public lands and her business like way of handling them, is getting a vast amount of publicity in the widely circulated magazines in the East "I regard this kind of publicity the most valuable advertising that our state can get," says Fred D. Sherman, Commissioner of Immigration. "When a state can attract the attention of great eastern publications in such a manner as to receive favorable comment upon the business methods of conducting her affairs, much benefit is derived."

A recent issue of the Youth's Companion says, editorially:

"Most of the states to which the National government has made large grants of land find little satisfaction in telling how they have disposed of it. In this rule Minnesota is a notable exception, and the story of its public lands is both a reliable one and one that should be squandered their valuable grants and a lesson to the states that still have natural resources worth preserving.

"While other states were selling their public lands for a dollar or so an acre and using the money for current expenses, Minnesota was selling timber off its lands at a good figure, and then selling the land itself for agricultural purposes for five dollars an acre; it put the total proceeds in a permanent fund for the benefit of its schools and of its charitable and penal institutions. The fund now amounts to almost $29,000,000, and every Minnesota a larger school fund than that of any other state in the Union. Four neighboring states, to which the national government was not less generous in allotting public lands, have all together funds of only $14,000,000.

Moreover, Minnesota still owns 2,500,000 acres, mainly in the timber district, and from the sale of the timber and of the land to the settlers the state will double its present permanent fund before many years have passed. More important still, it owns 4,000,000 acres of land in which there are rich deposits of iron. The state has leased the iron ore land for long periods at remunerative royalties. The land has already yielded $3,000,000, and under the present contract it will yield almost $150,000,000 in the next generation. Thus, by 1950, Minnesota expects to have permanent fund of fully $200,000,000, which will yield at four per cent, $8,000,000 a year for its schools and other public institutions.

"The core of this fund is an important part of the business of the state government, which acts in the capacity of trustee. Of the present fund of nearly $29,000,000, about $7,000,000 is invested in the bonds of other states, $16,000,000 has been lent to counties, cities and townships within the state, and the rest, drawing interest at four per cent, is in contracts of sale for timber lands.

"Minnesota deserves the heartiest congratulations of the other states for the far sighted wisdom of its early lawmakers, ad for the fidelity with which its officials of later years have guarded their trust. Such a splendid record of efficiency and honesty gives new heart to those who are working for the welfare of states that have been less thrifty."

Scot Mst Best.

A Scotchman was strolling through the market place in Glasgow one day and close at his heels followed his faithful collie. Attracted by a fine display of shell and other fish, the Scot stopped to make a purchase. The dog stood by, wagging its tail, while the master engaged the fishmonger in conversation.

Unfortunately for the beastie its tail drop for a moment over a big basketful of fine, live lobsters, lately come of the largest ones snapt its claws on the tail, and the surprised collie dashed off through the market, yelping with pain, while the lobster hung on grimly, the basket violently from side to side. The fish mongers fat and wrath was speedily less with indignation; then turning to the Scot, who, unaware, he never did so, "Mon! Mon! whustle to yer dog, whustle to yer dog!"

CROOKSTON SCHOOL.

Will Open Sr. Next Year's Work October 7.

The Northwest School of Agriculture at Crookston, Minn., opens its eighth year on October 7th, 1913. The school has grown during the past year that it has been in session until at present it is one of the leading institutions of its kind and-can be unhesitatingly recommended as a cultural teaching that is excelled by no other school. The faculty is being added to each year and consists of only the best trained teachers obtainable. The buildings and grounds are being improved each year, this year seeing the installation of a central heating plant. Last year was erected the Science Building which is used as a class room building and is splendidly equipped. Another great addition this year will be the erection of a new Boy's Dormitory. There is already one of these buildings on the campus but due to crowded quarters it was found necessary to erect an additional building for boys. This building will be furnished with the very best of modern conveniences.

Some of the subjects to be offered the coming year are agriculture, study of breeds, botany, forestry, field crops, engineering, English, carpentry, blacksmithing, dairy work; veterinary science, stock judging, cooking, sewing and other industrial subjects.

A catalogue giving complete information regarding the studies, expenses and accommodations can be obtained by adressing Superintendent C. G. Selvig, School of Agriculture, Crookston, Minn.

Cowboys in Cross Country Race.

Miller Hawks, a Kansas cowboy from Kansas City, was in Hakuomen from Sunday afternoon until Tuesday morning. Mr. Hawks is one of three cowboys who left Kansas City on June 1st to win a race from that city to Winnipeg. Each of the contestants had two horses and the conditions of the contest were such that the winner must reach his destination with one of the original horses. Each contestant carried a saddle and a pack containing necessary clothing and a tarpaulin to sleep on if they were caught out at night. One of the contestants dropped out soon after starting. Mr. Hawks learned that his competitor was at Minneapolis when he was in Detroit. The winner of this race is to receive $1000. Mr. Hawks is so far ahead that he expects to win the prize when he reaches Winnipeg. There is to be a big western exhibition at Winnipeg this summer and this race is one of the features.—Mahnomen Pioneer.

Along the lines of dairy manufactures Minnesota and the Minnesota stations have taken the lead. Minnesota has won ten of the twelve interstate prizes for high quality butter, made by buttermakers trained by the Minnesota Agricultural College, and a buttermaker trained by the Minnesota Station won one of the other two. Minnesota butter, therefore, is the standard of the United States, and won the highest award at the Panama Exposition. When it is remembered that a ton of butter contains only 50 cents worth of soil fertility, it is evident that this is a profitable line for agriculture when considered from the standpoint of the conservation of natural resources.—Bulletin No. 1, issued by Dept. of Agriculture, University Farm, St. Paul.

WEALTH AND BEAUTY IN GALA ATTIRE

Will Attend the Society Horse Show to Be Held During the Minnesota State Fair This Year.

This year's Night Horse Show, in the Coliseum on the State Fair grounds, will be a social event of unusual importance. It will be managed on the same plan as the Saturday society horse shows held at Madison Square Garden, New York, at Chicago and Kansas City. The Coliseum is being fitted up with opera chairs and will be elaborately decorated for the occasion.

A number of noted horsemen from the East and South have already signified their intention of bringing their champion horses, and there is an unusual interest among riding and driving horse owners in Minnesota and the Northwest.

The society feature of the event will be especially emphasized and boxes have already been spoken for by many of the social leaders of Minneapolis, St. Paul and other Minnesota cities.

The program each night will include a different number by two well known bands, unusual vaudeville acts, judging and awarding of prizes to a large number of high strained, royalty bred horses, and sensational performances by some of the country's brightest equine stars.

VITALITY OF SEED

By A. F. WOODS, Dean, Department of Agriculture, University Farm, St. Paul.

Assuming that every care has been taken to get seed well adapted to the conditions of culture, it is still important to see that the seed is of good vitality and capable of producing strong, vigorous plants. Great waste of land and labor results every year from the use of seed of low vitality. The same is true of other seeds.

Poor seed cannot produce good plants, and poor plants give poor returns or none at all. Seed should always be tested before planting, and seed of low vitality rejected. Some of this poor seed is threshed with good seed, so that it can be sold at a lower price. Some of the worst weeds have been introduced and spread in this way. The loss from weeds and the cost of fighting them is great and is so well understood as to need no discussion.

Farmers often buy cheap seed thinking that they are saving money; when as a matter of fact they are paying two or three times as much for the small amount of good seed obtained as they would pay had they bought good seed in the first place at twice the rate per pound paid for the poor seed.

LET'S GO!!!

World's Champion Bronco Buster.

MANY REAL THRILLS IN CHEYENNE SHOW

Champion Riders, Ropers, Bull Doggers From Wyoming, California, Texas and Canada to Compete.

FAMOUS BAND OF INDIANS.

Frontier Days' Dangers and Pastimes Realistically Pictured—Fireworks Finale.

A complete picture of the life, work and play of the frontier will be painted in realistic colors for State Fair patrons every night, in front of the grandstand, during the week of Sept. 1st to 6th.

The great Cheyenne Frontier Days' Show, which will be the night attraction, is unusual in many respects. It is not a wild west show in the accepted meaning of the term. It contains no fakes or circus acts. It is a collection of famous Indians, Mexican case and white men and women from the western plains, who have grown up in the saddle, on the ranges, with wild steers and outlaw horses for companions. These men and women annually gather at the great Frontier Days' Celebration in Cheyenne, Wyoming, where they compete for prizes in all of the dangerous sports and games known on the plains.

Winners in all of these contests, including a number of world champion ropers, riders and bull doggers, have been gathered together by the Irwin Bros. and will be brought to Minnesota for the State Fair performance.

In addition to the champions from Wyoming, Chas. Irwin announces that there will be the most sensational acts from the Frontier Days' Show at Salinas, California, and from the Stampede, to be held at Winnipeg in August.

Exciting Competition.

The chariot races, cowboy and cowgirls will all have a chance to try their metal and win new laurels at the State Fair, as the Irwin Bros. will bring with them over 200 head of trained outlaw horses from the west, a herd of long-horn Texas steers, buffalo, elk, wild horses and other animals.

The supply of bucking outlaw horses is the greatest ever seen together in any track or under canvas. They are the real "crazy horses," and the men and women who ride them are literally taking their lives in their hands. These horses are fed and cared for the same as the rest of the stock, and are fairly peaceable until an attempt is made to bridle, saddle and ride them. Then the untamable, outlaw nature asserts itself, and the riders are lucky if they are not thrown, stepped on, kicked, taken crashing through fences, or treated in some such rude way.

A Proper Setting.

This exciting entertainment, which will include feats of horsemanship, broncho busting, roping, shooting, bull dogging and other exciting features, will be given an elaborate frontier days' setting in front of the grandstand. What ordinarily takes a whole afternoon will be condensed into an hour and a half of excitement, and will be concluded by a grand finale, vividly picturing scenes of frontier days, including carrying of mails, the robbing of stagecoaches, attacks by

Woman Relay Riders.

Indians, rescue by cowboys, etc. As a part of this finale and continuing after it, there will be the most gorgeous display of Pain's twentieth century fireworks ever seen in the Northwest.

Motion made by Commissioner Pigeon duly seconded by Commissioner Hanson and carried unanimously that the County Auditor be instructed to advertise for bonds covering Judicial Ditches numbers two, two and three in Red Lake and Pennington Counties, bids to be opened at a meeting of this board to be held August 13th, 1913 at 10 o'clock A. M.

Bond Resolution.

Commissioner Pigeon offered the following preamble and resolution and moved the adoption thereof:

Whereas, in pursuance of and in full compliance with the Statutes and Laws of the State of Minnesota applicable thereto, there have been duly and regularly established and by competent public authority Judicial ditches, known as Judicial Ditch No. 1, Number 2, and Number 3, have been duly located and established, respectively, by the County of Red Lake and partly by the County of Pennington in the State of Minnesota, and a petition duly signed by a majority of the petitioners in accordance with the provisions of the law applicable thereto, that the expense incurred by the aforesaid relative to establishing and constructing all or part of said ditches lying within the County of Red Lake, and that such whole expense of establishing, establishing and constructing said ditches be legally borne by the County of Red Lake exceeds the following sums and amounts, to-wit:—In the case of Judicial Ditch No. 1 $11511 and to be paid out of Judicial Ditch No. 2, $2950.16; and in the case of Judicial Ditch No. 3, $5,537.35.

THEREFORE, Be It Resolved, by the County Board of the County of Red Lake, that the sum of twenty-one thousand ($21000.00) dollars is necessary to defray the expenses aforesaid, to be paid by the County of Red Lake and that the county issue its bonds in the aggregate amount of twenty-one thousand ($21,000.00) dollars, for the purpose of paying the expense aforesaid relative to said Judicial ditches, said bonds to be of the denomination of One Hundred ($100.00) dollars each, and to be accompanied by interest coupons representing the semi annual interest payment bonds, and interest to be payable at the place named at the option of the successful bidder.

RESOLVED FURTHER, that the board meet at the Commissioners' room in the Court House in the City of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, on the 13th day of August, A. D. 1913 at 10 o'clock A. M., to open and consider bids for the sale of said bonds, and that the Auditor be and he is hereby instructed to cause a notice of the time, place and object of said meeting to be duly published two weeks in the Red Lake Falls Gazette, and that at the time and place of said meeting this board negotiate the sale of said bonds.

Motion made, seconded and carried unanimously that the board adjourn until the 16th day of August, 1913, at 10 o'clock A. M.

By the Board,

ASK OPERATORS TO JOIN CONFERENCE

GOVERNOR OF MICHIGAN WOULD AID IN STRIKE ARBITRATION.

FIRST ARRESTS ARE MADE

Number, of Men Are Badly Beaten As a Result of the Resumption of Rioting in the Copper Country.

Calumet, Mich., July 31.—Operators of the Lake Superior copper mines have been asked officially whether they will send five of their number to Lansing to confer in Governor Ferris' office with five representatives of the striking miners.

General P. L. Abbey in command of the state troops here, so announced after receipt of a message from Governor Ferris to which the state executive intimated that he was willing to use his good offices in bringing order out of the industrial chaos which has kept 15,000 men idle for a week.

Slugging and Fighting.

The news of the governor's action followed reports of a serious fight between factions of miners near the Superior mine on the south range and of slugglings in various locations on the northern end of the strike zone. The initial arrests of the strike resulted from the Superior fight in which two men of a party of ten men were so badly beaten that there is little hope for their recovery.

Fears of Superior mine strikers that men from Atlantic were seeking to replace them caused the outbreak. Ten men from the latter location had been driven three miles to Superior and inquired about the prospects of a resumption of underground work. On their way back they were set upon by three converging parties of Superior men and a free for all fight with clubs, stones and fists resumed. Seven of the visitors escaped, but two of the others were seriously cut and the third was beaten into insensibility.

Recognize Leaders.

The Atlantic men said they recognized all of their assailants, and warrants were sworn out for them. The prisoners were taken to the county jail a few hours later by sheriff's deputies.

At North Kearsarge mine Goat Olson, a powerful Finnish, was keeping on his way home from work and resented any interference. Olson knocked out four of his opponents, but succumbed to force of numbers. A squad of militia closed the striking party but made no arrests.

Further south there were numerous fights, especially about the Mohawk location where ten men had been conferring with the mine management were set upon as they left the mine office. None of them, however, was seriously injured, but additional troops were sent that place by General Abbey. Starting of pumps in the Superior and Hecla conglomerate properties of Calumet was accomplished yesterday under a heavy guard of Detroit infantrymen and troopers.

Inspection of the underground workings by shaft bosses continued this afternoon but a considerable task must be accomplished to freshen the levels from water.

Shaft Has Effect.

The visit of C. E. Mahoney, vice president of the Western Federation of Miners to Governor Ferris was credited with causing the state executive's telegram to take a hand in the situation by speakers at union meetings in Ahmeek and Calumet last night. The union leaders considered that they won a vast victory and were correspondingly jubilant.

Nine owners were coo-committed as to their right to the proposal, holding that they would consider it improper to consider action until after it had they had talked with General Abbey.

DEMOCRATS FOOL MULHALL

WITNESS SAYS HE EXPECTED SUCCESS WITH THEM.

Senator Lodge, Caulea Statements—Declares He Never Heard of the Man—Secret Capitol Room.

Washington, July 30—Morris M. Mulhall sat on the witness stand before the house lobby committee and listened to another senator deny his statements. Senator Lodge, mentioned as one of the many with whom the former "lobbyist" for the National Association of Manufacturers had held political conferences declared he did not know the witness and had never heard of him until the present investigation began.

Mulhall correspondence brought him into the year 1911, when the house became Democratic. In many of the letters that year he spoke of interviews with Majority Leader Underwood, Mr. Gompers, secretary of labor in President Wilson's cabinet, then chairman of the house labor committee; James T. Lloyd of the First Missouri district, chairman of the Democratic congressional committee, and other prominent men.

He wrote in the strain he used all through his letters to J. P. Bird, the general manager of the Associations and other officials, of boxing men opposite to committees, or preventing legislation, and of generally having much to do with the operations of govern ment in Washington.

His mentioned in several letters with assurances that he expected to have seven greater success with the Democratic house than he boasted he had in the days of Republican rule, but, questioned by the committee, said he had been too optimistic in his prophesy.

Mulhall took up his relations with Representative J. T. McDermott of Illinois and I. H. McMichael, at one time chief page of the house and confidential secretary to the representative. He identified what he said was a receipt for $500 given him by McMichael for services in Sept. and Oct., 1911, and reiterated that McDermott borrowed money from him which he never paid back.

Senator Reed became deeply interested in talk about a secret society which Mulhall said McDermott secured for his use on the lower floor of the house in front of one door on the house side. He described that as quite a mysterious place and the committee will inspect it later.

MEXICAN SHIP IS DESTROYED

It was said that Aviator Didier Masson made three flights over the harbor before he succeeded in hitting the boat.

Mosquitoes Stampede Church.

Superior, Wis., July 30.—The congregation of the First Baptist church was thrown into confusion by mosquitoes at evening services.

Firing Resumed in Shanghai.

Shanghai, July 30.—After two nights of quiet, firing was resumed here. Shells burst over the bandstand in the park settlement and a Portuguese boy received mortal injuries while other foreigners had narrow escapes. It is suspected that the rebels are deliberately turning their guns on foreigners in revenge for the Shanghai volunteers having disarmed some rebel officers at Chapei Saturday. Panic prevails among the Chinese, crowds of whom are seeking refuge.

Auto Runs Off Ferry Boat.

Montreal, July 28.—Two women were drowned in the St. Lawrence river when an automobile in which they were sitting ran off the deck of the ferry steamer South and plunged into the river. Mrs. Charles Merri ack, 28 years old, of this city, and Mrs. J. Cheyne, 26 years old, of St. Henry, were the victims. The ferry steamer was in the middle of the river when the machine in which the woman had remained, started suddenly, crashed through the gangway and plunged into the river.

RAPID PROGRESS OF TARIFF BILL

REPUBLICANS SEE FUTILITY OF OBSTRUCTION AND HELP IT ALONG.

DEMOCRATS ARE SURPRISED

Senators La Follette and Smoot Still to Make Main Protection Argument—Lobby Hearing on Again.

Washington, July 29.—Rapid progress has been made on the tariff bill in the senate, and the president and his congressional advisers have been encouraged at the prospect of the passage of the measure much earlier than had been expected. Republican senators, defeated at every turn in their efforts to amend the bill, have given away no secret of their proposed opposition and the Democrats propose to push the voting bill rapidly this week.

The tariff bill has gone through its early stages in the senate with unexpected rapidity. Few members have made general tariff speeches, and it is believed the debate will be meager during the next two or three weeks. The chemical schedule was practically completed Saturday; its wortwenning tariff has now been taken up with Senator Stone in charge of the debate.

Interest in the revision has flagged throughout the past week, and indications point to less Republican opposition as the bill progresses. Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, began the debate. He has employed two experts for many weeks in preparing schedules for many schedules. When these are offered, Democrats say, it is expected to lead a hard fight for their adoption; and Democratic leaders are looking forward to the phase of the debate as most likely to cause delay.

Senators La Follette and Smoot both will offer substitutes for the Democratic cotton tariff. A concerted effort is to be made on the Republican side, it was said, to keep Democratic ranks on the free wool issue, but Democratic leaders insist that their woolen tariff will go through by a safe margin without change.

Island Bill Up In Senate.

Congress is "standing by" on the Mexican situation, awaiting for an outcome of negotiations now going on in the executive departments, before forta attempting to formulate any definite expression as to a Mexican policy.

The president has encountered further opposition to his senate bill of appointments. Several of his diplomatic appointments will be confirmed, he is fight is being made against several minor appointments. Action by Democrats in the damen have now reject an issue over Adam E. Patterson, the negro recently nominated for register of the treasury. Senator Vardaman has declared he will oppose the confirmation of Patterson.

Prisoner Freed; Heir to $40,000.

Vancouver, Wash., July 30.—Hans A. P. Johnson, of Arco, Minn., is a happy man though he still must remain in the county jail for entering the home of the receiver of the U. S. land office Saturday. He bought a bed and to steel anything. He is happy because the heir to $40,000 is himself in Johnson's case found that he had been missing from his home for 22 days and that he is heir to $40,000. He will be sent back to his Lincoln county, Minn., home soon, the money having advanced money for fare.

Negro Is Black Hand Suspect.

Iola, Kan., July 29.—Police discredit a mysterious "black hand" case that has stirred the Western part of the state for months past; believed by officers to have been solved when J. C. Bowen, a negro, was arrested and placed in jail.

Train Hits Auto; Two Killed.

Detroit, Mich., July 29.—Dr. Frank M. Singer and Walter J. Pohl, both of Detroit, were killed when their automobile was struck by a Lake Shore passenger train.

TRUCE REQUEST IS IGNORED

KING CONSTANTINE'S ARMY PRESSES BULGARS HARD.

Turks Reported Re-Occupying Thrace and Massacring the Inhabitants.

London, July 29.—The Balkan peace conference is supposed to open at Bucharest Wednesday, but meantime serious fighting continues.

The Greeks refused Bulgaria's request for even a three-days' truce, and, when heavy fighting have also through Kyrasa pass, inflicting a defeat on the Bulgarians at Simakieu, capturing three siege guns and driving the Bulgarians back on Drama.

The Greeks claim they annihilated the whole left of the Bulgarian army and that they have forced the Bulgarians back along the Struma valley, drove up to Rupsa on the Bulgarian frontier. Unless peace speedily is negotiated another great battle is likely to occur at Struma.

No news was received of fighting in the Lake Doiran sector, but the large numbers of wounded men arriving in Saloniki indicate that severe actions are taking place.

The Mace Appalling Atrocities.

Constantinople. — Trustworthy reports of appalling massacres and devastation by Turkish irregular troops come from districts in Thrace which have been recently occupied.

The country about Malgara, northwest of Rodosto, according to reports, has been converted into a human slaughterhouse.

The Bulgarians pillaged and burned the Moslem villages and massacred the inhabitants, and now the Turks are wreaking dreadful vengeance on the Christian villages which the Bulgarians spared.

Iowan Tells of War Horrors.

London, July 30—Former United States Senator Jonathan Young of Iowa arrived here from the Servian army headquarters at Nish. He said he was glad to reach here and to be able to dine in a hotel after weeks spent in the trenches. Numerous United States consul at Belgrade, in the war zone, traveling in freight cars, sleeping on the ground because of a lack of train and eating black bread. Mr. Young said that from the number of wounded men he saw, the war in the Balkans must be the most brutal ever fought.

Diver's Life is Forfeited.

St. Louis, Mo., July 30.—Within the view of hundreds of spectators, Oscar E. Stuber, a professional diver, leaped from the center span of the unfinished free bridge into the Mississippi river and was drowned. His body never reappeared after the 150-foot plunge. On shore were the heads of the St. Louis Rowing club and the Missouri naval reserves and, it was said, a dozen girls whose friends-that had come to witness a swimming match in which the diver was a certain raiser.

Armistice Is Declared.

London, July 29.—The Morning Post's Shanghai correspondent says the Red Cross society, bee arranged an armistice until July 31 between forces of the rebels which probably will last eight days.

Democratic Currency Caucus.

Washington, July 30.—Democrats of the house banking and currency committee met in caucus for more than two weeks more of wrangling over the administration currency bill. After a long discussion of argument at which various plans for disposing of the measure were discussed, the Democratic committee members voted to authorize the chairman to "ask for a caucus of the party to be called on August 11 to act upon such a report on the pending currency bill as will then be made."

Republican Senators Divided.

Washington, July 31.—Political differences in the ranks of Republican senators over the tariff division fight became apparent when nearly a dozen Progressive Republicans began a series of conferences to perfect schedules which later that will be offered to the tariff bill under the leadership of Senators La Follette and Cummins. The Progressive Republican move has grown out of the belief of leading senators that they would be unable to support Senator Smoot's substitute for the Underwood-Simmons cotton

MEXICAN FACTS ARE BEFORE OFFICIALS

FOUR PLANS TO SETTLE MEXICAN WAR PROPOSED BY SOME.

AD POLICY IS ANNDUNCED YET

Neither President Wilson Nor Secretary Bryan Have Made Statements as to the Senae of the Federal Government.

Washington, July 31.—President Wilson and Secretary Bryan devoted themselves to a study of the voluminous reports at their disposal on conditions in Mexico. Indications are that with the appearance before the senate committee on foreign relations of Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson, the last stage in the program of the administration to discover the facts of the situation before announcing a policy has been reached.

While a resolution in the house calls for a joint committee to obtain documents in the Huerta situation and another in the senate sought the opinion of that body on the question of recognition the belligerency of the constitutionalists, administration officials again declared that there would be no haste in formulating a definite policy toward Mexico.

Situation Not Thought Acute.

Secretary Bryan stated that no proposition for mediation had been submitted to either of the two factions in Mexico, and incidentally remarked that he might go back to the senate platform in a few days. The present condition of affairs is not considered acute here.

The development of a policy by the United States may be delayed to observe the outcome of efforts being made by leading Mexicans to bring about an understanding between the two warring sides.

Some administration officials have proposed that the American policy be pursued along a succession of alternatives:

First—They suggest the United States refrain from further interference while the Mexican leaders themselves endeavor to compose their differences, on the grounds of the United States against recognizing the Huerta administration already is being outlined in Mexico, according to reports here, as implying that the abdication of Huerta in favor of a compromise provisional president is inevitable.

Would Mean Decisive Result.

Second—Should all efforts by the factions to adjust the disputes fail, it is proposed by influential members of the senate and the embargo on arms be lifted and the two fortions be permitted to obtain munitions of war on an equal basis. Some senators frouly predict a decisive result in quick time under these circumstances.

Third—Should pleas be delayed the suggestion is that the United States offer to mediate through a commission.

Fourth—As a last resort, it is suggested that a tripartite commission, composed representatives of the United States and Latin American nations could intervene to adjust

The following, who was given a different name every time he was asked, stole an automobile and drove a horse at Silles, rode from there to Canada prairie and back to Gooding. He then returned to Silles via the shearing sheds in the mountains where he was raised calm generally.

Constable Pinkham of Silles, noticing that he answered the description of the man wanted, arrested him and took him to Silles where he was held on Sheriff Silles at Gooding. While phoning for information Pinkham and Silles pursued took a shot at Pinkham with pie rifle, of which the constable had no notice to refrain from firing.

Pinkham abandoned the chase and nothing was done till Sheriff Silles got up the trail. He tracked the man by means of an odds' saddle horseshoes and followed him nearly to Gooding, then north over the Sawtooth Mountains and up Willow Creek. The forest rangers were notified to watch for the man and horse and when he drove up at Galena he was invited to stay all night.

It was his intention to do so until a second ranger appeared on the scene, but when he attempted to leave the invitation was repeated at the point of a revolver. The sheriff arrived half an hour later.

NEW FEDERAL WEATHER MAN

Marvin, Chief of Instrument Division, Promoted to Head of the Department.

Washington, July 31.—Professor Charles F. Marvin, in charge instrument division, has been selected for chief of the weather bureau to succeed Willis L. Moore, resigned, it was announced. Professor Marvin is now chief of the instrument division. He was appointed to the old signal service in 1884 from Ohio.

Under the new chief more attention will be paid to weather reports and forecasts for the use of air flights to affect agriculture and general farming conditions throughout the country.

Autoist Draws Cell Sentence.

Minneapolis. — Charles Quist, 2121 Fifth street south, whose automobile struck and seriously injured Mrs. John Hrkal, 619 Erie street southeast, was sentenced in municipal court to three days in the workhouse and a technical charge against him was before the court. He was given a stay of execution of sentence until Aug. 6 in which to make an appeal.

Tacoma, Wash., July 31.—Two earthquake shocks covering an area of more than a hundred square miles shook Mount Ranier and surrounding territory.

PRIZED RELIC OF COLUMBUS.

Ancient Celba Tree Which Sheltered Him on His First Voyage of Discovery.

Santo Domingo City.—On the river bank at Santo Domingo City, capital of the Dominican Republic, below the ruined city wall stands the ancient Celba tree to which Christopher Columbus tied his weather-beaged and sinking caravels when he sought refuge in the river on his first voyage of discovery. This tree, already more then a century old when the adventurer landed, hasbeen installed in bark a leaden plate inscribed and placed there by Columbus, claiming the country for the king of Spain. On the bolpha shows is the venerable ruins of the Casa de Colon, the first building of European construction in the western hemisphere. The giant Celba is regarded with reverence by the natives and is protected under a special act of the Dominican congress. It was known to the Indians as the "cocoanut tree" and its fruit made the Spanish conquerors signed the summer oaf treaties with the then powerful tribes of La Isabela, which were always violated at the first opportunity by the Spaniards. Of these aboriginal inhabitants little is known, as they were practically exterminated during the 300 or more years of Spanish domination. Within the great bottomed trunk of the Celba, hollow now with age, there is room for half a dozen persons to stand erect. Each year the tree is carefully inspected for signs of disease or decay and the south windward side is protect the bark from insect pests.

LONG CHASE AFTER BAD MAN

Bold Horse Thief and Highwayman Not Trouble Idaho

Gooding, Idaho—The horse thief and stickup man that has been making free with the peace of three counties, a desperado and a menace to a ranger station about thirty-five miles north of Ketchum.

The fellow, who was given a different name every time he was asked, stole an automobile and drove a horse at Silles, rode from there to Canada prairie and back to Gooding. He then returned to Silles via the shearing sheds in the mountains where he was raised calm generally.

Constable Pinkham of Silles, noticing that he answered the description of the man wanted, arrested him and took him to Silles where he was held on Sheriff Silles at Gooding. TOWN HAS FAMINE IN WOMEN

Only One of the Fair Sex to Every Two Men in Edmonton, Canada.

Edmonton, Alberta.—Thomas Walker, city assessor, says in an official report submitted to Mayor William Short and the council that the city census just completed shows a population May 1, as compared with 59,611 on census just completed above a population of 67,342 in the city proper on June 1, 1912, an increase in population by 25 per cent.

The last previous census, taken in 1911, gave Edmonton and Strathcona, shw merged, a total population of 39,462, and Walker says that the census just challenged at the time as being too low.

Analysis of the figures for 1912 shows there are 18,640 males and 15,-929 females over twenty-one years of age; 10,991 males and 10,869 females under twenty-one years of age; 1,-645 and 2,691 unclassified.

Canary Bird a "Wild Beast."

New York.—Magistrate MacAdoo classed a canary with "wild beasts" when he told Jacob Sandrack that no one can legally claim ownership to a wild bird or animal at large. Sandrack applied for a permit to search the rooms of a neighbor who refused to return the bird when it flew into the latter's apartment.

MINNESOTA CROPS IN TIP-TOP SHAPE

SUFFICIENT MOISTURE FOR CORN AND POTATOES AND CRAINS EXCELLENT.

RYE AND BARLEY HARVESTED

Wheat Threshing Begins In Some Sections — Rochester Reports Prospects for Bumper Corn Crop—Fields on "Jump."

Minneapolis.—The reports from Minnesota indicate an abundance of moisture and the feeling prevails that more rain now will do harm rather than good, as it will damage the ripe grain more than it will benefit potatoes and corn for the next few weeks. Weather conditions have been favorable for proper maturing of the grain, and only one section reports a need of more rainfall to stock the crops through, the reports say.

Mankato Threshing Wheat.

Mankato.—Threshing has been commenced and the first report to be received is from Medford Lake, where Frank Pennock marketed some new winter wheat. It went twenty-seven bushels to the acre and was of better quality than last year's product.

Wheat Turning Color.

Fergus Falls.—The rye and barley harvest is now well in hand, and wheat is beginning to turn color to a great extent. The present outlook is that the crop will be very much better than it appeared in June, and that there will be a very fair yield. Corn continues to make great progress and some of it is now tasseled out. The hay crop has suffered seriously from rain, much of the tame hay being seriously damaged as there has been no weather to dry it after it was cut, and it has spoiled in the fields.

Pipestone Crop Good.

Pipestone.—The harvest of barley and rye has been commenced in Pipestone county and proves that the crop will be one of the heaviest ever gathered here. Weather conditions have been very favorable for all small grains as well as for corn the past few days.

Bumper Corn Crop Expected.

Rochester.—Farmers in this section of the state are looking forward to a bumper corn crop this year, many predicting the largest yield and the best grade of corn ever raised in the history of corn growing in the state. The hot, muggy weather of the past opportune times have made the corn grow by jumps.

Grain is Well Filled.

Albert Lea.—Harvest progressed finely in Freeborn, Mower and Steele counties, all of the rye, most of the barley and a considerable part of the oats being cut at this time. Where most of the rye and much of the barley is already stacked.

All reports are that the grain has filled exceptionally well this year and a few days of favorable weather will make an excellent quality on well as quantity of the wheat in this part of the state. Wheat cutting this week and the next forenoon will see all the small grain in this vicinity cut and most of it stacked and very likely some of it threshed. Corn continues to boom and most of the hill corn is tasseled and very much of it silked with every promise of an excellent yield.

FARMERS' LOAN ASSOCIATION

Mass Meeting in Minnesota Town to Perfect Formation of Agricultural Credits.

Bemidji, Minn., July 28.—Farmers from every direction flocked into the city to attend the mass meeting held for the purpose of organizing a farmers' co-operative land improvement association to Beltrami county. State Immigration Commissioner Fred Sherman, A. McClure, superintendent of the state experimental farm at Grand Rapids, and C. W. Mudgett, secretary of the Northern Minnesota Development association, delivered addresses.

Clearing land and securing loans for buying cattle for the farmers were the two important propositions discussed. Special seating arrangements were necessary in order to handle the crowd at the city hall.

Bucket Brigade Saves Town.

Prosper.—Three hundred men with buckets, from all of the surrounding town, saved this village from destruction when a fire, starting in a lumber yard, threatened to sweep the single street. The fire started in a barn where a traveler had been smoking in the haymow. Half a dozen buildings were burned at a loss of $10,000.

Gypsies May Have Child.

St. Paul.—Simultaneously with a dispatch from Fond du Lac saying that gypsies that circulated the shores of Lake Winnebago several days ago, bound northward here, and took them a white child that Mrs. W. F. McGowan of that city believed, from the little one's appearance might be Kathrine Winters, the infant daughter of Mrs. W. A. Winters of Muncleville, Ind., it was reported to the St. Paul police that gypsies passed westward along Cherokee avenue having with them a little fair-haired girl.

Boy Dies From Lockjaw.

Mankato.—As a result of running a splinter under the nail of one of his fingers about ten days ago, William Saenger, the 5-year-old son of J. B. Saenger, died in a local hospital of lockjaw. The parents removed the splinter and the finger apparently got well, but last Saturday it became sore again and a physician was called, and the next day the lad was taken to a hospital, where the finger was operated on and the nail and all the wood was removed. The effort proved futile, however,

AN EXCITING FINISH ON THE MINNESOTA STATE FAIR TRACK

While the most attention is given to the harness horses that will perform during the first five days of the Minnesota State Fair, the gallopers have not been forgotten. There is a thrill about a running race that the old followers of the game claim cannot be produced by any other sporting event in the world. The Minnesota State Fair managers recognize this fact, and this year will give their patrons some unusually high class sport along this line.

RANIER MAYOR IS INDICTED

Held With Another on Manslaughter Charge—Court Charges Made By Grand Jury.

International Falls.—The special grand jury adjourned quite tat Saturday, twelve indictments being returned. James Kelly and Mayor Edward Ek of Ranier were indicted on the charge of manslaughter for the death of Fred J. Couture of Ranier who was slugged on the night of July 12 and died a week later. He was assaulted, it is said, because he made complaint before the regular grand jury about the saloons running unlawfully. All the ele ven saloonkeepers at Ranier, four proprietors of resorts and a man up the river from Ranier also were indicted.

Senator Brower of Moorhead and J. C. Nethaway of the attorney general's office will assist County Attorney Jevne in the Prosecution. Former Judge Spooner and Attorney W. V. Bench have been retained by the defease.

PRISON-MADE TWINE SALES

Minnesota State Prison Disposes of 18,000,000 Pounds Despite High Price.

Stillwater.—Twine sales at the Minnesota state prison for the year 1912 eclipse all former years, the sales aggregating a trifle less than 18,000,000 pounds, notwithstanding that prices for this year's product were in advance of those for years by reason of an advance in the cost of raw material.

All twine has been shipped and the twine now being made is for local orders and small out orders to be filled at only a short distance.

The farm machinery business has also been on a larger scale than formerly and every machine has been sold except a few mowers and a few ultra-limited binders. The farm machinery business will exceed $1,500,000.

Pioneer Buried at Shakopee.

Shakopee.—John McGovern, Sr., who had he lived until Aug. 15, would have been eighty-four years old, died in St. Margaret's cemetery. Mr. McGovern was the oldest pioneer of this community and one of the oldest in the state. He was born in County Latrim, Ireland, Aug. 15, 1813. He came to America in 1845 and lived at Pennsylvania for a year before coming to Shakopee, where he has resided since then. In the early days of the history of the state, Mr. McGovern' experiences were perilous and underwent many privations. At that time it was necessary to do all trading and purchasing of provisions from the distant settlements of Mendota and St. Paul. Going being the only means of travel, progress over the trails was tedious and difficult.

Mutilated Body of Laborer Found.

Duluth.—The death of Stephano Asbed, aged 40, a laborer employed here, was found under a viaduct here with his throat terribly cut. The coroner has left a mystery. Chief of Police Troyer and Dr. C. F. McComas, coroner are unable to decide between murder and suicide, because of a mass of contradictory evidence. Asbed's mutilated heart was pierced four times. This leads Dr. McComas to believe that Asbed was murdered. "I do not think any man could subject himself to the ordeal of four self-inflicted stabs through the heart," said, Dr. McComas, "and I believe it is murder."

Delano Party Run to St. Cloud.

St. Cloud.—Forty-three automobiles from Delano motored here Monday and, after partaking of lunch and visiting points of interest, returned home by the most direct route possible. Then it was one of the largest tours that has visited here, there being 200 in the party. They carried their own lunch and picked at towns along the route. The autoists left home at 9 a. m. and arrived at 1 p. m. They left here at 5 p. m.

Elk River Pioneer Succumbs.

Elk River.—J. G. Coy, pioneer farmer of this section, died after a long trouble after many weeks of illness. He had resided here about forty-three years. He was born in Main, in 1841, and is survived by his wife and three children, Mrs. C. E. Cooley of St. Paul, Mrs. C. F. Carlson of Minneapolis, and Raymond H. Coy, professor in East High school, Minneapolis. The funeral was held Sunday in charge of the Masonic lodge of Elk River.

Virginia Canalist Drowns.

Eveleth.—Miss Annie Kron, 22 years old, of Virginia, was drowned late Sunday in Sky lake when the canoe in which she was riding was capsized. She was a member of a canoe party of four occupying four canoes. She attempted to change seats and fell into the lake. Her companion attempted to save her and grasped at her head as she was sinking. She was wearing a hat and this prevented securing a hold on her hair and she sank in three feet of water.

SLASHES THROAT OF WOMAN

Ex-Convict Then Turns the Knife on Self.

Stillwater.—Harry Mitchell, who is an ex-convict, made a very desperate effort to kill Mrs. Joseph Armstrong, of Oak Park, a suburb of this city, and the only reason he failed was because of the dullness of the pocket knife with which he made the effort.

According to the story of witnesses, Mitchell, who was said to be in love with Mrs. Armstrong, went there and attempted to see her. Her father at that time ordered him from the house. He returned later and again asked for Mrs. Armstrong. Being told that she was not in, he started to kick in the door of the residence, and when she ran from the house, he pursued her.

Overtaking her, he grasped her, pulled his pocket knife from his pocket and slashed her across the throat. He inflicted two long wounds on each side, but apparently did not touch a vital spot. He then pushed his own throat in several places.

PREFERS THE ATTIRE OF MEN

Toledo Woman Dressed as Boy Scout Encircles the Globe Afoot With Her Husband.

Winona.—"I know that a great many people are shocked at my appearance in this uniform, but to my mind it is much more sensible than the dresses, especially the present boy skirts," said Gertrude Lee Yost, of Toledo, O., who, accompanied by her husband, walked into Winona on their trip around the world. She is attired in the khaki suit of a boy scout and is wholesome tan from exposure to the elements.

"I don't know how I'll ever go back to the ridiculous frills by which women doll themselves," she continued. "And I don't think the sheath is half as vulgar as the rige women are wearing today according to fashion."

Male attire and long walks, she said, is the best tonic for women.

Melby Sink Hole Interminable.

Fergus Falls.—The Great Northern is having a great deal of difficulty with a sink hole that has developed near Melby; about twenty-five miles southeast of this city. The hole is three to fifteen feet deep and as it can be poured into it. There is quite a grade at the point in question and the ground underneath it has softened as a result of the drenching rains of recent weeks. Monday night the track began to sink and trains on this division had to be sent around by way of Breckenridge. Several work trains were hauling to the scene and gravel was poured in, but to no avail.

Retailers Choose Minneapolis.

St. Cloud.—The semi-annual meeting of the Minnesota Retail Monumental Dealers' association was held at the Commercial club rooms at about fifty out-of-town dealers were present. It was decided to hold the next convention be held in Minneapolis, about the middle of January, the dates to be set later. Plans are being made for the national convention which will be held in Boston, August 19 to 29. Three delegates will go from this state, these being Leonard Eckes of Minneapolis, E. Haertell of Fairmont, and J. H. Anderson of Austin.

Circuit Employes Assault Girl.

St. Paul, July 26.—Serious charges will be brought by the state against eight employees of a circus which visited St. Paul on the occasion of Melha Shrenas, 16 years old, 609 Girard avenue. The girl involves the eight men in a story given the police. Policeman C. H. Riley, on duty at the circus grounds was summoned by the wife of the young girl about 8:30 p. m. His informant, a colored maid, told him to e spot thirty rods south of the circus tents where he found the girl about eight men surrounding the girl who was screaming for aid.

Judge Proves Easy Prey.

Minneapolis.—Benton S. Spangenberger, of Cincinnati, who is judge of the Ohio Superior court, was by the name of having sent "over the road" for as many days as any judge in the United States, fell easy prey to a bloodthirsty pickpocket on a street car going to Lake Harriet. He was robbed of $90 in cash, his railroad ticket back to Cincinnati, his banquet check for a suitcase, and some valuable papers. "I thought I was going to like Minneapolis," said he, "but dog-on, I am going back home." He went.

Steps From Car; Run Down.

Minneapolis.—Mrs. John Hawskal, living at 919 Erie street southeast, was probably fatally injured when she was run down by an automobile driven by Charles Oviatt, 2181 Fifth street south, at Washington and Fourteenth avenue south, Mrs. Hawskal stepped from an eastbound Interurban street car directly in front of the automobile, which, according to witnesses, failed to observe the traffic ordinance in stopping twenty feet from a street car with other cars open. It was also traveling at an excessive speed

VARYING IDEAS FOR BATHING COSTUMES

Marquise Lapels made of pink charmeuse with skirt veiled by white lace. White corset yoke.

Give Him the Hide Then.

Among conditions that attach to the bathing garments very much in vogue at American and Parisian seaside resorts. The American costume on the left is of white silk with sandals to match and headgear of the same color. The Parisian garment, on the right, is of white taffeta trimmed with broad silk braid of the same color, and cap to match.

FIVE-MINUTE SCALP MASSAGE

Persevered In, This Treatment Will Bring Best Results and Hair, Will Not Become Oily.

If your scalp is dry and shows dandruff, get a bottle of ordinary red vaseline. Put a very little of the vaseline on the tip of each finger of your head; then rub the tips of the fingers of the other hand against these that have vaseline on them. There should appear not even a slight oiliness of all the finger tips. Next place the finger tips upon the scalp at the edge of the hair, one hand on either side of the head. It does not matter much whether you start at the nape of the neck, or on the forehead, but wherever you do start, let the hands be an even distance apart. For instance, place one in back of each ear. Once started run the finger tips above each temple, slowly and gently forward, until they meet at the crown of the head; then draw them back to the starting point in the same manner. Repeat this operation until the finger tips become dry, when more vaseline should be applied to them. By means of the five minute massage more vaseline is rubbed into the scalp than one realizes, and it is well combined thereby.

If the massage is properly carried out, that is to say, always started at the hair line, and little vaseline used, the hair will not become disfigured as a result.

LATE PARISIAN MODEL

IMPROVING SKIN OF THROAT

Just a Few Minutes Each Day, With Proper Applications, Will Accomplish Wonders.

If the skin of the throat is loose and baggy, dip the tips of your fingers in alcohol, massage from the throat upward toward the chin, and then from the throat downward toward the chest. Do this two or three half minutes and the remaining two and a half minutes with a pure skin food along the same lines. You will find that alcohol is absorbed rapidly, and that the skin food is applied quickly after. It, too, will sink quickly in. When finished give the throat a few dashes of cold water and pat dry.

Now, if you wish the best results, do not put off starting this massage until you are badly in need of the treatment, for then five minutes will hardly suffice. Start right in now and make a five-minute massage a part of your daily toilet. Keep it up and in time you cannot help but notice a decided change in your skin. Even skin you may not deem worth while, but it will surely help to retain the beauty you do possess; besides keeping in existence the many treasures whom beauty has smiled back the smile.

Draped Lace Tunics.

Although perhaps the lace tunic has its following, it has its center in the compensating merits which recommend it to women of middle age and even younger women who have a tendency to stoutness. For the close-fitting pointed tunic of black lace cut with the upper part in the form of a coat tends to take off figure. One look often in a manner that many, alas! find entirely desirable as years come fast upon them.

The favorite lace employed is Chantilly, and what a wonderful web it is! drape artistically, nothing can be more elegant. On the contrary, nothing can be dowdier than a drapery which fails to be artistic—and falls lumpy, lady, in the attempt.

Wash Silk Petticoats.

Wash silk petticoats are a useful addition to any wardrobe, be it limited or not. They are made of somewhat heavy silk. Silk and linen, so-called tub silk, is almost as durable as heavy all-silk material and is more durable by far than cotton. Then there is the soft-finished taffeta silk, which is the most beautiful of all silk petticoats. They can be worn with any light silked costumes. One of violet, green or blue in stripes could be worn with fish, green or violet taffeta silk, which are
